ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we bend the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes nffecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

LOOK AT IT

this way. If my goods were not all that I claim for them, I could not afford to advertise them, as publicity would do me harm, not good. But to prove to you that without doubt my goods are as advertised, I send them on approval at my own risk, either on receipt of cash or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, and refund money in full if you are not perfectly satisfied with them after trial. I have no unmentioned conditions or restrictions whatever. If after a trial of my goods you find them not suitable to you from any cause, you simply return them and back comes every penny of your money, and the transaction is ended. Clap nets, made from ¾in. genuine thread netting, 3 yards long, 5½ft. deep, and 4ft. fly, 4/- pair; 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair, all guaranteed full measurement; 5½ft. deep and 4ft. fly. Clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and all are fitted complete with stave, pules, pegs, lines, and everything complete ready for immediate use. Scores of other sizes in stock. Lark nets, 15 yards long, 10ft. deep, 12/-; ditto, 18 yards long, 15/-; ditto, 25 yards long, 21/-; ditto 30 yards long, 24/-. Bat folding Sparrow nets, fitted on 15ft. bamboo poles, 5/6 pair; ditto on 17ft. poles, 6/- pair; ditto 19ft. poles, 6/6 pair, complete. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/- each; ditto, 18 inches long, 9d. each. These net traps are entirely different to the old-fashioned board traps. They can be baited for Hardbills and Softbills at same time, and a call bird can be used inside them if required. Will catch and hold any bird from Wren to Rook, and are by far the largest and most effective traps on the market; eight dozen sold retail during the past 14 days. Single trap cages 6d. each, double ditto 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages warranted to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each. Real Japanese birdlime. This is the genuine Japanese and strongest on the market, guaranteed to catch and hold any Hawk that flies, any weather, rain or shine; imitators may copy name of my lime, but they cannot copy quality. ¼lb. 6d., ½lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6; sample 3d. post free. Loose netting, specially made from genuine thread for bird netting, not thick American cottun fishing netting; ¾in. mesh, 7ft. deep, 3d. yard; ditto, 9ft. deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12ft. deep, 5d. yard. Lark netting, 1½in. mesh, 10ft. deep, 4d. yard; all post free. Absolutely everything required for successful catching kept in stock; send stamp for full printed list. See following few letters:—"Cransby Hall, Kettering, Sept. 24th. Sir,—Please send following. I am pleased to say trap cages are very satisfactury.—Yours, M. Lloyd." "Mount Pleasant, Newburgh, Fife, Sept. 21st. Sir,—Please send ½lb. lime. I was well pleased with that I had last year.—Yuurs, J. Panton." "Brinsley Moor, nr. Eastwuod. Sept. 17th. Sir,—Please send pair clap nets. I hnd some lime from you last year nnd it was best I ever had.—Yours, C. Hewes," "Chaple-street, Dunmore, Sept. 18th. Sir,—The lime I had last year from you was good stuff; it would stand the cold well, as well as any amount of heat.—Yours, M. Patton." "36, New-street, Grantham. Sept. 14th. Sir,—Please send following netting. That I had last was very good.—Yours, T. Winfield." "14, West-street, Hucknall, Torkard. Sept. 14th. Sir,—Please send pair clap nets. I have tried other firms' nets, nnd they have been almost rotten.—Yours, A. Bailey." "Delhi-row, Pelsall, Sept. 17th. Sir,—Received netting safely and am very pleased with it, as it made two excellent nets.—Yours, J. Fallun." "Near Elm Tree, Blisworth, Sept. 27th. Sir,—Please send ½lb. bird lime. Your Japanese lime is the best I can get, bar nune.—Yours, J. Harris." "Gedney, Holbeach, Linca., Sept. 24th. Sir,—Plense send me a pair clap nets, 20 yards long. If you send me a pair as good as last pair, you will shortly get further orders from me. I know a mnn who is nsing a pair of your 20 yard nets, nnd he says they work beautifully.—Yours, C. Cubley." This letter is a wrinkle to nsers of long nets; it shows that if properly made, long nets will work as easy as short ones. Mr. Cubley is the well-known Linnet catcher of Lincolnshire, and he has said that netting supplied by me is as superior to other makers' stuff as refined gold is to copper. I gnarantee my nets to be absolutely fastest and quickest working nets extant, as all are properly geared or armed, not merely line run through the top of netting, and my pegs are also a vast improvement on the old-fashioned socket and staple. My men are not only practical net makers, but thoroughly experienced birdcatchers as well, and so know exactly what is required for successful catching. All the leading birdcatchers are using nets supplied by me, and will have no other. I invite anyone to have a pair of nets from me and a pair from elsewhere, and compare them side by side; the result will please me. Send stamp for full printed lists with hints on netmaking, etc.; prices will surprise you, as I believe in supplying a genuine article at a reasonable price. (Imitators please copy.) See British bird advertisement for further particulars. Kindly note name and address. No connection with any other advertiser.

is not a cure-all, neither is anything else, but it is what is claimed for it, namely, the most marvellous remedy for wheezing, and all lung affections ever known, and without any exaggeration whatever, thousands of testimonials have been received for this one remedy alone, one of the latest of which I here give, and ask for your close attention to same. "Bathcaston Vicarage, Bath, September 27th, 1909. I feel bound to write and tell you of the wonderful way in which your "Asthmarine" has cured a valuable Hartz Mountain Roller; he has had asthma for about two years, and has not sung for the last Twelve Months; on the second day after taking your "Asthmarine," he began to sing a little, and on the fourth was in full song. Mr. Rudd may make what use he likes of this."

"Asthmarine" is 9d. (ninepence) per bottle; large bottles, 2/6 post free.

Rudd's Norwich Tonic Drops are the best pick-me-up and "Finisher" to plumage that has yet been discovered, prices same as Asthmarine. Inflammation remedy also same prices.

ONLY A BLIND

man would think of buying anything before he saw it, so why should you buy birds before you see them and know they are satisfactory? My system of trading is this: I send everything on approval on receipt of cash or deposit system of this paper, at my own risk, and unless purchaser is perfectly satisfied and birds realise every expectation, he only has to return them and back comes the whole of his money promptly and cheerfully without question or comment. I was originator of approval system in connection with wild birds, and never have I traded under any other conditions. I make no idle boasts or false statements, but claim to be the largest dealer in Worcestershire birds in the world, and have more through my hands in one season than all others together. At present time I have considerably over two thousand British birds in stock, including about 50 dozen Goldfinches alone, and bear in mind these are on view at all times. Grand large Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, all in pink of health and condition, 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 7/-, twelve 12/-, six dozen 66/-, twelve dozen £5. Specially selected larger cocks, to moult for show or Muling, and guaranteed now in song, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-. Few extra special clean moulted cocks, in full colour and superb condition, fit for keen competition; 3/- each, three 7/6. Hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-, twelve 7/-, three dozen 18/-. Splendid lot cock brown Linnets, all clean moulted and perfect condition, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially selected larger cocks, fit for show, Muling, or contest singing, and now in free song, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-. Every Linnet I sell is guaranteed to have nut brown backs and rose-red breasts, and same as the hundreds of coutest winners I have supplied to fanciers of Lancashire, Yorkshire, Durham, London, etc., etc. I hold the record for cheap contest winners, having sold a cup winner for 4d. Grand lot cock Bullfinches, 1/6 each, three 4/-; specially selected cocks, 2/- each, three 5/-; few clean-moulted exhibition specimens, 2/6 each. Cock Chaffinches, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; exhibition specimens, 1/- each. Cock Greenfinches, 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6; exhibition specimens, 1/- each. Redpolls, 6d. each, three 1/3, six 2/-, twelve 3/6; exhibition specimens, 1/- each. Four hand-reared Grey-backed Shrikes or Butcher Birds, in perfect health and finger-tame, 6/- each. Grand lot cock Siskins, in pink of health and feather, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-. Specially selected exhibition specimens, 3/- each. Hen Siskins, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-. Cock Skylarks, in perfect feather, 9d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially selected cocks, very steady and in song, 1/6 and 2/- each. Young Canaries as bred, sex not guaranteed, 2/6 couple, 12/- dozen. Please note dates of following unsolicited letters: "3, Cemetery-street, Bilston, September 27th. Sir, —Received the three Goldfinches safely and they are splendid birds for the money. They are in pink of health and condition, and I am very pleased with the prompt manner you executed my order, and all future orders are yours.—Yours, W. Caron." "263, Battle-road, Hollington, September 25th. Sir,—Bullfinch arrived this morning in grand health (in place of one which died in transit). I might say the others are going on splendid and best value for money I ever had. Had I picked them out myself I could not have done better. You are the only one I have found that acts up to his advertisement.—Yours, Thos. Veness." "Clarbeston-road, Treffgarne, Sept. 27th. Sir,—Please send following. All birds received from you have given me perfect satisfaction. —Yours, Evan Jones." "71, Mahel-street, Motherwell, Sept. 27th. Sir,—Received birds safe, and am highly pleased with them, as they are fine healthy birds and getting on well. Please send following birds, as I find you a straightforward man.—Yours, J. Gibson." "9, Westfield, Larbert, Sept. 27th. Sir, —Please send following birds, as I was very successful with last Goldfinch I had from you, as I bred five good Mules from it.—Yours, D. Pearson." "5, Balaclava-road, Carnarvon, Sept. 25th. Sir,—Please send following. I have had many a good bird from you and can trust you, as you have always pleased me well.—Yours, R. Griffith." "28, B. Close, nr. Crook, Co. Durham, Sept. 23rd. Sir,—Please send three Linnets. I had one from you a while back and he is a real good keen singer.—Yours, M. Brett." "14, Sea Wall, Skinningrove, Yorks, Sept. 17th. Sir,—Please send following. You have never yet disappointed me with your Linnets, and I have bought many a dozen from you.—Yours, C. Hart." On Sept. 27th Mr. Hart again writes: "Sir,—Received birds and am very well satisfied with them, and I must say you are a straightforward man. Please send two more Goldfinches, as other one is so steady as a rock." The above letters are entirely unsolicited and are open to inspection at any time. All birds are guaranteed exactly as represented and sex guaranteed. No fresh-caught rubbish sent, but all fat, healthy stock, well on hard seed. One trial solicited and I guarantee entire satisfaction or money refunded. See Appliance column for nets and cages, etc.

HARRY ALLEN. LONDON, SCOTLAND, Co. DURHAM AND SHEFFIELD.

I thank the above towns for their kind patronage this week. Look! Two hundred house-moulted Linnets, finger-tame, and very large birds, can win on the show bench, 10/6 upwards; Linnets, for contests, that can beat three score in two minutes, for full particulars please write. I am the only dealer in the world that can supply this class of bird. Linnets, singing grand, with good voices, with polished cage, and my new book of secrets, and a packet of my special mixture, 3/6. Look! Fierce-singing cock Linnets, with blood-red breasts, and extra loud voices, with cage, right for catching or contest singing, only 2/6. There is a great run on these birds, as they are so cheap. Linnets, taught by the champion Linnet of the world, will sing anywhere, only 1/6; a few specials, 2/-. Linnets, from the same place as the world's champion, only 1/-; the same as I have supplied most of the leading Linnet clubs of England. I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. All on seven days approval. My A1 specials can beat the world for steadiness, size, colour and markings, only 2/6; they are very large birds, and most beautifully pencilled, and as steady as rocks. Goldfinches, Goldfinches. Real English Peartree cock Goldfinches, the largest in England, with grand broad heads and beautiful scarlet blaze, with grand wing bars, richly tanned on breasts and beautifully buttoned, a credit to send out, 2/6, 3/6, and 4/-; a few, used to catching, singing hard, 4/- each; with new cage, 5/-. A most beautiful cock Yellowhammer, right for the show bench, can win, 2/6; others, 1/-; cock Greenfinches, like paint, right for the show bench, can win, 2/- and 2/6. Look, the finest cock Larks in England, singing daylight and gaslight, and as straight as arrows, and as steady as rocks, 1/- and 1/6; a few singing extra loud, 2/6; the finest Linnet whistles in England, 6d. each. My new book of secrets, which is the original, 9d. Please read what others say:—"30, The Gill, Ulverston.—Dear Sir,—Received bird safe, and it is quite satisfactory. —Yours truly, E. Dickenson to H. Allen. Knitsley Hill, nr. Consett.—Dear Sir,—I have received the bird all right, and I am highly pleased with it; it gives me every satisfaction.—Yours truly, D. Shaw to H. Allen. 23, Bogie-street, Huntly, N.B.—Dear Sir,—Birds safe to hand, and am well pleased with both. I shall instruct Editor to forward on your money. You may expect further orders from this quarter.—Yours faithfully, S. Dennison to H. Allen. Rose Cottage, Wrightington, nr. Wigan.—Dear Sir,—Received the cock Linnet safe, and it gives me every satisfaction. The other birds I got from you are doing champion. Thanking you for the way you have treated me.—Yours, etc., Jack Watson, to H. Allen. All my birds are on seven days approval. Cash or deposit. Only honest dealing done with me. For nearly 15 months I have not had one bird returned, which shows I give good honest value for the money. Proof, the Editor of this paper. Over 2,000 in stock. No waiting. Please state wants, and write with confidence to the largest British bird dealer in the world.—Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Oct. 2nd. There was a large turn-out of members, who reported a splendid lot of specials for the forthcoming show. The schedule was also considered satisfactory, and everything seems promising.—G. Havvsr, Hon. Sec.

MIDDLETON C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Sept. 27th, at Old Boar's Head. Mr. W. Bescoby was chairman. It was decided to change our Society's name from Middleton Ornithological Society to Middleton Cage Bird Society. We also appointed Mr. W. Hardy, of Oldham, and Mr. Croft, of Bradford, as judges at our annual open show, to be held December 4th. We have secured the patronage of the L. and L.F.A., also the L.C.A., and we are looking forward to having one of the best shows ever held in Middleton.—J. Oldham, Sec.

HULL C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting held October 4th, at Oddfellows' Hall, a large number of members being present. Previous to the ordinary business, a washing exhibition was given by Mr. Geo. Harland, who washed two birds supplied by Mr. Calam. After the washing, Mr. Harland asked if any of the novices present would like to try their hands, but no response being forthcoming Messrs. W. T. Pepper and Stamford, two champion members, gave a further exhibition, each washing one bird; thus three different styles of washing and handling birds were shown, which were greatly appreciated. Specials for open show were discussed, but as the special prize fund is still open, it was decided to leave it to committee to arrange at a later meeting. Any member wishing to contribute is asked to communicate with the secretary as early as possible.—Ernest R. Rimley, hon. sec.

Will secretaries and friends kindly note that Mr. E. Sexton has moved from Wingford Road, Brixton Hill, to 201, Fallsbrook Road, Mitcham Lane, Streatham.

We do not muster 50 entries in all sections so far, writes Mr. R. M. Daly, secretary of the Eastbourne Show, October 20th. Many specials are being provided, and there is a good classification.

Will show secretaries please note in sending schedules that my address is not Victoria House but Victoria Terrace, 326, Droylsden Road, Newton Heath, Manchester, writes Mr. H. Wadsworth.

We are holding our open show on November 25th, under C.B.U. license, writes Mr. Arthur R. Tremlett, hon secretary of the Sidmouth and Dis. F.S. Mr. J. Robson will judge the 30 classes provided.

Class No. 3 in our show schedule, should have been "Norwich hen," writes Mr. W. A. Broadley, hon. secretary of the Alnwick and Dis. C.B.S., and special No. 13 was omitted, viz., prize value 2s. 6d.

I hear that Mr. C. Pickup has sold his Yellow Green Marked Yorkshire to Messrs. Hartley for £6 10s., writes Mr. F. Holdsworth. I hope it will do the present owner good. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

Exhibitors and show secretaries are requested to note that Ramsden's specials will be withheld at any show where the condition of printing "Ramsden" against competing entries is not complied with.—(ADVT.)

The committee of the Norwich Plainhead Club have decided to hold their next cup show at Rochdale on October 22nd and 23rd, when the judge will be Mr. H. W. Battye.—JNO. HOPKINS, hon. secretary.

At Dulwich Show we have decided, write Messrs. Woolhouse and Rogers, the show secretaries, to accept entries to Saturday's post, October 9th; not later. See review of schedule for classes, and send on; we will classify.

There will be an extra special for the Border Fancy class for best bird of other colour than winner (which is not included in schedule), writes Mr. Thos. Pope, hon. secretary of the Western Counties O.S. (Plymouth) Show.

I have removed from Shrewsbury Road to 36, Nightingale Road, Harlesden, London, N.W., writes Mr. F. Eaton, Norwich and Yorkshire breeder. I am pleased to say I have had a good breeding season—86 youngsters doing well.

It may interest you to know of my breeding results this season, writes Mrs. M. J. Bright (Bideford). I have reared 3 Norwich-Roller crossed Canaries from 5 hens, losing only one bird, which was crowded out. Last season I reared 71 birds from 6 hens.

I have sent over 1,400 schedules out, writes Mr. Curry, joint secretary of the Newcastle Show, October 22nd and 23rd. If any have been overlooked, will they please apply? Our address is 60, Grosvenor Gardens, and not 6, as printed last week in our advertisement.

Our next meeting (October 18th), writes Mr. C. C. Irvine, secretary of the Ayr and Dis. C.B.C., is the last date for accepting the annual subscription. Any member whose subscription is not paid will not be eligible to compete for members' specials at the open show.

Lancaster Open Show will be held on November 19th and 20th, writes Mr. J. H. Nayler, the secretary, when we shall be giving 22s. per class prize-money, with good specials in addition. We have a very nice hall, and our railway facilities are equalled by few other towns.

Our show this year looks like being a "knock out," writes Mr. R. Taylor, secretary of the Preston O.S. We have the Norwich P.C. contest, and the patronage of the Green Canary Association, also the E. and W.B.F.C. Fanciers please note that our membership is open to all.

Things are progressing well for our open show on January 1st, 1910, writes Mr. W. H. Wright, hon. secretary of the Carlisle and Dis. C.B.S., when we hope to have a record entry, as the Border Fancy Club are holding their annual meeting here, and we hope to meet many fresh faces.

We have been favoured with the patronage of the Yorkshire C.B.S., of Ireland, writes Mr. R. J. Hamilton, secretary of the Banbridge Cage Bird Show, November 11th and 12th. At the committee meeting held recently a new cup was presented by Mr. J. Chalmers for young Mules. We anticipate a record show.

While at Longton Show, writes our reporter, I had the pleasure of looking round Mr. E. Tams' shop and bird rooms, and was very much surprised and pleased to see such a fine display, including all kinds of cages and foods and birds. I noticed some very promising young Norwich among the latter.

Finding that the hall for the holding of our annual show was not available for the date fixed (January 11th), writes Mr. Daniel John, secretary, Llanelly and Dis. C.B.S., I have just been informed that the hall has been granted to us for January 18th, when we are in hopes of having a successful show.

Will secretaries and friends kindly note, writes Mr. Herbert J. Chick, that I have removed from 44, Radford Road, to 39a, Radford Road, Nottingham, where I have opened a first-class fish, game, and poultry shop. I shall be able now to devote more time to the hobby, and hope to come out as a judge of British birds next season.

There is no other show in the North on October 27th and 28th, and with our popular judges we should get entries from all over the South of Scotland and N.E. and N.W. of England in good numbers for our fixture on those days, writes Mr. J. C. Bell, secretary, Border City O.S. (Carlisle).

I have moved to Hope Cottage, High Street, Melbourn, near Royston, Cambs., writes Mr. F. R. E. Handscombe, for the benefit of my health, which was not very grand at Walthamstow. I am pleased to say that it has improved. I have not had a big rearing year. I shifted my birds in May, while they were in the first round, and then they came out of an indoor room into a special house built for them, but what I have bred are very good considering. I miss the society of London fanciers, such as the Leyton C.B.A. and the Walthamstow F.A., but I hope in due course we shall see a society near here.

We are giving a series of 5 table shows for novices only, to be held monthly at headquarters, Boiler Makers' Arms, Abbey Hey Lane, Hr. Openshaw, writes Mr. F. Washbourne, secretary of the South Manchester C.B.S. Prizes, 1s. 6d. special each class, and a gold medal, silver, etc., and a handsome pipe and case for first, second, and third, most points gained at the end of the season. Prize money on 5d. sliding scale. Now, novices, support the committee by sending a record entry for first show on October 9th. Entries taken till 2.30 day of show. Mr. George will judge. Free admission, fanciers invited.

There are doubtless amongst our readers many who are interested in the "noble art of self-defence," as exemplified in the skilful use of the weapons with which nature has endowed mankind. We would commend to their notice a bright and interesting journal devoted to the "manly art," which has recently made a highly successful debut. "Boxing" is its appropriate title (published every Thursday, price 1d.), and it is the only paper in the world solely devoted to boxing. The stirring contests of the ring are graphically described in its columns, which also contain weekly articles by noted champions of the fistic arena. "Boxing" is on sale at all newsagents and bookstalls; a specimen copy can be had on application to the Manager, "Boxing," 12, Burleigh Street, Strand, London, W.C. (mention CAGE BIRDS when applying).

The Cage Bird Union: Book of Rules

TO BE ENLARGED AND IMPROVED.

We have pleasure in informing advertisers that we have this year been entrusted with the production and publication of the Cage Bird Union Handbook of Rules, etc. Many new features will be introduced, many pages will be added, all the matter will be brought thoroughly up-to-date, and the whole book will be produced on a more imposing scale than has hitherto been the case.

The Handbook will be distributed throughout the whole of the membership of the Cage Bird Union, and will therefore be in the hands of a vast number of practical fanciers, every one of whom is a possible buyer of "birdy" goods.

We have decided to accept a limited number of advertisements at the following exceptionally low rates:—

Breeders' Cards.	Display Advertisements.
Half inch .. 2/6	1 page .. 30/-

SPECIAL POSITIONS: £2 2s., per page, and pro rata down to ¼ page. Size of page 6 inches by 4 inches.

Advertisers should avail themselves of this splendid opportunity of securing a cheap and lasting advertisement.

Green Canaries: Preparation for the Exhibitions.

By J. W. METCALFE.

A Lecture delivered recently before the Liverpool Bird Breeders' Association.

One of the greatest essentials towards the success of a show specimen is the manner in which it is staged. How many exhibitors have wondered why they were not "in the money"! But they would soon have found why if they had compared the staging of the winners with their own. Many a bird without a ticket has been of better type and quality than the winner, but owing to its condition has had to be passed. Staging, on its own, will not win, but if a bird is worth sending out, it should be sent out in the pink of condition, well groomed and in a cage worthy of the exhibit; then if it comes to a matter of two birds being of equal merit, the one that is staged well is sure to get the preference. Getting birds ready for exhibition is a fine art, and only comes to one by continual practice and patience.

At the Time of the Moult.

I will commence with the moult, which is the main thing, for if you don't get a good clean moult you may put your specimen away for another year. My own method is to put all my birds into as large a flight as I can get. For about six or seven weeks previous to this all the young birds have had a thorough training, to be used to the show cage, so that they will not take so much training when they leave the flight.

As soon as the youngsters are half way through the moult I cage them off in twos. It is not necessary to do this with the old birds until they have almost finished their moult, because you know their show points, and it gives you more room for the youngsters.

At this time of the year your birds should be fed on the most nourishing foods, to keep them up to their usual strength, because the moult naturally weakens them. I give them plenty of mixed seeds, without hemp. Hemp I give separately once a week, as too much hemp makes a Green too dark; but I think the giving of mixed seeds helps to improve their colour. Egg-food should be given twice a week.

Selecting and Training Show Specimens.

When you have got all your youngsters caged off, keep a sharp look-out for the most promising show specimens, and those that you are certain will not be good enough for the bench along with those which look like developing into stock birds, you may throw back into the flight. You will now have more time in which to train the most promising birds.

You should have them in the show-cage at least three times a week. A good idea is to put up a small board in your room to hold, say, six show cages. As soon as you go in to look to your stock, run out six of the youngsters and put them on this board, while you are knocking about the room; they will become less frightened, and will so steady themselves. It also puts them through their paces, which they will have to go through at the show.

Too much handling cannot be given to young birds, because a judge will not trouble much with a bird that is wild; in fact, a bird cannot pull itself together to the judge's liking after knocking itself about, so this is where patience is required. I will admit some birds will never become steady, and I have found this bad point has developed in their progeny. A good way to try to steady them is to give them a thorough spraying and then carry them about wherever you go in the room. I have cured many a bird this way.

Concerning Baths and Foods.

Now, as regards baths, it is advisable to hang one on the cage each day, because there is nothing like water by which to brace a bird up; as any exhibitor will tell you; it tightens their feathers. Best Spanish Canary seed should be always in the seed hopper, good mixed seed should be given twice a week, and egg-food, made up as follows, should be given to your best show birds, as it is too expensive to give all round:—One hard boiled new laid egg, half a round of bread crumbs, two teaspoonfuls of maw seed, and two teaspoonfuls of cream, well mixed together; give one teaspoonful to each bird twice a week. One a week I have given my birds tenpenny ale, instead of drinking water; on this day you must omit the bath.

I have been asked what is tenpenny ale? It goes by this name here. It is the strongest ale you can procure. It seems a farce to give ale to birds, but this recipe was given to me by a very successful exhibitor, and I tried it with beneficial results.

I forgot to mention that if a bird wont bathe itself it is absolutely necessary to give it a good spraying three times a week. Keep a cage specially for spraying them in. Afterwards run them back into the stock cage—many a bird has caught a cold through being left in a wet show cage. Keep a sharp look-out for broken flights or tail feathers. If you find any, pull the stumps out, they will then be replaced by others by the time the show season opens.

As your young birds are finishing moulting I should advise spraying them with a few drops of glycerine in the water. When they are dry give them a good grooming with a camel hair shaving brush, especially on the head and back.

When the Birds are Ready.

Now, supposing your birds are fit for the show. Get your cages enamelled and the perches well washed. It is surprising how different a bird looks in a bright and clean cage. Should you not be successful at the first shows, don't give up unless you can see for yourself that you are hopelessly outclassed. On the other hand, don't think you are going to sweep the decks, if you have the good fortune to win at the first show.

When the birds come back from the show give them all a pinch of cayenne in their egg-food, and give them a good bath. I have always found that Greens will stand three shows before they require washing, and then if possible wash them eight or nine days before they go out again. Washing seems to take the green lustre off at first, but it will come back again before the show comes round.

My method of washing is to get three bowls of water, as generally used. After tubbing the birds I give them a thorough drying with a silk handkerchief. Don't be afraid to use these; often enough birds have been put back in the cages before they were half dry. Put them in flannel before a good fire, give them about ten minutes in this, and then take them up and give them a good polishing with a nice piece of silk. On no account put a bird back into the cage before it has been polished. There are many methods of getting birds up. We all have different opinions, and certainly each of us is entitled to our own, especially when we have found them successful.

The Discussion.

MR. ISAAC: I see you advise looking for the young birds with the best type and quality; you do not mention colour. What chance has a young bird against an old bird? Answer.—Looking back upon this last three or four show seasons you will find that the majority of judges have gone in for type and quality, and have ignored colour. That is why I advise looking for type and quality. Certainly colour should come first, but it has been the reverse. A young bird does not carry much colour until it has had an adult moult; therefore an old bird should beat a youngster in colour, and if they are of equal merit otherwise, the old bird is bound to win, when colour is taken into consideration. So I should advise exhibitors to put their young birds out at the first shows.

Mr. BRATHERTON: You advise a bath every day. How about a man who has to go to his work very early?—Hang the bath on before you go to work, and if possible get "the better half," to take them off at dinner time, or else leave them on the whole of the day. Birds get into a habit of bathing early, and they won't go in again until the next day. My own baths are on day and night.

MR. J. ABBOTT: Do you use any special cage for training the Yorkshires to improve the position?—No. I use the ordinary Yorkshire cage. Generally I tie a piece of string at the top to hang down three inches. The youngsters will pick at this, and the picking helps them on a bit. But never get this out of your head that you must breed position into them. You cannot make position if it is not bred in them.

MR. ISAAC: I don't believe in washing the Norwich Greens. I well spray them, which I find answers the same purpose. Certainly I wash the tail and wings if they are dirty. —Yorkshires are improved by washing, without a doubt. But sometimes if you wash a Norwich, you make it look smaller, and if it is not blessed with too much substance, it might look too small for exhibiting. On the other hand a big bodied Norwich is greatly improved by washing.

MR. J. WALKER: Does not a flight make the birds very wild —Yes, a little. But thoroughly train them before putting them into the flight. The good it does a bird, as regards growing and health, quite counteracts this wildness, in fact, it will cure a bird of bad wing carriage.

Mr. Isaac proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Metcalfe for his lecture, adding that it was only through the old exhibitors giving these hints to the novices that they could expect to win.—Mr. Brunskill, secretary of the Darlington C.B.S., seconded the vote of thanks. He said he endorsed all the lecturer had said, and at the same time told the audience of the various methods that were used by fanciers on the North East coast.

Helpful Hints for the Show Season.

A lecture by Mr. R. HALLIDAY (President of the Yorkshire Union), given before the Bankfoot and Dis. C.B.S. on Sept. 28.

Having been asked to give you a lecture on "Hints for the Show Season," I should like to point out that it is most essential you should have your birds in good condition to ensure a successful moult, and for this purpose I give the birds mixed seed in a separate vessel. Now that the Yorkshire Union have decided on a standard water tin, the old ones previously used will answer this purpose very well if you hang them inside the cages.

Colour-feeding.

In giving the colour food I take, say, a slice of home-made bread and soak it in water, then squeeze out as much water as possible, and add colour food and maw seed, mixing all well together with a fork.

As regards the kind of bird required for show, opinions differ. I prefer a bird with a good head, nice shoulders, plenty of length of wings and tail, and the body tapering away from shoulders to end of tail like a perfect wedge. It would be worth the money if you could afford to spend, say, four or five pounds in purchasing a good show bird that has won under several judges for use as a guide for breeding the exhibition bird.

A Hint to Novices.

I should advise all novices to attend as many shows as possible, and try to find out, "on their own," where the first prize bird beats the second, and so on.

If you happen to be showing, and get beaten, take the losses as you would the wins, as a bad loser does not deserve to be a winner. Don't get big ideas of your own, as these will be of little use to the judge who is judging your bird. When the birds are finishing the moult, take notice of the wing ends and tail; if they happen to be broken or frayed at the ends, this is the time to pull them out. In doing this get a firm hold on the bird, and pull as straight as possible. If they are very bad, I prefer leaving them over until another year. If you should have two or three birds in a cage, and there is a bird or two plucked, take out the one with the neatest appearance, as this is the one that is doing the mischief. Twice a week you can give a little biscuit along with the bread crumbs and maw seed.

Training the Birds.

In training the birds you must go about it in as gentle a way as possible—get the birds' confidence. Let them see that you do not intend to harm them, and do not put them in front of, or under, a strong light. In giving them the baths, see that all perches are clean, and have all baths off again by dinner time.

When washing birds for the show see that the water is not too hot, or you will wash the sheen off the plumage. Wash the bird in as gentle a way as possible, and also as quickly as possible. Rough washing is often the cause of bad necks, as though the soap had been left in. In drying my birds I do not use cloths, but instead use a drying cage. This has a bottom made of canvas, and is placed over a tank of hot water. In the drying cage I have a thermometer, and I find that from 80 deg. to 86 deg. is a nice heat for them to dry gently. Always have plenty of light about the cages while the birds are drying; then they will plume themselves most readily.

The Show Cages.

Regarding the show cages, see that they are nice and clean, and black all over. I am alluding now to those of the Yorkshire pattern. See that the perches are in straight, and that the ticket is tied in the proper place. Also see that the water tins do not leak, as sometimes, when the cages are staged one over the other, and the water tin of the cage above is leaking, the water runs into a cage below and spoils someone else's bird, besides leaving your own bird without water.

In sending your birds to distant shows get them off in good time, as these do not always get the same attention as passengers, but are sometimes left over for another train. Also see that your cases are in good order, so that your birds may travel in comfort.

Before finishing my lecture, I should like to bring to your notice the various advantages of the specialist clubs, for which, I may say, Yorkshire is the best provided for in all England, as, apart from the valuable trophies offered for yearly competition, there is the prize at each show for best 4ths, etc., giving those that do not get first a chance to get their expenses back. If any of you should have any questions to ask I shall be only too pleased to answer them to the best of my ability. (Applause.)

Questions were then "hurled" at Mr. Halliday from all directions, which at once proved that he was quite at home in solving the various doubts and difficulties of our members. Many of the questions were exhaustively dealt with, and the following are some of those included:—

Some Pointed Questions.

Question: Does Mr. Halliday put anything in the water to tighten the feather?—Ans.: No; I use nothing but pure water.

Do you use anything for fixing the colour?—I do not bother with this myself, but I have no doubt citrate of iron would do good in this respect.

Can nervousness be conquered?—Yes; I believe with kindness the bird will lose all trace of it, but it requires a great deal of patience.

Questioner. I have a bird that is marked on one wing and a small tick on its body. Will Mr. Halliday tell us what he would call it?—I should call it a tick. This question was the means of opening up quite a discussion on "the tick question," which proved very interesting to all. A little amusement was caused here by Mr. Chittenden asking the lecturer what he would call a whole green with the exception of a few light feathers on head?—Mr. H. replied: A foul green. Mr. Chittenden: I should call it a tick (a light tick).

Does type count before markings? asked someone.—Yes; and should do in all typical varieties.

Do you believe in giving boiled carrot?—Yes; it no doubt gives good effects. Mr. Chittenden here stated that carrot was one of the finest conditioners known. Will Mr. Halliday give us a receipt for reducing fat on birds? was the next question.—Give rape seed, he said, and put a little treacle in the water.

Will Mr. Halliday tell us what to do with a bird stuck in the moult?—I do not believe much can be done in this direction. No doubt a milk sop would be as beneficial as anything, although borax placed in water is said to soften the quill. Mr. Halliday here stated that he did not believe in medicines. He had a few bottles but they were all dusty.

Does Mr. Halliday approve of egg cake mixed along with colour food?—I prefer home-made bread and colour food.

Do you believe in baths all through the moult? he was next asked—Yes, he said; the bath is one of the finest things out for the moult, but see that it is removed by dinner time in order to give the birds time to dry.

Can Mr. Halliday tell us the reason of a bird cracking seed and leaving the kernal?—If you have only one bird doing this I should say it is the bird that is out of condition; but if a lot are leaving it in the same state, I should say the seed was not to their liking.

As it was now more than 10 o'clock we were reluctantly compelled to bring our meeting to a close. I should like to take this opportunity on behalf of myself and the fellow members, to again thank Mr. Halliday for his kindness in opening for us our first winter syllabus, and at the same time giving the very first lecture before this society. I am sure Mr. Halliday has only to promise a lecture before any society, and a sucecessful gathering is sure to follow.

Mr. H. Taylor proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer for his kindness in giving us such an interesting lecture. Mr. J. Taylor seconded, and Mr. Halliday suitably responded, at the same time congratulating our society on its strong position, and the pleasure it gave him to lecture before such a gathering. He also expressed the hope that he might again find time to spend another evening with us, a remark that was received with acclamation and one that our members will not soon forget.—F. GELDER, secretary.

The Steadying of - - - - British Hardbills.

Some Hints by a Successful Exhibitor.

So much has been written about fresh-caught birds and their treatment that the subject presents a rather threadbare appearance. But perhaps a few homely hints based on experience, on the process of steadying Hardbills, may not come amiss at this time of year, and may be appreciated by those who are not experts in this fascinating pursuit—for "fascinating" it really is. The real fancier spends his spare time ungrudgingly among his stock, looking after their comforts, studying their peculiarities, and making their caged life as happy and cheerful as possible, and not a wearied existence eked out by poor feeding, spasmodic attention, bad sanitation and neglect. The difference can easily be detected between the birds in one category and those in the other: those with proper care and attention are bright, sprightly and tractable; many of the others are mopy, dull-coated, and "mad as March hares."

The query is often put: "However do you manage to get your birds so steady? I can't do it." What a fallacy! Never an easier problem presented itself to the real bird-lover. True, he may have more leisure time than others, or he may have less; he may be credited with possessing the "knack," so-called, but these qualities he must have in abundance — namely, patience and a love of his task. These contain the whole "personal element," so to speak, of the secret of steadying British birds, backed up as it is by a minute consideration of the peculiarities of each bird in the matter of food—natural food, or as near as you can get to it. Undoubtedly the easiest method of steadying your bird is through its "mouth," if the phrase is allowable. The British bird in captivity is undoubtedly an epicure—see him run through his larder, find out the tit-bits, and "jib" at the commonplace on his menu. He will sort out the various seeds in the hopper a lot quicker than his owner could do the task, and those not to his palate will be speedily discarded.

Well, we will make a start. The birds we wish to steady have, since being caught, had a week or two in the aviary or large flight-cage. You will have regaled them (Goldies, Bullies, Linnets, Greenies, Brambles, or what not) with all the fresh-gathered wild seeds you could manage—thistle-heads, plantain, shepherd's purse, dock, and the host of others obtainable here and there; supplied them also with crushed seed, as well as whole Canary, rape (soaked and dry), teazel, niga, hemp, —the whole scattered "all over the shop," for your fresh-caught one is no civilised creature, and prefers barbarian habits for a while; berries and greenstuff have been added, as well as a supply of clean, fresh water and plenty of grit.

A month of this ample treatment will enable you to make a wonderful beginning with your birds, and there will not be many complaints of initial losses. Gradually wean your birds from the undesirable seeds, if you consider there are any—personally I don't think any of those enumerated, reasonably used, are harmful. Then you can introduce them severally to the stock cages. A good box-cage, about 18 by 12, and as deep as you please, will be found a good general size. (Don't, please don't, favour the vile "back-cage," for it is an abomination). Place the seed-pots at first right under their "noses," and they will soon find out their dining place; continue the wild-seed stuff as well. Do not worry or fidget them for a day or two after caging up—"feed the brutes," and otherwise let them be. In about a week they will show signs of settling down a bit.

Now is the time to indulge their little likes and dislikes. Goldie!—oh, I know what he likes; a good hard thistle-head provides the wherewithal. Cut the head into pieces and you will espy a few small juicy maggots; place one on the end of his perch and stand aside. No pressing invite is required, for master Goldie always has an eye for a good thing. Stand close up after a while and offer him one from your fingers. He will knowingly turn his head aside, perhaps, at first, but he will soon fall an easy prey to your artifices. I know of nothing more simple with which to steady a Goldfinch than these little occupants of an apparently rotten thistle-head, which will soon be dislodged by master Goldie in his eager anticipation of a succulent mouthful.

Master Bullie, like the Goldfinch, has also a soft spot or two—and a big appetite. Tempt him with some privet berries, hips and haws, sunflower seed, blackberries (ripe and unripe), and, in fact, berries of all kinds. With his powerful beak he is very accommodating. He will soon look for your coming, and snatch at your personal offerings.

The Greenie also has a fondness for anything he may pound with his big beak, and neither of these two birds will take long before submitting to your attentions.

The Linnet, perhaps, will appear a bit nervous on first being caged. But try him with some nice ripe (blue or brown) plantain stalks; he is very fond of these, perhaps more so than shepherd's purse or chickweed, though all three are relished, and he will clear the stalks, a half-dozen or more a day, with gusto. Shell a sunflower seed and place it at the end of his perch. Gone? —well, give another. Offer him one from your fingers. He won't take it? Well, hold it till your arm aches, and he will, in time. Once acquired, he will not forget the lesson.

Our poor old friend the Bramble has a shockingly bad name—never mind! He hardly deserves it, and I am sure he amply repays you for all the trouble expended on his education. He may at first prove a dull or stubborn scholar. He will also often try to play the tenant, in his own way, and, like the bad boy, may upset some of his fellows in the process, especially when time is nearing the witching hour, the moon is shining, and everything else is asleep. But time will work wonders, and Mr. Bramblefinch will soon steady down. A nice fat mealworm, or a "daddylong-legs" spider, the dahlia-loving earwig, or the smooth caterpillar, will assist you, and your Bramble cannot resist temptation.

These latter trifles are much to the taste of the Chaffinch, and all the Buntings as well. Chaffie is a bit irritable when he likes, and comes next to the Bramblefinch in this respect, though both are closely followed for awhile by the Buntings. However, all will submit to kind and considerate treatment, and once gain the confidence of your birds, and they will seldom misbehave themselves.

Endeavour to have your own way with each bird, and when you offer something you knew he wants, make him take it from your fingers, notwithstanding his apparently fidgety ways while doing so. Once again, please remember in this connection that patience is more than a virtue, it is a necessity, and you need a goodly supply of it.—R. C. (East Dulwich).

A Treat for the British Birds.

Mr. Chas. Boulton, the well-known judge (on right), Mr. S. Little, and Master Fairhurst, gathering wild seeds for their Hybrids and Britishers.

The Shows.

PAISLEY.

The Paisley and Dis. Scotch Fancy Association's 27th annual show was held in the George A. Clark North Manor Hall on October 2nd. The weather was mild and bright, and it was a pleasure to visit the show, the hall being comfortable and commodious. Entries were down 30 in number compared with last year's; this was discouraging to the enterprising fanciers who conduct the show. Only 11 exhibits came from Glasgow, including Govan and Shettleston. Mr. Allison, the president, who is well known for his tact and courtesy, made the most of the event. Mr. Kelly, the secretary, who has creditably run the exhibition for sixteen years, carried out the work in his usual masterly way. He is the proper man for the position. The committee did yeoman service which cannot be overestimated. The quality of the exhibits was superior throughout; indeed, there was a grand collection of high-class birds. The famous buff piebald hen again distinguished herself by securing the fourth silver cup and gold medal on successive Saturdays—an unprecedented feat. Mr. Black, of Govan, has just reason to be proud of her. The judges are to be complimented on the way they got through their work, which was by no means easy. They were Messrs. J. A. Stewart (Glasgow), W. McGrachie (Newmilns), and D. Kennedy and A. Livingstone (Paisley).

GREAT HORTON (Good Intent) O.S.

Third Members' Show of season, held September 25th at the Church Schools, Southfield Lane. The entry was not so big as usual, "Not quite ready," being the cry; however, close on 40 birds faced the judge, Mr. Jas. Bailey (Sandy Lane), including some very good exhibits. The following were point winners: Messrs. Hartley, A. Holden, F. Oldfield, C. Sharp and Son, and the winners of the special for starred birds were Messrs. Hartley.

EAST HAM F.C.

First Young Stock Show, held in the Harmonic Hall, Pashet Grove, September 28rd. The entry was fairly good, and some very choice birds were shown. Mr. Skinner won the specials for best cage bird and best Yorkshire, with a very handsome wing-ticked yellow; Mr. Rout took that for best Norwich, with a chubby, nice quality variegated yellow; that for the best Mule went to a good dark Canary-Linnet, shown by Messrs. South and Son, Mr. Ansell winning the special for best Hard-billed British, with a lovely Linnet. The British birds, like the Canaries, were all 1909 birds, which is somewhat unusual. The exhibits were nicely staged, and formed an attractive feature of a good show. Mr. Rutter and his committee had all the arrangements well in hand. Mr. J. Robson judged.

LONGTON (Staffs.)

Second open show held in the old Free Library, Town Hall, on Oct. 2nd. There was a capital entry—nearly 120 more in number than last year, and the quality was A1. The entry in the Norwich section was grand, and the quality here was much in advance of other years. The unlighted classes filled well, and the exhibits took some sorting out. The winning buff was a topper, and a good big one. We were surprised to see the birds so forward and in such excellent condition. The Yorkshire classes were a good display, some grand unlighted ones being on view, and many noted funciers being represented. Both Crests classes were cancelled. We expect it is a little too early for this variety. The classes allotted to British birds were a splendid success, and a very fine entry was obtained right through. The Goldfinches were a nice lot; Linnets were also a very level class, and took some deciding upon. The A.O.S. Hardbill was a wonderful class, the winning Chaffinch being an extra fine exhibit in the best possible condition. The two Foreign bird classes included some rare birds. Also the Mule classes were well filled, and quality A1. The staging and care of the birds was all that could be desired. And what a magnificent display of birds they had! A good staff of helpers worked hard and well under Mr. E. Tams, who makes a fine secretary, and had everything well in hand. Others who put in long hours to both unpacking and despatching of the exhibits were: Messrs. C. Birks (president), J. Davis, J. Edward, Lovett, A. Hallam, C. Hodson, E. Tams (secretary), H. Perrings, J. Rowley, F. Hallam, A. Reeves, etc. The attendance was good. Mr. J. H. Roe judged. The society look like having to consider the advisability of engaging another judge as well in future, as the work is almost too much for one, especially when such an entry is obtained. The winner of Hyde's special was Mr. Hemmings, and Mr. Davis won Sandiford's. Other special winners were: Messrs. Jeffs, Houghton, Peake, Dykes, Haliday, Dormer, Bond, and Morris.

SANDY LANE.

Sandy Lane and Dist. C.B.S. opened the show season for the Yorkshire Union on Oct. 2nd, and although so early in the season the birds, taken as a whole, were in good condition—far better than has been the case in the two previous years. In all 25 classes were provided, and these drew an entry of 365, an average of 14.6 per class, staged by 124 exhibitors. Strange to relate, the first two classes (clear Yellows and clear Buffs) each contained only seven entries, as also did the cinnamon-marked Yellow cock class, all others being well patronised. Is the clear bird losing its sway, or are they a little late, we wonder. The show was held under Union rules, and had the patronages of the Y.C.C. and the C.M.Y.C.C. Mr. P. Mason, of Windhill, judged, his awards being very well received. Mr. B. Buckle, the energetic secretary, and his young and very able assistant, Mr. S. Edmondson, had things well in hand, and had a good and useful committee to back them up, including Messrs. Simms and Whitwham (the stewards). J. Wilson, F. Smith, H. Edmondson, R. Millburn, etc. As usual at this show teas were provided for visitors, and a great many partook of the good fare, such well-known fanciers as Messrs. Knight, Mason, Hill, Hammond, Simonette, Myers and Edmondson all having their feet under the table. The members expect the balance to be well on the right side, as they had an exceptionally good gate, many non-exhibitors making a half-day holiday of the occasion in this beautiful country.

Canary Breeding for Beginners

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.
Post Free 7d.

A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary Breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby.

Contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing, and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, etc.

All the details of bird-breeding explained, while it shows the way out of all difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL

By C. A. House. Post free 1/2 (postal order).

A thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the German (or Roller) Canary.

An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style.

There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind the price.

Cage Birds' Guide to the Shows

SEASON 1909-1910.

Paste this up in your Birdroom.

We have pleasure in again submitting to Fanciers a Guide to the Shows being held during the present season which offer classes for cage birds. The fixtures printed in heavy black type are those of societies participating in the benefits of our Guarantee Scheme. If, in spite of the pains taken to make this list as complete as possible, any Show should have inadvertently been omitted from it, or should any Show be arranged after its publication, we shall be pleased to include same in our supplementary lists (which may be published from time to time) on receiving notification.

Shows marked (*) are under Cage Bird Union Rules: those marked (†) under the rules of the Yorkshire Union of C.B.S. As fresh shows are constantly being licensed by the Cage Bird Union, however, exhibitors should refer to the official list published monthly in "Cage Birds" for these additional fixtures which are being held under C.B.U. rules.

The Stock Book.

Our Invaluable "Breeding Room Register." By G. E. Weston.

Post free, 7d.

A well-known fancier has said of it:—"It makes bird breeding easy." This book no breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room, and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred—keep account of their strong and weak points. It contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

RADFORD AND DIS. C.B.S.

Second show, held at the Pheasant Inn, Radford, on Oct. 2. This society bids fair to be successful, and we wish it good luck. The host, Mr. T. Oliver, is a good fancier, and well known, backed up by a good secretary in Mr. F. Walters, and his committee; 71 birds were staged. Everything was in nice order; there was a good room and a proficient judge, in Mr. W. Vardy.

BURNLEY.

The 23rd annual exhibition of the Burnley and Dis. C.B.F.S. was held on October 1st and 2nd in the large show room of the Weavers' Institute, a very good room for the purpose. The show was opened on the Friday by Lady Thursby, and on the Saturday by the Mayor of Burnley, Alderman W. Hough. Considering that the show is held so early in the season entries came up well, especially in the Norwich section, which averaged 24 per class, and where competition was very keen owing to the show being held under the patronage of the N.P.C. and the O.N.P.C. Amongst the many grand birds worthy of special mention perhaps the pick was to be found in the winning unflighted buff of Mr. J. Shore (Macclesfield), which bird, we were given to understand, was claimed by Mr. Thomas Seed, at the catalogue price, £10 10s. Another fine bird which we were glad to see has again started on his winning career is Mr. S. Cook's noted ticked yellow. The Yorkshire classes contained some very choice specimens, the principal winners being Messrs. Hirst, F. Wilkinson, Amblers, Bell, Precious, and Bullough. The British, Foreign, and Mule birds made a very striking display, every class containing exhibits which will be heard of many times before the end of the season. The winning hybrid of Mr. Nicholson was voted by many to be a real topper. The following were the winners of specials in the champion Norwich section: Messrs. Seed, Davies, Hopkins, and Trougove; in the amateur Norwich section: Messrs. Barnes, J. Oliver, and Cooper; in the Yorkshire section; Messrs. Amblers, Hurst, and Wilkinson; in the novice classes: Messrs. Precious and Stirrup; in the Mules and Hybrids, etc., Messrs. Godley and Vardy; in the British Birds: Messrs. Walsh, Johnson, and Nichols; in the Foreign: Mr. Walsh; in the selling: Messrs. Taylor and Greenwood; and in the gift class: Messrs. Braybrook and Lingard. Best bird shown by a member, Mr. Lingard; best by a novice member, Mr. Bell; best members' unflighted, Mr. R. W. Mercer; Hyde's, Mr. A. Huggins, and Sandiford's, Mr. Midgley. Mr. W. Clarkson makes an ideal secretary, having everything in first-class order and being very courteous and obliging to all; the show was very well managed in every detail. He was ably assisted by the president (Mr. R. Braybrook), the vice-president (Mr. W. D. Jowett), the treasurer (Mr. J. Evans), and Mr. J. Hayhurst, and a very capable energetic committee, who one and all worked hard to make the show the success it undoubtedly was. Messrs. J. H. Roe and H. W. Battye judged, and their awards were favourably received.

DALKEITH.

The Dalkeith and Dis. O.S. held their annual show in the Forrester's Hall on October 2nd. The hall is admirably suited for a show of this kind, having good floor space, lofty roof and plenty of light. The staging was arranged on the three-tier system round the room, with white paper fixed to the back, which showed up the exhibits to the best advantage. Entries totalled 250, and although this is less than last year's, the quality of the exhibits was well maintained, some birds of real merit being forward in all sections. Gold medals were offered for the best birds in Scotch Fancy, Border Fancy, and Norwich sections, and as this is the chief honour the winners are to be congratulated on their achievement. The medal in the Scotch Fancy section went to Mr. J. King; the Border Fancy medal to Mr. W. Nelson; and the Norwich medal to Mr. A. M. Gardiner. The secretary, Mr. Ewing, had arrangements well in hand, and judging was over in good time. The following gentlemen placed the cards: Mr. A. Melrose (Scotch Fancy section), Mr. J. Watson (Border Fancy section), and Mr. J. Winter (Norwich).

Some Questions for Lark Fanciers.

SIR,—Having acquired a fancy for Larks, I want to catch a few for song. May I ask some kind reader to let me know how to catch them at night with a drag net? Also where would be the most likely places to drag for them—whether in stubble or grass fields. And I should like to know how to sex them.

NOVICE.

Birds with Missing Claws.

Should they be Exhibited?

SIR,—Will some of the leading fanciers kindly tell me through CAGE BIRDS if a bird is eligible for competition which has a claw missing? If it is, how many points are counted against it because of this defect? I should like to know the custom of the judges in dealing with such a bird.

G. B. LYNN.

SIR,—I should like to ask, through the medium of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, when the officials of the Gorseinon Society intend paying out their prize money of the show held on February 25 last? I have written on three occasions, but have had no reply. Mine is only 5s., I admit, but what is due to us we expect to receive. We have to pay for entering our birds in advance, and it's fair for us to expect show committees to settle claims within a reasonable time.

E. H. WILLIAMS.

A New Cage Bird Society for the Borders.

SIR,—A meeting was held at Coldstream on October 1, and it was unanimously decided to hold a cage bird show in January, 1910, at Coldstream. Thirty-one classes were allotted, and the following gentlemen were present and joined the Committee:—Mr. A. Gilchrist (chairman), Mr. J. W. Bruce (treasurer); Committee: Messrs. G. Ford, A. C. Bruce, J. Brown, Geo. Dickson, J. Aikman, and W. Hardie. Another meeting will be held later on, when we shall decide on judges and drawing up of schedules.

Insectivorous Birds and Soft Food Mixtures.

SIR,—May I add a postcript to my former letter on the subject of the Bank Mynahs at the Zoo? I wrote to my informant to learn how I had so misunderstood him as to state, on his authority, that the parents had access to the Central Division of the Western Aviary, and have just received a letter from him of which the following is an extract:—"The young Bank Mynah was bred under the glass in the large-doomed aviary, the parent birds having full access to the outside cage the whole time." I do not take upon myself to say who is right or who is wrong, but my informant certainly ought to know, and I think if Mr. Finn will look into the matter again it is just possible that he may ascertain that it is not the writer who is "so careless in examining evidence."

W. E. TESCHEMAKER.

A Remedy Wanted for a Fatal Disease.

SIR,—Since last writing on the above subject, I had an uninvited visit from a fancier who had gone through the same experience. Directly he commenced breeding he lost £40 worth of stock in a few weeks. He sent five birds away to three different persons to get examined, and all came to the same conclusion—"Bird Fever." What birds he had left, and that seemed healthy, he handwashed and put into fresh quarters. Those that were slightly affected he gave a mixture of iron and quinine recommended to him by a "Vet." Get the citrate, he was advised, dissolve a tablespoonful in 8ozs. of water, and give a teaspoonful in the water. It costs about 1s. per ounce. He lost no more birds, and bred about 30 young ones from what he had left. He got 1lb. caustic soda and filled a sheep dipping tub with boiling water, and dipped his cages in. The result of this is, they come out like new ones. Any one using it wants to be very careful it does not splash on to their clothes, or the result will be a burnt hole. He disinfected his place, and did all his cages out with lime, and now has got perfectly clear. He has been to see several in the same predicament, and all who have followed his advice have had the same result. He told me it was surprising the number who had the fever in one shape or another; he knew about a dozen. But the majority try to keep the matter quiet. I turned what birds I had left all lose in one room, covering the floor well with sawdust, and got some of the iron and quinine and gave them it for about ten days without a break; it is now a month ago, and I have not lost a bird since. Before that I had lost about 90. He was of the opinion that I had the fever, but in a mild form, for mine had been going on for months, while his was only for a few weeks. I had a few that were commencing, and they came alright. Before that I never had one that, having started, got better. Quinine is used a lot on the Gold Coast for fevers, and iron is a good tonic. If it is a good medicine for fanciers, why is it not so for his birds?

The Dreaded Septic Fever.

SIR,—I was very much impressed with your correspondent's letter relating how he lost his birds. I am only a beginner, but have had some little success, and to show my sympathy I will gladly send "Not Disheartened" a pair of Yorkshire hens from Bailey's and Ambler's strains.

J. COCKBURN DYSON.

SIR,—Your correspondent's (Mr. G. F. Neve's) letter, offering me a Norwich hen to enable me to make another start, came as a great surprise to me. It only proves the sympathy which many fanciers have for their more unfortunate brethren. I am deeply grateful to him, and also to your very interesting paper, CAGE BIRDS, for the valuable assistance I have received from time to time.

NOT DISHEARTENED.

SIR,—In CAGE BIRDS, September 25, I see a letter by "Not Dishcartened" concerning this dreaded disease. I can most heartily sympathise with your correspondent, for I had a spell of it myself some twenty years ago, losing nearly 100 birds in those days, all of them going off quickly. The strangest part of it was that I had had no fresh birds in to "give mine the fever" in any way. Neither had I seen any other fancier's birds, and so have brought the disease away with me. It caused a lot of discussion at the time, and I believe that from that discussion a lot of good resulted.

The Removal of Bird-lime.

SIR,—Your printer made my remark upon the Siskin to read "Aberdavat" instead of Aberdevine; also "vaseline" should have read "benzoline." As to the merits of the latter for removing bird-lime, I demonstrated them at Dulwich by putting limed sticks on the back of a hen Linnet and then quickly removing all trace of the sticky substance. Petrol (which is cheaper) would also answer, just gently rubbed on with a small pad of cotton wool, or rag.

Colour Food from South Africa.

Proposed Interesting Experiment.

SIR,—Being a subscriber for many years to your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, I trust you will allow me a little space in same for the purpose of obtaining a little information. Some months back I saw several articles on the very important question of colour feeding, and explaining the difference between the different kinds of chile of which the feeding is manufactured If my memory serves me correctly, I believe the greater bulk of the colour-feeding is imported from Spain, presuming the old country climate is not suitable for the growing of the chile. It has been long on my mind that our African climate would be suitable for growing this particular article, but I have never been able before to try it. However, I have recently removed to where I have a little ground, and have decided to give same a trial. Now, the information I am seeking is: after the chile has got ripe and been gathered, can our worthy friend, Mr. Ramsden, or any other brother fancier, tell me how the chile is dried—by the sun and wind, or by artificial heat? also what kind of a machine is used for grinding it up? If this information can be furnished, I shall be greatly obliged. I have planted a good bed of the sweet Spanish chile, as an experiment, and after I have given it a fair trial, I shall write you further, and let you know the result. If it proves satisfactory (of which I have no doubt), I intend to put the matter into some-one's hands who has plenty of land at his disposal. I have no doubt there will be a market for this article in the old country.

The Glasgow Derby Prize Money.

Are the Expenses too High?

SIR,—The annual business meeting of the above society will be held shortly. In the interim I wish to voice the feeling of many members that the expenses of the annual show are heavy. For instance, what is the use of a catalogue when the labels on the cages would do equally well? A cheaper hall, too, would do, and the first-cross classes could be dispensed with; there was a poor show. Ten shillings is too little for first prize. Let us aim at something higher. Another thing, it would have been better not to have had home judges.

Robbie Burns Not Guilty!

SIR,—In reply to our friend "Scot," who seemed to put himself out in order to "pull my leg" in last week's CAGE BIRDS, because I unfortunately gave Burns the honour of uttering the words of a great English poet, I beg to express my heartiest thanks. That is the worst of those "ragged schools" which I, in my earlier days, attended; our clothes were of such a pattern that such "stuff" as poetry fell through the crevices, as it were. Personally, the only explanation I can offer is this, that the quotation was one which fitted in with my remarks. I had no idea that such critics as friend "Scot" laid in wait for any trivial mistake any unfortunate lecturer makes who goes miles to try and entertain brother fanciers.

A Slating for the Modern Norwich Plainhead.

"Duck and Wagtail" Types.

SIR,—I was thinking of going in for a few Norwich Plainheads again, so I went to Longton Show last Saturday to see what was there, with the intention of buying a few birds. But, alas! I was surprised to find birds winning that were only fit for stock birds, and not very good for that. The shape—well you should have seen them, with square fronts like a duck and feathers like the Crest-bred, and tails like Wagtails'. It reminded me of about fifteen years ago, or more than that. Then, if you had a very large bird with plenty of colour, never mind how much feather, nor what shape, nor how much tail it had, it would win. In later years they got better, when the Norwich Plainhead Club was formed; we did get some typical Norwich of proper Bullfinch type. I should like to know what the Norwich Plainhead Club is doing to allow such birds to be put in the money that are only worth a few shillings. What is the reason of this changing of type so very often—is it to suit a few? Type and quality of feather should come first, then size and colour. Of course, this is my opinion of judging a typical Norwich Plainhead. Mr. Editor, you give use some grand sketches of Norwich Plainheads in your valuable paper at times—what I should call ideal Norwich—but when you go to a show they are anything but what you have been illustrating in your paper, CAGE BIRDS, as what a Norwich should be. You don't show us Norwich with horns and frills like some that were winning last Saturday. Until there is a settled type I shall not entertain the idea of going in for the Fancy again.

Can Chaffinch-Bramblefinch Hybrids be Bred in Cages?

SIR,—Can any of your readers tell me if it is possible to breed Chaffinch-Bramblefinch Hybrids in a cage? I would like to try that cross next season, but am told that it is impossible to do so in a cage. I have a steady hen Bramble, and a this-year's hand-reared cock Chaffinch. Or would a wild-caught Chaffinch be better for the purpose? I am told that all the specimens obtained so far have been bred in aviaries.

The Breeding and Keeping of Mealworms.

SIR,—Seeing the various letters in CAGE BIRDS concerning the breeding of mealworms, I should be very much obliged if any of your correspondents could tell me how to keep mealworms. I am only just starting in the fancy, so have not yet enough birds to require the breeding of worms, but it is very difficult to obtain a regular small supply of them. I purchased about 600 through the columns of your paper, and as these will last my stock a long time, I should be glad to know how to keep them. Also about how many a day should be given to the birds?

A Cup Matter.

SIR,—Respecting the Reddihough Cup, value £5 5s., Rule 2 of the above Association states: Member counting most points after the last show to hold the cup for the year. I called upon the winner of this cup for 1909 and 1910, and was surprised to learn that he had not yet seen the cup referred to. The previous winner, I find, was in exactly the same position. If my information is correct, the position is that this particular cup has not been in the possession of the two last winners. In looking over my schedule for the coming City of Glasgow show, I find it is again forward for competition. Does this cup exist only in the imagination? Surely not. Perhaps some member of the U.K.B.A. who has seen this particular cup can enlighten us on the subject.

The Scottish British Bird and Mule Club's Patronage.

SIR,—I notice a letter signed "Old Member" in last week's CAGE BIRDS, and he, like Mr. Farmer, draws Mr. Watson's report "very mild" in saying that it was a false report, or an untrue statement, that Mr. Watson, the secretary of the above club, sent to you. I may say that I have another name for the report other than "false" or "untrue"; I would term it "a faked report," and one which, I think, is more hurtful to the club than to its advantage. It might have passed alright had Mr. Farmer taken no notice of it. He begs to differ from Mr. Watson on the record application for the club's patronage. I fully expected to see Mr. Watson substantiating his report, or otherwise apologising. Surely there is good cause for the other officials of the club to investigate the matter, as I consider a faked report even worse than a faked Bullfinch or Yellowhammer (at Bathgate or Glasgow and West of Scotland, for which the exhibitors were expelled from the club for life). What awaits Mr. Watson, the secretary, for his faked report? I hope an abler pen than mine will discuss the question of "Faked Reports versus Faked Feathers—What is the Difference?"

JUSTICE.

The Clashing of Ayrshire Shows

SIR,—I think it is time something was being done in Ayrshire to prevent the clashing of shows when a society, only 16 miles away from another, deliberately fix on the same date as that one. Only last year (our first year) we (Ayr and District C.B.C.) fixed on November 7th for our open show, and we advertised it every week from April till date of show in your "Show Dates Fixed" column. Imagine our chagrin when on the month of October a society 20 miles from here advertised the same show date. Our Secretary was instructed to draw the society's attention to the fact, but his letter was treated with silent contempt. However, we came out on top. This year we fixed our date, and, mark you, changed it a week earlier to avoid a recurrence of the same, and only this week (October 2nd) we find the same thing again with a society only 16 miles away; and our date, too, has been fixed and advertised every week since April. Now, what price this? Is it purely coincidence or something worse? Surely common sense might show those responsible how much better the entry would be at both shows if they were on different dates? Our members would then have a chance to support their show, and their members could support ours. However, if it is too late to alter the date now, we can only say the fault is not at our door, and I hope to see exhibitors keep this in mind when the entry time comes on.

ROBERT MCKAY.

Linnet Finds a Cosy Corner for the Winter.

SIR,—Many of your readers may be interested in the following facts respecting the habits of a wild Linnet, which for the second year has made its winter home on the cage of a Canary in a public bar. This account is from a Nottingham paper of September 21 date, to which it was sent by a Mr. Walker. About this time last year the Linnet flew through the open window and settled on the cage occupied by a Canary, and, finding food galore for its winter requirements, decided to sink its nervous instincts and forsake the hedgerows for a life of ease and plenty for at least a few months. Its habits were most regular, flying away in the morning and returning several times during the day, but always it came home to roost at night, until New Year's Day of this year, when it forgot to return. Now the winter is again approaching, it has once more returned to its "unnatural" but comfortable winter quarters, making itself at home as was its wont last year. I may say that it can be seen any day, and almost any time, in the public bar of the General Cathcart, Corporation Road.

NOTTINGHAM LAMB.

"Going Light": Can it be Cured?

SIR,—Since penning my letter on "Going Light" in a July number of CAGE BIRDS, several correspondents have given some advice and stated remedies. Regarding the advice of Mr. Waterman to use Fellowes' Syrup of Hypophosphates, I have not tried this on British birds, I may say. I expected to have seen more letters on this disease, and possibly a cure; also some advice from the medical fanciers. As regards the Epsom salts suggestion, I often use this for both Canaries and British birds when I see them at all "dicky"; also the milk sop in various ways, both "fresh" and "sour," besides all the natural seeds and foods I can supply in the earlier stage of the disease. The lives of the birds may be prolonged by their use, but in the end, in my case, the birds generally died, and were a mass of bones, although apparently eating to the last. Many birds have died in the seed drawer. Condy's Fluid I have tried in various ways. This at one time I thought did check the disease, and I persevered with it for some weeks, particularly in regard to British birds; but I found out at last that it was not a cure to recommend. I see by some of the letters that a gentleman has found a cure which I hope may, when well tried, be all that is stated. A "vet" advised me to try two or three drops in "turps" daily for a week; this I did, but was not satisfied with the results. I have also tried a few drops of carbolic in the drinking water for some two months, and this did no good at all. Neither did it kill the birds, however, although in the case of one Greenfinch I kept increasing the drops till I made it quite strong; that is about one to 20. Cod liver oil I have also tried on both Canaries and British birds; I have used it mixed with soft food (both eggs and bread and milk). I might repeat that all glasses, etc., were kept clean, and the cage bottom had plenty of sand and shell gravel, and sometimes all mortar for the birds to peck over. Perhaps we may yet hear of something to check and cure this fatal disease. Whether the sulphur cure as recommended for Canaries by a Birmingham correspondent would have the desired effect, I am not able to say, but I have faith in it and think it well worth a trial. Sulphur I have used in the soft food for some weeks on trials, but was not at all satisfied with that treatment. Various stimulants, too, I have given in the water as a pick-me-up for years now, which has often had good results when used at once on my seeing a bird "thick." In closing, I must thank your numerous readers and those who have written on the subject, and I hope we may yet hear of a certain cure for "Going Light."

NIMROD.

The Cuckoo in Captivity.

And other Interesting Topics.

SIR,—I thought perhaps you might like to see and, if practicable, reproduce the photograph of my Cuckoo. It was taken by an amateur, indeed, by the "boy scout," Dick Smith, who brought the bird to me last year. It may also be of some interest to Mr. W. J. B. Hopkins to know that this bird feeds itself and has done so ever since it was two or three months old. Its eyes are now turning of a yellowish tint, especially when it is angry. It is at the present time still moulting, as you can see by the photograph. The young bird is progressing favourably, too. He is much larger and stronger than the other, and really says "Cuckoo" quite clearly, whereas the older one only says "Cuck-cuck-Cuckoo" in a guttural tone. I have thought when comparing them they are of different sexes; if so, I hope I shall keep them both through the coming winter. These birds have little peculiarities. First, the feet are like those of a Parrot, so that in walking along a rope or perch they continually turn with a swift motion somewhat in the fashion of a tight-rope walker; the leg they turn on is thicker and stronger than the other one. They do not bathe like other birds, but always appear glossy and clean, and the eye is not so round, but more of a button-hole shape. I have never seen either of them put their heads under their wings; they only draw the head down into the shoulders to sleep. I notice that they are restless at night just now, and somewhat drowsy in the day, so that I have wondered if they fly by night only, when they take their long journeys. I leave a little light at night that they may see to regain the perch should they lose it. The old one will stand firmly on his perch and flap his wings at a tremendous rate for a long time together; he does not do this in the day-time. One thing I should like to correct: it was not Cuckoo nestlings that my Thrush and Chaffinch reared, but Thrush nestlings; they were just pen-feathered birds, not able to leave the nest, and they were reared on the same food I give all my Softbills, including my Skylarks, namely, bread soaked in cold water and pressed lightly through the hand, barley meal and sharps in equal quantities to bring it to a crumbly nature, and a very little hemp seed crushed, varied with Spratt's chicken meal scalded, instead of the bread. I sometimes add chopped lettuce, scraped carrot, potato, watercress, or cut grass. The Thrush was feeding them all day, and I gave also scraps of cooked or raw meat, eggs, etc., but nothing alive whatever. I often called her down for some tit-bits after the little ones were, as I thought, asleep for the night, and she would caper about and wake them up and give them every morsel till she became quite thin. I reared all my birds from the nest last summer and these were: Blackbirds, Thrushes, Skylarks, Greenfinches, Yellowhammers, Chaffinches, Brown Linnets, Starlings, and Cuckoos. I never feed any of them on worms, mealworms, or the like. The Miss Sergeant's Tame Cuckoo.

Thrushes and Blackbirds get an occasional snail, but very rarely. They all look healthy, and are coming through the moult well; the Blackbirds are singing, the Thrushes are beginning to, and also the Skylark. I trust they will all train my two little Brown Linnets properly; they will have plenty of schoolmasters, including a lovely Robin that comes and sings to them every day, even perching on their cages. I read CAGE BIRDS with great interest, and take many a lesson from it, and find so many questions I should have liked to ask answered. I have read about the fatal disease, and if I might venture to say so, I have wondered if the egg, bread or flakes may have been made with bad or stale eggs. And the mixtures with dried flies; how are the flies caught? The numberless fly papers about at this season give one the thought that the flies may have had poison. I agree with your correspondent who gets his wife to bake his egg bread, and believe it would be as well to be your own "fly-catcher": at least, you could then be sure the flies had not been dead for two or three years. The Cuckoos (returning to the first subject), are not eating all day long, but make stated meals. They take the food up by the extreme tip of the beak, passing it backwards and forwards; then they toss it up and catch it. They like a large basin of water with a thick rim on which to perch while they drink. They are capable of defending themselves against a cat, and cry like a frightened child for help. They are not friendly together, and I think the younger one would be spiteful to small birds, as he pounced upon and caught a little Linnet by the scruff of its neck and shook it to and fro. When they are in perfect plumage ("if ever") I will send you a good photograph of them both.

Several Letters unavoidably held over.

Under the White Rose.

SANDY Lane opened the show season in Yorkshire on Saturday last, and were rewarded with a respectable entry, an immense gate, and last, but not least, a lovely day. The birds throughout appeared to be in fair good trim; some of course were a bit "penny" about the head and were liable when handled too much to be a bit slack under; also a few were nervous and rather slow in action. Another week or two will put them right.

THE three young ladies who attended to the tea department had a warm time of it. The birdy men can, as they say in Yorkshire, "shift it," especially those who had walked over the hills. Never mind, ladies, it will bring a little more profit.

THE Y.C.C. and the C.M.Y.C.C. both opened their competitions at this show, as of course did also the Yorkshire Union. Next week, at Queensbury, the N.G.M.Y.C.C. (do you know what this is?) open their competitions, and as this is a new venture it will be watched with great interest, the hen classes, perhaps, more particularly so.

I HEAR that the Laisterdyke Show is to be moved back to the old place, and as this room is absolutely one of the best to be had for both birds and visitors, I think the society are taking a good step. Then the novices are to have an extra class put on, which should do a little towards the success of the venture.

BRADFORD City are next week providing teas for the visitors, and as this show is rather a bad place at which to obtain eatables (usually necessitating going into town and wasting perhaps an hour, which is rather more than a birdy man can spare when visiting a show), it is sure to be appreciated.

THE Green breeders of Liverpool had better be on the look-out: it is said that a Bradford fancier has succeeded in colour feeding a Cinnamon Yorkshire into a Green one, and fit to put down on the show-bench at that. My word!

I ALSO hear that some big prices are to be had for good bird; £8, £9, and suchlike deals are getting very numerous.

Wild Bird Life.

The Gathering of the Doves.

One of the most interesting sights of bird life at the present time is that of the big flocks of Turtle Doves to be seen in favoured localities. Several of these places are well known to me, and year after year without fail the birds gather together in September preparatory to migrating. One would think they might form flocks anywhere wherever sufficient birds chanced to meet, and have their numbers increased as they wander about; but this does not appear to be the case. They have special spots where year by year they gather, and these localities are well defined. One I have known many years; it is on the edge of a certain farm, with a few elm trees bordering the cart road to the hills. The birds are about there in increasing numbers for some days. If disturbed by guns they fly off to the woods on the hills, but are soon back again. This flocking generally goes on for ten days or a fortnight, when suddenly we miss the birds, and only a stray one or so is to be seen.

When they return to us again in the Spring we notice no such flocks—just two or three about in the fields, or it may be, half a dozen; and then, after a time, pairs and single birds, followed later by the family flocks, which are never very large, as two eggs to a clutch are all the hen birds lay. Some authorities assert that the Turtle Dove is double-brooded, but I have never seen any sign of a second brood, and I have known the bird and his ways nearly all my life. It is thought the Turtle Doves pair for life, which may be so, for no two birds are more attached to each other. Charles Dixon asserts that he saw them in pairs while staying in Algeria during the winter months, when they would, of course, be on migration and not nesting. In addition to this, certain trees and bushes are tenanted by a pair year after year.

To Protect the Figs.

In the South of England where figs are grown rather extensively, they have to be protected at this time of the year from the birds. This is done by tying them up in small muslin bags made just large enough to contain the fruit. The chief depredators are Warblers and Starlings.

Where Sparrows are Plentiful.

Sparrows are so abundant in some parts of America that some men make a good living by catching them and securing the bounty offered by local bodies. One man has been known to take as many as one thousand in a single day, and as collected as many as ten thousand from one spot in one of the public parks.

Bird Migration.

The increase in the number of observers of wild bird life has not yet provided a key to the mystery of migration, or explained the impulses which drive some of the smallest and weakest of birds across miles of sea twice during the year. The bird after all is a swift-winged creature, and makes little of long distances. The fact that they are continually swarming across the seas suggests that the migration journeys to them may be fairly natural ones.

Little "Dolly Gray."

I had a little Redpoll,
I called it Dolly Gray,
It used to whistle merrily
Throughout the livelong day.
But now I am heartbroken,
For when feeding it to-day,
I left the cage-door open,

Sent by Harry Walton (age 12), 110, Holly Park Road, New Southgate.

*The Tame Canary.

I have a Norwich cock Canary, which is so tame that I often let him out of his cage to fly about the room. He will feed from my hand or mouth, and perches on my arm, head, or shoulder. He is a good singer, and joins in when he hears the piano played. He is fond of a bit of groundsel or apple. When he is flying about the room, however, he is very tiresome if we have a vase of flowers, for he will go and peck at them. He likes to stand on the window sill and look out, and his name is "Cheri."—Sent by A. Edwards (age 13), The Rectory, Aberffraw, Anglesey.

*A Mischievous Parrot.

A lady went to a servants' registry office, and was shown into a room which was to all appearances empty. Hardly had she taken a seat when to her great surprise a shrill voice demanded: "What do you want? Cook?" "Oh, no," stammered the lady, "a housemaid." She failed to see the speaker, "How much do you give?" continued the strong voice. The lady gave a start, and took another long look round the room. This time she discovered a beautiful Grey Parrot, seated on its perch, with its mischievous bright eyes fixed upon her.—Sent by Marie Smith (age 13), 90, Richmond Villas, Penkhull, Stoke-on-Trent.

Kindly note that I have removed from Camberwell, writes Mr. W. J. Hammond, to Sunningvale Avenue, Biggin Hill, Kent.

I should be very pleased, writes Mr. W. H. Bray, secretary of the Coventry Godiva C.B.S., if fanciers will think of us this time, as it is our first show venture so early in the season. Schedules have been sent out to all old exhibitors. Specials will appear in catalogue; they include a gold centre silver medal for best bird in British bird section, also Sandiford's special for hottest fed bird. Class 25 in schedule should read: Greenfinch, not "Granfinch" as printed. We hope to have a bumping entry.

Plymouth Jubilee Show should be borne in mind by exhibitors. The classification is a splendidly extended one (80 classes in all), while in addition to four money prizes (10s., 6s., 4s., and 2s.), for a 1s. 6d. entry fee, there are no fewer than 80 good special prizes (these not including those confined to members of specialist clubs). Entries close on October 9th. No cancelling or amalgamation of classes, full prize-money in every class, payment of prize-money on first day of show—these are points which should commend themselves to exhibitors.

The Burglary at Crook.

Respecting the hurglary at Mr. Dawson's bird-room last week, writes Mr. A. Bowes, the police have been very active this week-end, and have traced the whole of the Canaries, also about half a dozen persons in connection with the robbery. But unfortunately half the birds were dead when recovered; 8 alive and 8 dead. Every credit is due to the local police for the smart manner in which they have followed up the clues. I will send the full court proceedings next week.

Echoes from Paisley.

That the seventeenth annual exhibition of Scotch Fancy Canaries drew a large turn-out of fanciers from all parts of Scotland; that there was a big decrease in entries from previous years; that David's huff pied hen won the special and cup, another proof of its title to be the best bird of the year; that there is still room left for the Glasgow Cup; that this performance is a record; that we are proud of the champion huff pied hen; that Mac. was runner-up, winning the silver medal, with a yellow pied cock of great merit; that the show was of a high standard; that Lesmahagow and Cokerhill did well; that the secretary had all in apple-pie order.—SCOTCH FANCY.

The N.B.B. and M.C. Show Cage.

At the last meeting of the National British Bird and Mule Club, exception was taken by some of the members to the position of the water-hole in the club's standard cage for Hardhills. They preferred to have it in the centre of the wire-front rather than at the right-hand side as in the approved pattern illustrated in CAGE BIRDS some time ago. It was pointed out that the standard cage was only a suggestion to members (a pattern put forward to try and secure some sort of uniformity on the show-hench), which they were quite at liberty to adopt or not, as they chose. They need not use the cage at all (that is, it was not compulsory so to do), and if they adopted it they could still modify it by having either water-hole or seed-trough in any desired position; or they could use seed-drawers instead of the plain trough. It was decided to have these facts made clear to fanciers generally through the Fancy Press.

Cock Canaries at Low Prices.

Some time ago we drew attention to the fact that certain advertisers were offering cock Canaries through our columns at very low prices—prices at which, it has been represented to us, genuine cocks cannot be sold (gauged by current market prices) except at a loss. As we said then, we would say again now, that, of course, it is only fair to make it clear that while high price affords no absolute guarantee of sex, nevertheless, cock birds have always a certain market value below which it is extremely improbable they would be offered for sale. We receive a very considerable number of small advertisements each week, into the bona-fides of the senders of which it is not possible for us to inquire—there is no possible system by which the genuine hargains amongst them can be sifted from low-priced offers deliberately designed as "catches." Therefore, when readers come across advertisements, especially if temptingly worded, which offer "cock" birds for an exceedingly low sum, they should take every precaution to ensure themselves getting birds according to description, and not hens masquerading as "cocks."

"Our Ladder of Progress" Competition.

Final Placings.

The final placings in our "Ladder of Progress" Competition are: First Prize (£4 cash), Mr. J. H. Lewis, Parkside, Oswestry, who sent in 472 signatures; Second Prize (£1 cash), Mr. J. Forster, 42, Kingston Street, Darlington, 270 signatures; Third Prize (pair of framed plates), Mr. C. Craig, 4, Wardlaw Terrace, Edinburgh, 156 signatures; Consolation Prize (pair of framed plates), Mr. W. Roberts, 55, Haywood Street, Shelton, Stoke-on-Trent. The second prize was originally announced as won hy Mr. Craig, hut a demand for a scrutiny has revealed the right of Mr. Forster to that position. A number of Mr. Forster's coupons were wrongly credited to a brother fancier on whose behalf he sent to us a notice of a change of address. We have given Mr. Roberts an extra prize as some consolation for being displaced from the third position. Will Messrs. Craig and Roberts kindly let us know whether they would like any special variety of Canary (or other birds) to figure in their framed plates?

REMARKABLE TESTIMONY

Letters Which Tell Their Own Tale.

With two advertisements in your paper, CAGE BIRDS, I have had considerable success, writes Mr. W. Watkinson (Flixton), and I am convinced that "C.B." is a good medium.

Am pleased to say, writes Mr. A. F. Morrison (Dorset), that I have sold all the birds I had for sale; when I have any more to sell I shall not omit to advertise in CAGE BIRDS again.

The show cages I advertised in the Norwich column of CAGE BIRDS, were sent for hy the first post, and were sold to a local fancier, writes Mr. Mallett (West Ham). There were many other applications.

You will be pleased to know, writes Mr. C. Dell (Harlesden), that the last advertisement I had in CAGE BIRDS was most satisfactory. I got inquiries from all parts, and soon disposed of all the birds advertised.

I wish CAGE BIRDS every success, writes Mr. A. C. Haynes (Leeds), as one always gets straightforward dealings from its readers, and I have always been suited in sales and exchanges brought about hy your journal.

Many thanks to CAGE BIRDS for such a large number of applications in reply to my advertisement in last week's issue. They were too numerous for me to answer hy post.—TOM MOSCROP (Gateshead).

I always get good results when I advertise in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. W. H. Criddeford (Honiton). I wish to thank all who answered my advertisement. So many were they, I really could not answer all. This speaks well for your valuable paper.

Am again pleased to inform you, writes Mr. John Martin (Castle-Douglas), that I am having a grand sale for my show cages, etc., this season, through advertising in the columns of CAGE BIRDS, and I consider it the most up-to-date journal for bird-lovers.

I have removed from Stoke Newington, N., writes Mr. H. Sweetman, to 35, Willoughby Lane, Park Lane, Tottenham. Owing to my receiving so many offers to exchange through my advertisement in last week's CAGE BIRDS, I could not reply to all. Will readers kindly accept this?

Allow us to thank you for your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, as we have sold some of every kind of hird (British and foreign) we have advertised, write Messrs. Dearlove and Allen (Hull). We have had a great many orders from far and near, and they are still "rolling" upon us.

I am pleased to tell you I had plenty of answers to my last advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. W. J. Stagg (Birmingham), and also visitors to see the hird, and as a working man I thank you very much, and wish CAGE BIRDS every success. Kindly thank those who answered my advertisement, as I had no time to write them.

By my last few advertisements in CAGE BIRDS I have cleared the whole of my stock (140 Crests, Norwich, and Yorkshire, show cages, cases, hreeders, and flights), and I am now giving up the Fancy for a time on account of my health. But I hope to take it up again after I have had a holiday. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success, and I shall always read it, as I find it is the very hest paper to advertise in.—J. BROWN (Wood Green).

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Outdoor Birdhouse.

W.J.A.—If you had said how and of what the bird-house is constructed, or had even enclosed a rough sketch of it, I should have been in a much better position to advise. It is important to know at least whether the structure consists chiefly of wire netting, exposing the birds to the elements, or is of solid brick or wood. The house will accommodate from 36 to 40 birds flying loose, and without any breeding going on. If you wanted the birds to breed during the summer, two good lusty young males and from four to six hens were ample to start with. If the structure is chiefly open wire, it would certainly be an advantage to partition off three feet at one end and make this portion of solid walls with glazed windows, and well ventilated, opening into the outer flight. This closed portion should be always accessible as a shelter from the weather, and as a nesting and roosting place. The Roller is quite the best breed for purely singing purposes, but you must be quite sure the birds you get for an outdoor house of this kind are cold-bred and quite hardy. Cold-bred Border Fancies, Norwich or Yorkshires, or hens of either of these breeds and Roller cocks, would also be very suitable.

Obstinate Diarrhœa.

L.R.—First of all look into the quality and condition of your seeds, and see also whether they are cleanly stored, and free from contamination by mice, etc. The rape especially, you should take care to see is good, and not infested with a mite, which frequently infests poor samples. If either of these causes is found to exist, you must, of course, change seeds at once. See the water supply is quite pure; if any doubt exists about it, boil all before use, and keep all food and water vessels scrupulously clean. Keep cages and perches very clean, cover cage floor with pine sawdust, which burn at once when removed from cage. A few drops of Condy's fluid brushed over cage flood once or twice a week would help greatly in keeping them sweet and clean. Feed on a diet of plain canary, and give half a teaspoonful of summer rape per bird every day, and a pinch of hemp three times a week. Two or three times a week also give a small piece of banana, but no green food at present. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts (that sold in packets as salts and sarsaparilla) as will cover a sixpence, daily for three days, and after this twenty drops of whisky, five of laudanum, and a piece of gum arabic the size of a small pea every second day until the diarrhœa ceases. Shake latter until gum is dissolved, and on the alternating days give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid, continuing this for a few days after looseness is stopped.

Age for Separation.

H.E. (Kent).—Your question is rather vague. It is not always possible to leave young in the breeding cage until quite able to leave the nest owing to the vices of wicked parents who, in such a case, would strip them of their natural covering. I assume, however, your old birds have been more rational minded than this, and you left the young with them. In that case remove them, or at least separate them from parents by a wire slide, as soon as the hen has gone to nest again, to prevent their causing trouble by interfering with the nesting arrangements. If it is the last brood, which, by the bye, should have been off the parents' care before this time, the hen should be removed to a flight as soon as the young are well away from nest, and the cock left in charge of the young a few days longer until they are beginning to crack Canary seed easily. When put by themselves, give them unlimited Canary as a staple, add a little dry summer rape separately each day, and for a few days continue to give a small quantity of the usual egg-food, with only about half the usual proportion of egg in it; or, as a substitute you may give for variety a little crushed dry biscuits, sponge or madeira cake, or bread sopped in milk and sprinkled with a little maw seed and soft sugar. Give no succulent green food for the first day or two, and then begin with such things as the half-ripened stalks of plantain, shepherd's-purse, and seedy sprays of chickweed, gradually going on to the usual greenstuff given to the adults. Keep them scrupulously clean, particularly the food and water vessels, and the cage floors strewn with clean gritty sand, and a piece of cuttlefish stuck in the wires

Wintering Stock Birds.

Nunquam.—As they are cold bred, if they have not been used to heat since, I certainly advise you to keep them through the winter in the bedroom. Judging from your sketches, I should imagine the kitchen anything but void of draughts, which is a very serious drawback. On the other hand, the bedroom must be very free from this fault, and if it is also dry (free from dampness), it should form a very good place. The best position would be somewhere about the centre of the west wall, especially if this happens to be an inside wall—that is, a wall abutting on other premises, and not exposed to the elements—in the latter case there is a likelihood of its being damp, and subject to great fluctuation, when the centre of the south wall would be preferable. The latter position takes only secondary rank on account of being much farther away from the window, and thus gets less light. If the room underneath the bedroom has a fire burning in it regularly, do not heat the bedroom at all. Keep birds separate in box cages, but the cages may be hung side by side. Feed on a staple of three parts Canary and one part summer rape mixed together. once or twice a week give each half a teaspoonful of egg food, or an equivalent quantity of bread and milk; once or twice a week a pinch of a mixture of maw, inga, gold of pleasure, and hemp, in equal parts; and twice a week in mild weather give a little green food, but be sure it is not nipped with frost—at other times substitute a little sweet fruit for the green food.

Aviary Questions.

E.H.B.—You will not be able to do much in the breeding line in the portion of shed at your disposal. The proposed flight as it stands will only accommodate four or five birds. If, instead of making a single flight, you made three flight cages, each 40 inches long, 14 inches deep (back to front), and 18 inches high, and stacked these in a tier one above the other, beginning from a little stage fifteen inches from the ground, you would be able to keep four birds in each cage, or twelve in all. On the opposite wall you should proceed on the same principle, but instead of the flights, put up three tiers of single breeding cages—say, 20 inches long, 12 deep, and 16 high. This would enable you to start a few inches higher from the ground, and you would have six breeding cages to accommodate the same number of pairs. You could keep Goldfinches, Linnets, Redpolls, and Siskins with your Canary hens. during the winter. Other kinds are not reliable, being sometimes very spitefully disposed in such small quarters. The best way I can see for you to ventilate the shed would be to cut out an oblong piece one foot wide, and eight inches deep, over the top of the window, and near the highest part of roof, and another similar piece over the door. Nail a piece of wire gauze or perforated zinc securely over the holes, and fix a sliding wooden shutter over them inside, which can be opened or closed at will. You need to keep a sharp look out for rats and mice.

A Wheezy Yorkshire.

W. H. Stone.—It seems clear the bird had been used to a warmer temperature than yours, and I doubt whether after this lapse of time you will make much improvement. Anyway, try what a few weeks of the following treatment will do. Keep it in a box cage to avoid draughts as much as possible, and place it in a comfortable temperature—not necessarily overheated, but still on the warm side—where the warmth is regular and equable day and night, and at the same time let the position be well ventilated, and not exposed to draughts or foul air. Feed on a diet of plain Canary as a staple, and give every second day half a teaspoonful of summer rape. Twice a week, on days when you are not giving rape, give a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, or as an occasional variant give a small piece of bread soaked in milk, pressed nearly dry, and sprinkled with soft sugar. On two other days, give a pinch of a mixture of maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure, seeds. Give a little green food, or sweet fruit when greenstuff is out of season, each day. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence two days in every three for a week, and after this twenty drops of whisky, ten of glycerine, five of tincture of lobelia, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a week, and on the alternate days twenty drops of port wine and ten of malt extract. Continue this every alternate week for a month or six weeks, and if bird is not considerably better, write again, referring to this reply.

Insect or Maggot?

An Old Reader of "Cage Birds."—I cannot venture to guess what was the identity of the insect. Was it about the head or beak, and did it probably come from the beak, or are similar creatures found in the droppings? Also, have you any poultry about the premises suffering, or which have recently been suffering, from gapes? In the latter event, I should say your two birds have undoubtedly contracted the disease, and the maggot-like insect you found might be one of the gapeworms which had been ejected by coughing. In either case you had better keep these two birds separate from the others until cured. Keep cages scrupulously clean, and stick a cube of hard common table salt between wires for the birds to peck. Boil all water before use, and see all seeds, foods, and feeding and water vessels are thoroughly clean and free from contamination of any kind. Burn all debris removed from cages at once. Feed on a diet of three parts Canary to one part summer rape mixed together, and give a little bread and milk sprinkled with a little soft sugar and maw seed twice a week, and a little green food on each of the other days. Be careful of the green food, and wash well before use if there is the least suspicion of this carrying the infection. In the drinking water give twenty drops whisky, ten of glycerine, and four of eucalyptus oil two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week. Encourage the bird to bathe freely each day, and add a few quassia chips to the water every second or third day for a time. Be careful to avoid any chill after bathing.

Not a Sound was Heard.

Kharki.—If you have not heard a note from him since you purchased him, although there are visible signs of efforts to "tweet" on his part, I should be rather inclined to think the bird dumb. I have known a few such cases, and do not think treatment of any use. If, on the other hand, the bird has previously sung, see it is kept free from chills and draughts, in a rather warm temperature, but where the warmth is quite regular, and the atmosphere always pure and fresh. Feed on a staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape, and twice a week give separately a pinch of a mixture of equal parts of gold of pleasure, inga, maw, yellow mustard, and hemp. Do not give egg food more than twice a week if you are not colour-feeding. You might with advantage stop egg food altogether for a time and give a little pasto made by well mixing as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence in a teaspoonful of honey; add six drops of cod-liver oil emulsion, and just sufficient finely crushed biscuit powder to make it into a soft paste. Give the bird a piece of this paste, the size of a small toy marble, stuck on the end of a perch three times a week. Give a little fresh green food, or a bit of banana as a substitute, every second day. Of course, this being the natural moulting time, you must not expect the bird to sing for a few weeks to come, but if it does not begin, say, in six weeks from the time it ceases dropping feathers, write again referring to this reply.

Sits Thick and Gapes.

Black.—The moult has evidently been rather a tax upon this bird, but with a little care for a week or two it should soon be alright again. I note you say it has not sung at all "since the moult," from which I assume the bird has already got through the moulting process. If this is so, see first that it is out of reach of draughts, and that it is in a position where the temperature is equable and the atmosphere pure and fresh, and free from damp. Reduce it to a staple of plain Canary in the hopper. Give separately a pinch of summer rape every second day, and twice a week a pinch of a mixture of equal parts maw, inga, gold of pleasure, and hemp seed. On two other days give a small piece of bread sopped in milk, pressed nearly dry, three drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar. Give a little green food, or a bit of banana, every second day, in alternation with the rape seed. Continue this feeding until the bird is well. See, by the way, that it is not pestered with red mites. In the drinking water give six drops each of syrup of rhubarb and syrup of buckthorn daily for three days, and after this give twenty drops of whisky, ten of glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together every second day for a week, or a little longer if it appear necessary. Remember it is rather early yet to expect a bird to resume singing after moulting, particularly birds that are a few years old.

A Question on Mating.

Westcott.—It is very difficult to forecast with any degree of certainty what the colour of progeny from your suggested matings will be without knowing whether your Greens contain Cinnamon blood, and vice versa, and in what proportion (if any) the blood is mixed. Assuming that in each case in giving the parentage of the birds you have mentioned the colour of the cock bird first, I should say the following matings—slightly different to your suggestion—would best fulfil your object. First pair, Nos. 1 and 2, should breed green selfs, with probably a few fouls, and, if they contain Cinnamon blood, a stray Cinnamon now and again. Second pair, Nos. 3 and 6, should breed a greater proportion of Cinnamon selfs than your suggested mating, especially if the Green parent of hen had Cinnamon blood in it. Third pair, Nos. 5 and 4. Result, a majority of heavily variegated and broken Greens, with a few green selfs, and an occasional clear. If you could replace the clear yellow cock with a broken yellow green, the result would probably be a majority of self Greens with a few stray broken greens. The last two pairs as they stand would doubtless breed Cinnamons and Greens, mostly broken or foul, but a fair proportion of selfs. All the Cinnamon and Cinnamon-marked birds would, however, almost to a certainty be hens. As you say you want to breed self Greens and Cinnamons, I would advise you to equalise your forces by replacing the self Cinnamon, No. 8, with a yellow Green self; breed from Greens to make another pair for breeding self Greens; and the self buff Green, No. 9, with a self buff Cinnamon, bred from Cinnamons, to make another pair for breeding Cinnamon selfs.

Brevities.

What Class? ("Molly").—The bird should be shown in the class for "ticked" birds, or the class which includes these birds, such as "ticked or marked," etc., and if the markings are of a light brown colour—that is, cinnamon colour—it would, of course, have to go in the class specially provided for "cinnamon-marked or ticked," if these are classified separately, as they often are, and not in the class for green-marked birds.

The Reason Why (T.N.Z.).—The reason why not a single egg of the 24 laid by your Canary hatched out was that they were sterile owing to the hen's being mated with the cock Mule. You seem not to be aware of the fact that Mule birds, save in a few rare instances, are barren, so that the only cause for marvel would have been if any of the eggs had produced young. As it is, your experience is just what you must always expect if you mate Mules, either between themselves or with another species. If you wish to rear young you must obtain a pure cock Canary to mate with the hen next year, or a pure cock Finch if you want to produce more Mules. Your feeding was faulty, so you had better keep your eye on our columns for information on this point before next season arrives; or, better still, get one of our handbooks on Canary breeding from our manager.

Judicial Separation (United).—Your method of dealing with the birds at the end of the breeding season and turning the sexes all together in a flight cage is certainly not judicious. There is then practically no separation or breaking up of breeding pairs at all. You ought to have put all the hens in one flight, and the cocks by themselves in another, thus keeping the sexes quite apart; and if you could manage to arrange the flights so that the birds in the one flight could not see those in the other, it would have been better. You should do this now without delay, and limit diet of the hens to plain Canary only, with a free supply of green food and a pinch of Epsom salts in the water every second day for a week. You must not dream of allowing the hens to attempt nesting again this year, no matter how anxious they may be to do so. You are probably mistaken in thinking the breeder did as you have done. Doubtless the hens were put all together and the cocks ditto, but the sexes in separate flights.

Diet for Yorkshire Songster (R.N.S.T.).—A plain, wholesome, and not over-stimulating diet is far the best. As a staple give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part of summer rape. Twice a week give a few grains of hemp, and on two other days a pinch of a mixture of equal parts maw, inga, teazle, gold of pleasure, and millet. About once a week give a crumb of sponge cake, a bit of bread soaked in milk, and sprinkled with soft sugar, or an equivalent quantity of egg food. In summer give a little green food daily—watercress, lettuce, groundsel, chickweed, dandelion, etc.—and in winter a little two or three times a week whenever it can be procured, quite free from frost. At other times give as a substitute a scrap of sweet fruit of any kind in season. Do not give all sorts of scraps from table. The above is an ample diet, and all that is needed.

Avine Surgical Instrument Maker (L. H. Druett).—Sorry, but such an official does not exist to my knowledge, probably because the post would prove too much of a sinecure. With a little ingenuity you could fashion an artificial leg out of a match stick by slitting one end so that it can be opened to just lightly grip on the stump of the leg, with a little cotton wool wrapped round to make the pressure as comfortable as possible, and then lightly bound round with very fine mending wool, and the other end clipped off precisely the same length as to the palm, so to speak, of the foot of the remaining leg. I have heard of many clever fanciers providing a wooden leg in this way, but, personally, I believe they only worry a bird, and hamper rather than help its movements. They soon get very clever at going about on one leg, and must be far more comfortable than when pestered with wooden stumps.

Coughs and Wheezes (A.M.).—If the room is really quite free from draughts, I fear it must be subject to extremes of heat and cold, or is damp. If so, you must either remedy it, or remove bird to another room where the temperature is more equable and the atmosphere drier, and pure and fresh. Add half a teaspoonful of summer rape to diet every second day, and on the alternate days give a little green food, or a bit of sweet fruit as a substitute. For the first week give in the drinking water six drops syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day, and during the next week twenty drops whisky, six of oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three. If the symptoms are not quite removed in that time, continue the last-named medicine every second day until the bird seems quite well.

Proper Way to Measure (Hybrid). — To measure the length of a Yorkshire is easier to describe than to do. For a novice, I think the following is by far the easiest and most reliable method: Get a strip of white paper, about an inch wide and a foot long—the margin of a page of CAGE BIRDS, for example—lay it on a table quite flat, catch the bird, place it with the breast in the palm of the left hand, with the fleshy part of the thumb gently pressing one wing to the bird's side, and the second an dthird fingers holding the other wing firmly in place, so that the bird cannot struggle. Hold the head with the tips of the thumb and first finger on each side, and leave the little finger free. Now, having the bird firmly held, lay it on its back on the centre of the strip of paper, place the little finger on top of the tail to keep it in place on the paper, make a pencil mark on paper at the tip of tail, then, keeping the neck to about its natural length (not stretched out unnaturally long), raise the other end of paper and turn it over the top of head and point of beak, making a slight pressure on point of beak so that the beak will make an impression on paper. Make pencil mark on this impression, release bird, and measure distance between the two marks. This will give the length, and though it seems a lot of unnecessary trouble, is the most correct and safest method.

Recurring Asthma ("Lucky").—The fact that the symptoms returned so soon after the bird was replaced in the flight seems to suggest that the flight is more exposed to draught or damp than the cage to which the bird was removed for treatment. It may, perhaps, be only a portion (the part in which this bird generally roosts) that is thus exposed. It is also probable the bird was returned too soon. Place him under same treatment again by himself, as before, and when all the symptoms are gone again still keep him alone, and on a plain but nourishing diet for a few weeks, during which time give six drops each tincture of gentian and aromatic sulphuric acid in the water twice a week. 1. He is not a source of danger. 2. When the complaint once gets firmly established it is not very curable. Amelioration is often all that can be done. When this is the case it is not advisable to breed with the patient. But as your bird has responded so well to treatment, I would advise you to give it a good chance of recovery this autumn and winter, and if the trouble does not crop up again, give him another trial in the breeding cage next season.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Concerns a Bramblefinch.

Tyro.—(1) A white mark (or break in the colour) underneath the lower mandible is certainly not a point in the favour of an exhibition Bramblefinch; on the contrary, it would count against the bird. The colour should be solid right up to the beak. This light break is often accompanied by light rings round the eyes ("spectacle eyes") and neither of these things commend themselves to me, personally, nor do they, I fancy, to other judges; (2) You cannot very well better the style of show cage recently adopted by the National British Bird and Mule Club, which is also suitable for any other Hardbill of similar size to the Bramblefinch. No. 2 size would suit very well. The N.B.B. and M.C. pattern cage is advertised by many makers in our columns (see under Appliances). Have it very dark green inside. (3) Privet berries are very good for a Bramblefinch and act as a colouring agent; so do bilberries.

The Case of a Bullfinch.

E.C.—The failure of the remedy mentioned may be due to the fact that your Bullfinch has not in reality got a cold at all. As I explained last week, Bullfinches and Bullfinch Hybrids (other birds, too) are apt to develop attacks of "gaping" and "wheezing" which cannot well be due to a cold, and I put it down to a "touch of the liver," "A congested state of the liver will cause panting," writes the late Dr. Greene, in one of his books; and this lamented fancier often told me the same thing. A dose or two of fluid magnesia (a small teaspoonful in a fluid ounce of water) has always put my birds to rights. A day's interval should be allowed between each dose. I give at the same time a good feed of lettuce (white) seed and maw seed. You can try this remedy, in the meantime feeding the hen plainly, avoiding hemp and giving but about half-a-dozen sunflower seeds daily. One of the best "cough" mixtures I know is: Oxymel of squills, liquor tolu, mucilage of gum acacia, and glycerine of each one drachm, water to three fluid ounces. Dose, one small teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of water.

Our German Cousins.

Anxious.—There seem to be plenty of "anxious" queriste about just now! There is certainly a considerable difference in the appearance of the plumage of the typical British and the typical German Goldfinch or what fanciers accept as such. But there are many genuine British-caught Finches which cannot be told from "Germans" (small Continental Goldfinches would be a better name), and many Finches imported from the Continent which cannot be told from the "British born and bred" article. These be hard facts! In the typical German Goldfinch the ground colour, so to speak, is very white (pure); there is no brown tinge on the cheeks (or only the faintest stain), at the back of the neck the "gash" of light-coloured plumage is often practically pure white, the buttons are pure white, and round the root of the tail and on the rump the feathers will also be found practically pure white. In the typical British Goldie, the cheeks are heavily "thumb-marked" with brown, the buttons are shaded with brown, and the plumage at the root of the tail is hardly at all white, whilst the light-coloured "gash" at the nape is distinctly brownish.

A Quartette.

R. W. G.—1. I should think either of the makers named would supply the regulation Fiuch stock cages as recommended by me. The price varies between three and four shillings, according to the size. Pay a fair price—a well-made cage is a long way the cheapest in the end—and have it at least 16 inches in length. 2. Young Goldfinches will not sing out strongly until they are getting well into full colour. Healthy youngsters, however, make quite a considerable noise "trying over" their song long before they show all their blaze. Many of my own I see sitting about tootling away for all they are worth; they are in the midst of the change from nestling to adult plumage. 3. The Linnet would sing, but both Goldie and Linnet would undoubtedly sing more freely if they each had a cage to themselves. 4. The Linnets would commence to sing as soon as properly settled down to cage life; the time taken varies with the individuals, some being much barder than others to steady.

Colours of Show Cages (Anxious).—There is one colour which suits all the British seed-eaters very well indeed—a very dark (holly) green; it must be very dark. This colour is widely used for Goldfinch, Mealy Redpoll, Linnet, and Bullfinch; also for Greenfinch and Siskin, though for these birds many exhibitors choose a very pale blue. Suit your own taste. Have the wires the same colour as the inside wood work.

In an Aviary (A Learner).—I find it hard to grasp the build of your aviary; a rough sketch would have been helpful. The pairs mentioned would be about the limit for a space of four square feet; you might add one pair of Canaries, or Twites. They should agree together. Give in the five hoppers, canary, hemp, teazle, sunflower, and a mixture of summer rape and charlock. The other usual seeds can be offered as "tit-bits" now and again; don't forget a good wild-seed mixture. I think the wire flight you speak of would be a useful and appreciated addition.

Bullfinches Nesting (Newly).—It certainly is astonishing that two Bullfinches should pair, build, and the hen lay eggs, although both birds are deep in the moult. It is a striking instance of the way in which individual birds can be guilty of the unexpected. Like yourself, I should doubt whether the eggs will prove fertile; in fact, the hen may not sit. Speculation seems out of place, however, concerning such birds as these! Please report the finish of this out-of-season marriage; it is highly interesting. I should certainly let them go ahead.

A Nuthatch (E. W.).—In a small aviary I should be chary of keeping a Nuthatch with small foreign birds, Canaries, etc., but in an enclosure 17 feet long by 7 feet wide and high I do not for a moment think a single bird would do any harm; a pair might be dangerous. A dozen spiders a day are not likely to harm any Nutbatch; you are lucky to be able to get them so readily.

Grey in Poor Condition.

R.B.D.—Give as much jalap as will cover a sixpence spread over the boiled corn, for one day only; after an interval of two days put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water, the one dose should be sufficient. After giving this, spot 10 to 20 drops of Parrish's Chemical Food over the boiled corn daily, and continue this for a month at least. Mingle some hemp and sunflower seeds with the dry corn; also supply ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in the cage, also crush some cuttlefish to the size of hemp seed and mix a little with the dry seeds. If you persevere with the fruit, etc., you will find the bird will ultimately take to them, and the result will be ultimate improvement. It is evidently in a low condition and must be carefully protected against draught, as a chill while it is in this condition would probably have a fatal result; at the same time, it must not be kept in a vitiated atmosphere. Report progress with full details in, say, ten days' time, as a slight change of treatment may then be necessary.

About a Grey Parrot.

Wakefield.—Provide a good-sized cage, say, 22 inches square by the same height. It should have a cover made to go all round the sides for covering up at night, but a space of 6 inches diameter should be left uncovered on the top of cage. It must be kept out of draught in some well ventilated room. Diet: Seed mixture, equal parts of Canary, wheat, dari, oats, paddy rice, hemp, and sunflower seeds; well mix and keep a constant supply in cage. Also give ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuits, and a little green food (preferably fresh lettuce). Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in the cage. If it is a very young bird, it will be necessary to give a little boiled maize for a time, but care must be exercised as this soon turns sour. As you are a novice in Parrot matters, and a young Grey Parrot is a risky purchase even for a fancier of experience, I advise you to buy one which you know has been in this country for some months and is talking a little; when purchasing, ascertain how it has been fed and do not make any sudden change in the diet, but do not be tempted into giving any kind of slops, table scraps, or animal food.

Foreign Bird Queriste will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Pekin Robin Dying.

C. Margaritis.—These often suffer from lack of exercise, causing their getting overfat and going off suddenly, fits, or some internal trouble. These birds soon become tame, and it is very beneficial to let them have a fly round the room at times; they will return to their cage when hungry or a mealworm will soon fetch them. Diet: Soft food, ripe fruit, and a few live insects are about all they require. Your diet appears to have only lacked fruit. They will take almost any kind of this. One or two spiders if you can capture them are very helpful while the birds are in the moult, and are acceptable at all times. When one of these birds appears puffy and out of sorts, a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful to one ounce of water) if given at once will often put them right; no other water will be required for the one day, and it would also be as well not to supply the bath so that the bird may be forced to take freely of the magnesia water. It is well to vary the insects when possible during the summer at Acton, beetles, smooth caterpillars, spiders, blighty foliage, and many species of garden larvæ should be easily procurable if searched for, and would be a boon to the Pekin.

Brevities.

Ruddy Cowbird (Ruddy).—It is a native of South America. This also has been answered to you or some other correspondent in a recent issue. If you look it up you will find full directions given as to treatment, etc.

Parrot Broody? (Miss E. G. M.).—There is not much wrong so far as I can gather, neither do I think it is egg bound; but this you can easily ascertain. If this is the case, the ventral region is sure to be more or less swollen; in such case, anoint the vent with pure olive, sweet, or castor oil. The clucking, shaking, etc., are quite natural; many species of Parrots at the approach of anyone they are attached to, will bring up the partially-digested food from the crop and go through the form of feeding, and I take it this is part of your bird's "broodiness." As regards the sneezing and heavy breathing, continue the treatment already advised, and this should shortly disappear.

Budgerigars Throwing out Eggs (Frankincence).—Within cage limits these are more liable to this vice than in an aviary, though even here the vice is not unknown. It is extremely annoying, but the only thing is patience and to ascertain which sex is the guilty party; if it should be persisted in, the only thing to do is to change the bird; if you have several pairs, re-mating will often bring about the desired effect. If you have only one pair try and make an exchange with someone. The probability is, next spring the trouble will cease and the hen duly incubate, hatch out, and rear the young. Your diet is satisfactory, but supply the birds with a little natural food, viz., seeding grass (grass in flower) whenever you can procure it free from frost or not sodden with wet.

Grey Unable to Stand (D. Clewes).—You give me but little to act upon. Give a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful to each ounce of drinking water) every other day, so long as the voidings are not too fluid; when such occurs, lengthen the period between each dose. Your diet is hardly varied enough. The bird should have ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts, and the following seed mixture:—Canary, wheat, paddy rice, oats, hemp, and sunflower seed in about equal proportions. If it is a case of actual paralysis, I fear but little can be done, and the bird will always remain in a more or less helpless condition, though it may live for some time. You had better persevere with above treatment for two or three weeks, and then report progress with fullest details. Keep bird warm, out of draught, yet not in a vitiated atmosphere.

Grey Sparrow Bald (T.N.Z.).—This bird has probably been badly plucked during transit to this country, and it will take it some time to recover, but will ultimately do so. Continue to use the sulphate, but keep the bird under observation, and if there is any sign of constipation, promptly give a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful to the ounce of water. Diet: Canary, white millet, paddy rice and oats, green food (lettuce at this season), grit, and a piece of cuttlefish continually hanging in cage. A piece of ripe apple if the bird cares for it is also very wholesome. With the above you will be able to keep up a varied diet, which should be beneficial. At the same time, the bird and cage should be examined for parasites, and if these exist they must be got rid of from the bird by the use of pyrethrum powder or quassia solution, and from the cage by either scalding or baking, and re-distempering

What is it? (Conure).—Your friends have rightly informed you. It is a Jendaya Conure, but a young one, and consequently not yet clad in the full brilliance of the adult plumage. After one or two more moults you will find its plumage in agreement with the description given, that is, after making due allowance for the variation that is common to all species.

Feeding a Parrot (Folkestone).—Am glad to note the bird has improved and is fit again. All the items you name are wholesome, but the potato should only be given in small quantities and be dry, that is, quite free from lnts of any kind.

Breeding Budgerigars in a Cage (Beginner).—Use cage as one flight; there is only room for two pairs, and let these run together. Hang up four husks near the top with about a foot distance between each. Put in a twiggy branch at each end for perches, and also in each space between the husks. Diet: Supply Canary, white and spray millet, a few oats, green food (flowering grass and lettuce), cuttlefish, and keep cage tray well covered with gritty sand. See also reply to "Frankincence." You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (see advert. in this column) very helpful. Do not be tempted to overcrowd, and there should be another flight into which you can turn the young as soon as they are able to fend for themselves.

Cape Sparrow and Canary (J.L.).—I do not care to say anything is impossible; neither do I as a rule use this term at all; but I should say that success was very improbable with such a cross. I do not know of any record of any species of Sparrow having paired with a Canary, and successfully rearing young. However, as you have an odd bird there can be no harm in making the attempt, and I should advise you to procure the largest and most robust Norwich hen you can obtain. Success would be very probable if you could obtain some other species of Sparrow to cross with it. The Abyssanian, or Golden Sparrow, the cock of which is as brilliant as many Canaries, would be a good species to try, if you can procure a hen, as it is a species which nests readily in captivity, and if you met with success the hybrid should be a handsome one.

Budgerigar Killed with Net (Net).—No matter how tame birds are they do not like the net, and dash about more or less wildly whenever it is taken into the aviary, besides being generally thrown into a state of great excitement. Of course, it is quite possible you may have inadvertently given it a blow with the rim, but I consider it more probable that as a result of the excitement consequent upon the catching up, it broke a blood-vessel—its almost instantaneous death certainly indicates this. It is easy to catch birds in an aviary without the net. Make a skeleton framework, in the form of a cube, cover it all over with wire netting, except one end; make a drop door here, which can be let down with a piece of twine from the outside of aviary; the birds are easily enticed into the trap by placing all the food vessels therein, and you thus can soon catch up all the birds you require without risk.

Grey out of Condition (Fenton).—It is in the moult for one thing, and it has never got fully acclimatised. Give a dose (one teaspoonful to each ounce of the drinking water) of Dinneford's Magnesia and repeat third day so long as the voidings are not watery. In between, that is when not giving the magnesia, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. It would do better on the seeds regularly advised. Try the following in equal parts: Paddy rice, wheat, oats, hemp, and sunflower seeds; keep a small tin of Canary and millet in the cage. I think very soon you will find it will visit this. Plain biscuits and nuts, in addition to the fruit, may also be given. In the event of any recurrence of the running, spray same with diluted glycothymoline. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food.

Blossom-headed Parrakeet's Lengthy Moult (E.H.V.).—Many species of Parrots and Parrakeets appear to have great difficulty in getting through the first moult here. The principal difficulty appears to be getting rid of the sheaths more than the actual reproduction of the plumage. Keep its bowels moving freely with an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia, so long as the voidings are not watery. I should also continue to use the Chemical Food when not giving the magnesia. I should also give such ripe fruit as it will take, with a few nuts and a little green food (preferably lettuce). If sufficiently tame, a fly round the room would help matters, and a gentle stroking of the top of head or wherever the sheaths still appear may ease some of them off. It should also be kept fairly warm, but not in an ill-ventilated room or too far away from light and sun, though the latter should not shine directly upon it.

Grey with Round Eye (M.H.).—You do not leave it all clear as to whether the specks are on the eye itself or on the bare skin surrounding it If on the eye itself, only a skilled vet. can remove them; if they are merely growths on the skin, then fomentation with a hot (comparatively) decoction of camomile flowers would probably get rid of them. As to whether the growths will affect the other eye, an opinion could only be given by seeing the bird. But I may say I have seen many cases of total blindness in one eye from somewhat similar causes, and the other eye has not been affected thereby; moreover, the birds have been quite fit and contented. The change of diet was quite correct, and the bird is evidently improving fast. I should give a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia (see other replies) twice a week, so long as the voidings are not watery.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

A Seed Hopper (J. Birch).—This has been given before.

An Article (A. Chilcott).—Thanks for your further reply. We will go into the matter.

Mice Proof Seed Trough (A. Hare).—We have illustrated several times before, we think, ideas on very similar lines.

A Feeding Tin (S. Pearson).—This has been sent in before and used, or a tin very like it. Thanks for your kindly remarks concerning our paper.

Illustrated Ideas (J. W. Richards).—Have given the pinned cage-front already. (Jas. Cox).—We have published somewhat similar ideas in the past. (A. Hook).—Have given this before. (A. Sharp).—Note reply given J. W. Richards.

Various Matters (Mrs. A. Laurence).—The management of Paradise Whydahs is dealt with fully in "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (post free 1/1 from this office). Your query shall be answered by our Mr. Page. We will consider the matter of an index.

Colour of C.C.C. Show Cage (Cinnamon).—It is a shade of blue. The exact tint would be given you by the club secretary. Mr. R. J. Pretty (6, Old Burlington-st., London, W.), if you forwarded to him a stamped addressed envelope with your request.

Best or Second Best? (Glaister and Lucas).—We think it might be better to wait and see whether the man mentioned really carries out his threat. You will know the saying: "Never trouble trouble till trouble troubles you." If he does do so, then our columns will be freely open to you to ventilate the matter.

A Save-all Seed Hopper.
Sent by Mr. D. W. Watt, 173, Downham Street, Blackburn.

Here is a sketch of a save-all seed hopper. It is the usual kind of tin hopper, with a loose glass front. But instead of being open at the back, I put in when making it a whole tin back. I then had a head hole put in the same, as per sketch. I find it a great saving, especially in the case where mixed seeds are used. You will see by the sketch that the bottom of seed-box is perforated. Therefore it acts as a sieve, and it always keeps the seed clean. The top of the seed box opens with a wire hinge at the top, so that it can be used for blowing the husks off the seed.—D. W. Watt.

To Prevent Waste of Seed.

No. 351.
A Redmite-proof Perch.
Sent by Mr. E. N. Smith, 42, Other Road, Redditch.

Having read so much in Cage Birds about the red mite pest in bird cages, I beg to offer a new idea to the Fancy in general. The sketch

Red-mite Proof Perch.

I send shows what I claim is a red mite proof perch. The red mite can find no place to locate itself here. I think it is simple enough to recommend itself, and will be found quite rigid. The ends of the wires are bent on to the back of the cage, and the other ends under the punch bar.—E. N. Smith.

CELEBRATING A JUBILEE.

From the year 1890 the society began to get larger, the membership being between forty and fifty, and successful shows were held. Prominent exhibitors were Mr. T. Heath, who in 1890 nearly swept the board with premier honours, Mr. T. Irons, whose non-flighted Yellows, exhibited in 1894, are still remembered by the old hands; also Mr. W. J. Medlin, of Falmouth, and Mr. J. T. King, of Cheltenham, in Belgians and Crests respectively. Of the members who helped at the exhibitions of about this time there still remain Mr. J. Rowe, who is as keen as ever, Mr. A. J. Border, and Mr. W. Spillman, and up till 1905 Mr. J. Dennithorne, than whom none was more popular in the W.C.O.S.

Financially, the society was at this period none too strong, and it was left to Mr. A. E. Cheney, who became secretary in 1900, to put the finances on a firmer basis, there being a balance to the good of over £10 at the close of that year. This, unfortunately, was soon lost again, but for all that the society began to make bigger strides in popularity, and to Mr. W. H. Tavener, who took over the secretaryship in 1902 great credit is due.

Higher-water Mark.

The show of 1903 constituted high water mark, being a really splendid exhibition. In this year, through the energy of the chairman, Mr. S. Gill, and the Committee, four challenge cups, each value four guineas, were obtained for competition at the annual shows, Mr. R. B. Tope also presenting a silver bowl for the best bird shown in the Crest section, and Mr. S. Gill a goblet for Yorkshires (which variety now began to be bred in the society). These cups have created in the past keen competition, and continue now to do so. In 1904, however, the society found itself £16 to the bad, and a determined effort was made to redress matters, Mr. Cheney again taking the secretaryship. He was backed up by Mr. Gill, as chairman, and the following gentlemen as committee, viz., Messrs. Dart, Clark, Dennithorne, French, Garland, Hoar, Hamilton, Jutson, Moist, Phillips, Rich, Williams, Staples, Sky, and Pope. A remarkable result was achieved. A show was held at which no class was cancelled, and at the end of the year an adverse balance of £16 was changed to £36 balance in favour of the society. In 1907 six silver challenge cups were provided for competition at the Nest Feather shows which were held in May, June, and July, and so popular have they become that at the three shows held this year over 300 birds were staged. At these shows many fanciers outside the society are present, and it has proved to be a successful means of advertising the society locally. By means of an ink multiplicator, a small catalogue with list of awards is provided which enables those present to take a greater interest in the birds.

The annual show of 1907 was the largest ever held by the society, there being 900 entries, the entry fees being in excess of prize money for the first time in the history of the society.

A Modest Lot!

In one respect the W.C.O.S. has never reached a very high standard, and that is with regard to lectures or papers on birdy matters. In some societies there seems no difficulty, but the older members of the W.C.O.S. are all afflicted with a most pronounced modesty about airing their opinions. They will go into one another's bird rooms and discuss the stock until the small hours of the morning, but when it comes to putting their valuable knowledge at the service of the members collectively, they fight shy. Mr. W. Spillman is one bright exception to this rule. When he was a novice in the Fancy, and quite a new member of the society, in 1894, he gave the first lecture the society had ever had, the subject being "Mules and Hybrids." This was followed in the same year by a paper on "Crests," by Mr. Radmore, which is still remembered as an intellectual treat by the older hands. To Mr. C. A. House the W.C.O.S. is indebted for several lectures at some personal inconvenience.

For this, the Jubilee year, under the chairmanship of Mr. Chas. Dart, the society has a splendid working committee, including some of its oldest and most experienced members, who are determined to leave no stone unturned to reach the high water mark of excellence. Extra classes have been provided, making the largest and best classified schedule which has ever been issued, and the show will be run without amalgamating or cancelling any class, whatever the entry, full prize money being paid on the first day of show, so that winning exhibitors should get their prize monies at the time of their early morning cups of coffee. These arrangements should commend the show to all exhibitors, and the Jubilee exhibition of the W.C.O.S. ought, therefore, to be a record show all round. We would ask all kind friends to remember the dates, Tuesday and Wednesday, October 19 and 20.

ORNITHOLOGICAL ODDMENTS.

By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S.

Author of "The World's Birds."

Easy Feeding for Softbills.

It seems to me to be not out of place at the present juncture again to draw attention to the Chinese method of feeding Soft-billed birds, of which I was able to gain information in India, whither many birds were sent from China in my time, and no doubt still are. The Soft-billed birds among these, from big powerful species like the Chinese Jay-Thrush (Garrulax sirensis), down to Pekin-Robins, which, by the way, were generally sent to Calcutta from China, and comparatively rarely brought down from the Himalayas close at hand—were fed during the voyage at all events, on a mixture of millet freed from the husk and dried flies, the latter not noticeably different from what we get here. This food was given dry, and the birds looked well on it, not only omnivorous species like those mentioned, but purely insectivorous birds like Dhyals and the Blue Flycatcher of Japan (Xanthopygia cyanomelaena), of which the only specimen I ever saw alive was brought to Calcutta on this food, and might have been entered for any show immediately on arrival. In colour, by the way, this beautiful bird is blue above, with the breast black, and the rest of the under parts white. It is one of the birds that the Germans get hold of, and we don't.

Japanese Blue Flycatcher.

Preparation of Millet.

Unfortunately, I did not find out when in India how this shelled millet was husked; but the process must be very simple, for when I asked my servant to prepare some for me—I knew he could probably do it, as millet is commonly used for human food in India—he brought me a plateful in a few minutes. When I asked him how they cooked it, he said they made it into porridge, a tip which may be worth considering for those who have to care for that popular but delicate "soft-bill," the human baby, for such husked millet ought to make very good milk puddings. What I used to wonder, however, was whether the various soft-bills fed on the dried flies and millet mixture were put straight on to this dry food as soon as caught, and, if so, how they stood it—that is to say, the purely insectivorous kinds. I dare say Pekins would do all right on this feeding from the outset, as they are so easily suited with food.

Raw Rice for Softbills.

When Pekins were brought down from the hills it was on dry raw rice—not paddy, but ordinary cooking rice—and this I know they will eat readily, and digest well, for I have tried them with it over here. On offering it to a Blackbird, however, I found it did not seem to be eaten; yet, besides Pekins, the Indian hillmen bring down Blue-winged Sivas, Silver-eared Mesias, the various Jay-Thrushes, Blue-pies, and Hunting Cissas on the same simple food, and they arrive in good condition. I even saw a consignment of Goosanders doing well on this food, and yet the natural food of this duck is live fish, and plenty of it, and I should personally never have dreamed of offering it such food as rice in any form.

It looks as if rice and millet, husked but raw, is readily assimilated by animal-feeding birds, and that it would make a useful, and certainly cheap and convenient item in mixtures for Softbills; in fact, if they can be kept on a sea voyage or long land journey in confined quarters on such food as this and dried flies, they ought to be able to live on it in an aviary. I should think, also, that husked Canary seed would be another useful article of food, but should be very doubtful if such diet as this would suit most of our British Softbills, which seem to me more delicate than the corresponding foreign species.

I find a slip which may mislead in my last week's "Oddments," where I speak of "closing" birds with live food—"dosing" should be the word.

Price 1/1 (post free).

The young fancier is told all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor.

This work, written in a plain, practical manner, contains much of untold value to lovers of the Norwich Plainhead Canary. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

LIVERPOOL B.B.A.

The members will hold a novice night show on October 14th, at headquarters, Oldham Hall. Birds to be staged by 7.30. Judge, Mr. W. R. Knowles (Earlestown). Class 1, Yorks. cl. or tkd. yell.; 2, Yorks. buff; 3, Green, self or foul yell.; 4, ditto Buff; 5, Nor. Green, self or foul Yell.; 6, ditto Buff; 7, Nor. cl. or tkd. Yell.; 8, ditto Buff; 9, A.O.V. Can.—F. E. HAWKES, Sec.

MIDLAND COUNTIES YORKS. C.C.

The classification for champion and novice is as follows:—Champion: A, cock, yellow, cl. or tkd.; B, Buff ditto; C, marked or variog.; D, unlighted, Yell. or Buff, cl., tkd., mkd., or varieg.; E, hen, A.V. Yell.; F, ditto Buff. Novice: Yell., cl., tkd., or unevenly mkd.; Buff ditto; unflg. ditto, Yellow or Buff; hen ditto. There is still time for new members before the first show, which is Hanley (October 21st), so that any fancier wishing to join may do so before that date.—W. H. UZZELL, Hon. Sec., 76, Drayton-road, Kings Heath, Birmingham.

GRANTHAM C.B.S.

Meeting held at headquarters, Black Dog, Watergate, on September 29th, when Mr. Allen kindly gave a washing exhibition. The way Mr. Allen washed the birds brought forth approval from all present, and no doubt many of those present will be having a try to "get their hands in," as Mr. Allen fully explained the best way to go about it. A hearty vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. Ratcliff and seconded by Mr. Man. The other business was to arrange for the 4th open show, which will be held at headquarters on October 15th. There will be four spls., so we hope to get a good entry; also the medals will be presented to the winners for most points gained during the last show season.—W. RATCLIFF, Chairman.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting held at Boar's Head Hotel, Stockport, on October 2nd. Only a few members put in an appearance, much important business having to be left over. Patronage at several shows was confirmed. A new member in the person of Mr. W. Lee, of Macclesfield, was received. It was decided to have a meeting at Oldham in connection with the Cage Bird Show there on October 16th, 1909. It is to be hoped all members will put in an appearance, as amongst other important business it will be necessary to fix rules to govern novice classes and novice status, to prevent any misunderstanding in the future. There will be two novice Lizard classes at the Manchester Show, Mr. J. Rukin guaranteeing one and the Manchester Society kindly giving the other class. We hope novices will show their appreciation by filling these classes, and so encourage show committees and others to provide them regularly. Several specials were given by those present. A hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman (Mr. John Garner) brought the meeting to a close. About an hour was pleasantly spent in the company of mine host, Mr. F. W. Nelson, who gave us several racy anecdotes regarding incidents at various shows.—JOHN RUKIN, Hon. Sec.

LONDON AND COUNTIES O.S.

Autumn country ramble held last week for the purpose of collecting wild seeds and teazle. We met (eight in number) at Marylebone Station at 9.20 a.m., the train leaving at 9.30 prompt, and arriving at Quainton at 11.55, with plenty of rain. At the "Swan and Castle" a hot lunch was provided for 12.30. The sun now broke out, which gave the party all smiling faces. After our enjoyable lunch, we went on our way to Claydon, and going along Mr. F. W. Thorpe drew our attention to a Yellowhammer, a fine fellow, too. It was in a tree, so we could have a good sight of it. We were soon all busy cutting privet and several other kinds of berries and some knapweed, of which we all gathered plenty. The sun was shining now, and the country reminded one of spring. Mr. R. J. Pretty told us there were some Bullfinches here, and to our surprise we found there was a pair in a bush together; they had been feeding on some blackberries. Going along, we came to the teazle, which was plentiful. Mr. H. Pearce said he thought there were some Goldfinches here, and at that moment about six flew over our heads, and plenty of Linnets were there, too. We all had a good tea, during which the rain came down again. We took the return train from Grainborough Road at 6.20 p.m., and arrived at Baker Street at eight o'clock, where we all parted, after having an enjoyable day in Bucks.—W. GILBERT, hon. secretary.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

On October 4th, the members met, Mr. W. H. Stoakley presiding. A very long and important agenda, dealing chiefly with the arrangements for the November show was despatched in quick time. The secretary had thoughtfully provided an attraction which enlivened the dull routine of business in the shape of a table covered with forty fine samples of wild seeds, grasses, herries, and weeds, suitable food for the many species of British birds. Mr. Dyke kindly offered to make a glass case in which the collection can be more satisfactorily exhibited at the annual show. Another attractive item was a judging competition of Yorkshires, the final judge being Mr. G. J. Warley, and the points gained as follows:—J. T. Billington 9, H. Dixon and G. W. Baker 7 each, S. Wright 6, F. P. Found and A. A. Tutty 5 each, A. J. Whittome and F. C. Pickard 4 each, F. J. Piper 3, A. W. Warr, E. W. Dell and E. B. Skinner 2 each, A. H. Dyke and A. Hare 1 each, W. R. Angear, A. W. Reade, A. Reid, P. Rorke, F. Whiting, E. J. Bailey, T. Brown, and Mrs. Smith nil. The Secretary (Mr. H. Smith) submitted the draft of the schedule and the show rules, which had been considerably altered to meet the requirements of the Federation of London C.B. Societies and the C.B.U. Both drafts were confirmed with very slight alteration, the meeting evidently being perfectly satisfied with the good work of the secretary and committee. The schedule is very much on the lines of that issued last year. There are 39 open classes; members' classes number 28. The Secretary reported that Mr. A. W. Reade had kindly consented to act as assistant show secretary, and that Messrs. E. Skinner and S. Wright had been added to the committee. A letter was read from the London C.B.A. inviting the Society to send a team to compete for the Cage Bird Championship, to be held at the Horticultural Hall on November 26th to 29th. Any number of birds may be sent, but only twelve of the highest in the awards will be taken, and these must consist of not less than six varieties, either of Canaries, British birds, or hybrids. The points will be counted and the Society gaining the highest aggregate will be the champions for the year. The secretary said the committee had requested him to try and get a team together, and several members, including Messrs. E. J. Lamb, W. Francis, F. J. Randall, P. Rorke, A. A. Tutty, and H. Smith had promised to compete. It was therefore decided to send a team. The Secretary announced eight nominations for membership, which brings the strength of the Society up to about 80.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held October 2nd at "Lockhart's," Mr. F. Furrer in the chair. A circular was read from Mr. J. W. Birchley re holding a limelight lecture in Leeds, and it was carried unanimously that we give him all the assistance we can to make it a success. The rest of the evening was taken up with a washing exhibition by Mr. H. Woof, who put two birds through the process in a quick and able manner, explaining the different points to be watched to avoid leaving places unwashed and soapy, which is often done by novices.—J. CHAMBERS, Hon. Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual meeting held October 2nd, in the Fawcett-street Cafe, Mr. J. Farrar presiding. A good deal of correspondence was placed before members. The classification for the open show was confirmed, 54 classes being scheduled. It was decided that the members' classes remain practically as last year, the only alteration being that the yellow marked and buff marked Border Fancies are now amalgamated into one class, and a class for Border Fancy breeding pairs is added, making 30 classes as before. There are still several members who have not yet "settled up," and I would be very pleased if they would do so without delay. Members are also requested to look out for subscriptions and members' specials, and do their best for the benefit of the Society.—W. REID, Hon. Sec.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING AND HETTON-LE-HOLE SOCIETIES.

The Houghton-le-Spring C.B. Society and the Hetton-le-Hole C.B.S., combined, had a real treat in a lecture delivered by Mr. A. Brown, of Gateshead, in the long room of the White Lion Hotel, Houghton-le-Spring. The number present was not so large as might have been expected, but the few who were there learned something from the very plain way in which Mr. Brown "dissected the Norwich Canary" and spoke of the best points. He showed a first-class sketch of a Norwich, and a breeding cage of his own making. Unfortunately, the time went all too quickly. We were very interested in the lecture, and there was next to no time in which to ask questions; but the answers to those put seemed to give every satisfaction. The meeting finished with a very hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer, and a little harmony from both clubs concluded a most pleasant evening, which we hope to have the counterpart of at Hetton-le-Hole Club very soon, when we look for a better attendance. — D. HANN, hon. sec., Houghton-le-Spring C.B.S.

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF IRELAND.

Committee meeting held October 2nd, Mr. O'Reilly in the chair. The following members were present: Messrs. Dowling, McDonnell, Duigenan, Kenny, Lambert, and Hyland (hon. sec., pro tem.). The club's patronage was granted to the following: Dundalk C.B.A., Ulster O.A., Norwich P.H. Club, and Larne and Dis. C.B.A. The printing of schedule and catalogue for coming show was given to Messrs. Waller and Co. The Hon. Secretary informed the meeting that he had secured the Central Hall, Westmoreland Street, for the show. Mr. Grattan Bray, V.P., and Mr. J. J. Cloke attended and offered specials. Mr. Bray offered special prize value £2 5s. for most points gained by Yorkshire Canaries in all classes, including selling and gift. Mr. Cloke offered £1 to be competed for in any class the committee decide on. Mr. Duigenan offered £1. Mr. Hyland a silver watch, Mr. O'Reilly silver medal and another special prize—all to be left to the committee to divide for competition. The remainder of the evening was taken up altering the rules of the schedule. The committee will be obliged to members who are desirous of offering special prizes for competition at coming show to inform the hon. sec. at once, in order that the schedule may be printed as early as possible. A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Bray for his kindness in offering special. This concluded the business.—J. R. HYLAND, hon. sec., pro tem.

RUNCORN C.B.S.

Washing Exhibition by Mr. J. Guy.

On October 1st the members witnessed a first-class washing exhibition and demonstration by Mr. J. Guy, of Runcorn. There was a good attendance. Mr. W. H. Cawley occupied the chair. Mr. Guy is well known in this district as an expert in the art of bird washing, being much sought after by prominent exhibitors. He has refused many times to demonstrate at society meetings, so that the members congratulated themselves on being able for the first time to see Mr. Guy operate. Mr. Guy said he had been washing birds for 18 years, and this long and varied experience had taught him that the secret of success in this delicate art was soap. What was wanted was a soap of a light texture, and one that would quickly "fall," "slip," or "leave" the bird during the process of rinsing. Mr. Guy went on to say that scores of fanciers were able to wash birds, but the great secret was how to obtain that beautiful gloss so rarely seen on exhibits. Mr. Guy then proceeded to wash the birds. He had three vessels. In the first he obtained a fine "open" lather, by rubbing the soap quickly in the hands. The two next were for rinsing. It was very noticeable how easily Mr. Guy handled the birds; they were no sooner all of a lather than they were through the two rinsing waters. The next operation was the drying; this being practically completed before the bird left the hands, no rolling up, etc., was required, the bird hopping from the hand on to the perch, to be placed by the fire to "air." Mr. Guy washed three birds, so as to give everyone present a good opportunity of seeing something which perhaps was not noticed in the first attempt. Everybody was delighted with the exhibition, and it should tend to give the Society a rare lift-up. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Guy.—T. P. BAXTER, hon. sec.

J. HODDER,

Breeder of CHAMPION NORWICH, has a fine lot of show birds for disposal, in the pink of condition, and ready for immediate showing. My strain is acknowledged one of the best in the world. Won last season Ten-Guinea Challenge Cup, and many other specials.... Approval, stamp.—6, Banner-st., St. Lukes, London.

SILK'S CHAMPION NORWICH

Have now clean-moulted some stormers which will become famous on the show bench. Type, quality and colour, with shortest possible wings and tail from this strain which has proved beyond doubt has positively no equal. I have supplied and am still supplying yearly more winners than anyone else in the Fancy in Norwich Plainheads, including Scottish National and Crystal Palace Winners. Prices on application; approval willingly; stamp reply. Note the name which stands as the premier of the Norwich Plainhead—Judge A. E. SILK, WHITSTABLE.

Scrutinize

These prices carefully, and compare with all others, with the exception of the "Long Firms," who make their dastardly existence possible by selling hens for cocks to the "Innocents."

Prize-bred Norwich Plainheads.

A really grand collection now ready to send out. A few prices are given as follows, and you are respectfully invited to select from the Canary Market of the World, and save all intermediate profits, by purchasing direct from their native City, and from a person using his proper name, and not posing as a female. Cocks at 4/3, 4/6, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6 and 10/- upwards; hens, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6 each; pairs, 5/6, 6/5, 7/6, 8/6. Hence, here is a security never offered by anyone else, and a safeguard against the now well-known "hen trick."

Note.—All amateurs should try my Special Matched Pairs of Prize-bred Norwich Plainheads at 10/6, 12/6, 15/- and 20/-; Crested ditto, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, and 30/-; Yorkshires, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-; Border Fancies, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-. These are the best value ever offered.

For other varieties, please send for Free Current price list. All on approval any part of Great Britain. Travelling Cages, 3d. extra.

Please read following, and note full dates.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

How to Promote Your Hobby.

"CAGE BIRDS,"

Oct. 16th, 1909.

Three coupons of the same date entitle you to a free advertisement of 12 words in our "Sale and Exchange." All coupons of this date to be sent in by Tuesday, Oct. 19th.

"SALE AND EXCHANGE" ADVERTISEMENTS FOR READERS WHO DISTRIBUTE TWO COPIES OF "CAGE BIRDS."

Novel Scheme to Benefit Our Readers and Ourselves.

Everyone at some time or another wants to sell some article for which he has no further use, or to exchange it for something he wants. Amongst the 50,000 other readers of "CAGE BIRDS" there must be some who are ready to buy from, or exchange with you.

To enable our readers to dispose of, purchase, or exchange various articles, we have decided to insert private advertisements free of charge for those who are willing to promote the circulation of "CAGE BIRDS." All you have to do is to get two extra copies of the current issue, distribute them to two friends who you know would be interested, tell them what your opinion of the paper is, and how much they too can benefit by the articles and advice contained in each issue. Send the coupon which appears on this page, from the two extra copies and your own—three coupons in all—together with the advertisement you want inserted. For three coupons sent bearing the same date, we will insert twelve words free of charge. Every additional word will be charged at ½d. per word. Not more than three coupons can be accepted for any single advertisement.

This plan benefits you by finding a market for anything you wish to dispose of, at a cost of only threepence, including postage, and benefits us by bringing "CAGE BIRDS" before new readers. We are helping you in return for your help towards the increase of our circulation.

If you have anything to Sell or Exchange fill in and post this Form, sending three coupons of the same date, for free insertion of twelve words, and stamps to cover additional words (½d. per word).

Please insert the following Advertisement in your next issue.

Coupon advertisers must have replies addressed direct to them and not to a box number at this office. Three coupons of the same date pay for twelve words. One halfpenny is charged for each additional word.

Not more than three coupons may be used for any single advertisement. Coupons cannot be accepted for Trade advertisements, the charge for these being 20 words for 1/-. The proprietor reserves the right to decline any advertisement that seems to him undesirable.

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the seuder after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

LOOK AT IT

this way. If my goods were not all that I claim for them, I could not afford to advertise them, as publicity would do me harm, not good. But to prove to you that without doubt my goods are as advertised, I send them on approval at my own risk, either on receipt of cash or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, and refund money in full if you are not perfectly satisfied with them after trial. I have no unmentioned conditions or restrictions whatever. If after a trial of my goods you find them not suitable to you from any cause, you simply return them and back comes every penny of your money, and the transaction is ended. Clap nets, made from ⅜in. genuine thread netting, 3 yards long, 5½ft. deep, and 4ft. fly, 4/- pair; 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair, all guaranteed full measurement; 5½ft. deep and 4ft. fly. Clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and all are fitted complete with stave, poles, pegs, lines, and everything complete ready for immediate use. Scores of other sizes in stock. Lark nets, 15 yards long, 10ft. deep, 12/-; ditto, 18 yards long, 15/-; ditto, 25 yards long, 21/-; ditto 30 yards long, 24/-. Bat folding Sparrow nets, fitted on 15ft. bamboo poles, 5/6 pair; ditto on 17ft. poles, 6/- pair; ditto 19ft. poles, 6/6 pair, complete. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/- each; ditto, 18 inches long, 9d. each. These net traps are entirely different to the old-fashioned board traps. They can be baited for Hardbills and Softbills at same time, and a call bird can be used inside them if required. Will catch and hold any bird from Wren to Rook, and are by far the largest and most effective traps on the market; eight dozen sold retail during the past 14 days. Single trap cages 6d. each, double ditto 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages warranted to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each. Real Japanese birdlime. This is the genuine Japanese and strongest on the market, guaranteed to catch and hold any Hawk that flies, any weather, rain or shine; imitators may copy name of my lime, but they cannot copy quality. ¼lb. 6d., ½lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6; sample 3d. post free. Loose netting, specially made from genuine thread for bird netting, not thick American cotton fishing netting; ¾in. mesh, 7ft. deep, 3d. yard; ditto, 9ft. deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12ft. deep, 5d. yard. Lark netting, 1½in. mesh, 10ft. deep, 4d. yard; all post free. Absolutely everything required for successful catching kept in stock; send stamp for full printed list. See following few letters:—"Cransby Hall, Kettering, Sept. 24th. Sir,—Please send following. I am pleased to say trap cages are very satisfactory.—Yours, M. Lloyd." "Mount Pleasant, Newburgh, Fife, Sept. 21st. Sir,—Please send ½lb. lime. I was well pleased with that I had last year.—Yours, J. Panton." "Brinsley Moor, nr. Eastwood. Sept. 17th. Sir,—Please send pair clap nets. I had some lime from you last year and it was best I ever had.—Yours, C. Hewes." "Chaple-street, Dunmore, Sept. 18th. Sir,—The lime I had last year from you was good stuff; it would stand the cold well, as well as any amount of heat.—Yours, M. Patton." "36, New-street, Grantham. Sept. 14th. Sir,—Please send following netting. That I had last was very good.—Yours, T. Winfield." "14, West-street, Hucknall, Torkard. Sept. 14th. Sir,—Please send pair clap nets. I have tried other firms' nets, and they have been almost rotten.—Yours, A. Bailey." "Delhi-row, Pelsall, Sept. 17th. Sir,—Received netting safely and am very pleased with it, as it made two excellent nets.—Yours, J. Fallon." "Near Elm Tree, Blisworth, Sept. 27th. Sir,—Please send ½lb. bird lime. Your Japanese lime is the best I can get, bar none.—Yours, J. Harris." "Gedney, Holbeach, Lincs., Sept. 24th. Sir,—Please send me a pair clap nets, 20 yards long. If you send me a pair as good as last pair, you will shortly get further orders from me. I know a man who is using a pair of your 20 yard nets, and he says they work beautifully.—Yours, C. Cubley." This letter is a wrinkle to users of long nets; it shows that if properly made, long nets will work as easy as short ones. Mr. Cubley is the well-known Linnet catcher of Lincolnshire, and he has said that netting supplied by me is as superior to other makers' stuff as refined gold is to copper. I guarantee my nets to he absolutely fastest and quickest working nets extant, as all are properly geared or armed, not merely line run through the top of netting, and my pegs are also a vast improvement on the old-fashioned socket and staple. My men are not only practical net makers, but thoroughly experienced birdcatchers as well, and so know exactly what is required for successful catching. All the leading birdcatchers are using nets supplied by me, and will have no other. I invite anyone to have a pair of nets from me and a pair from elsewhere, and compare them side by side; the result will please me. Send stamp for full printed lists with hints on netmaking, etc.; prices will surprise you, as I believe in supplying a genuine article at a reasonable price. (Imitators please copy.) See British bird advertisement for further particulars. Kindly note name and address. No connection with any other advertiser.

ONLY A BLIND

man would think of buying anything before he saw it, so why should you buy birds before you see them and know they are satisfactory? My system of trading is this: I send everything on approval on receipt of cash or deposit system of this paper, at my own risk, and unless purchaser is perfectly satisfied and birds realise every expectation, he only has to return them and back comes the whole of his money promptly and cheerfully without question or comment. I was originator of npproval system in connection with wild birds, and never have I traded under any other conditions. I make no idle boasts or false statements, but claim to be the largest dealer in Worcestershire birds in the world, and have more through my hands in one season than all others together. At present time I have considerably over two thousand British birds in stock, including about 50 dozen Goldfinches alone, and bear in mind these are on view at all times. Grand large Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, all in pink of health and condition, 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 7/-, twelve 12/-, six dozen 66/-, twelve dozen £5. Specially selected larger cocks, to moult for show or Muling, and guaranteed now in song, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-. Few extra special clean moulted cocks, in full colour and superb condition, fit for keen competition, 3/- each, three 7/6. Hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-, twelve 7/-, three dozen 18/-. Splendid lot cock brown Linnets, all clean moulted and perfect condition, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially selected larger cocks, fit for show, Muling, or contest singing, and now in free song, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-. Every Linnet I sell is guaranteed to have nut brown backs and rose-red breasts, and same as the hundreds of contest winners I have supplied to fanciers of Lancashire, Yorkshire, Durham, London, etc., etc. I hold the record for cheap contest winners, having sold a cup winner for 4d. Grand lot cock Bullfinches, 1/6 each, three 4/-; specially selected cocks, 2/- each, three 5/-; few clean-moulted exhibition specimens, 2/6 each. Sir,—Received the three Goldfinches safely and they are splendid birds for the money. They are in pink of health and condition, and I am very pleased with the prompt manner you executed my order, and all future orders are yours.—Yours, W. Caron." "263, Battle-road, Hollington, September 25th. Sir,—Bullfinch arrived this morning in grand health (in place of one which died in transit). I might say the others are going on splendid and best value for money I ever had. Had I picked them out myself I could not have done better. You are the only one I have found that acts up to his advertisement.—Yours, Thos. Veness." "Clarbeston-road, Treffgarne, Sept. 27th. Sir,—Please send following. All birds received from you have given me perfect satisfaction.—Yours, Evan Jones." "71, Mabel-street, Motherwell, Sept. 27th. Sir,—Received birds safe and am highly pleased with them, as they are fine healthy birds and getting on well. Please send following birds, as I find you a straightforward man.—Yours, J. Gibson." "9, Westfield, Larbert, Sept. 27th. Sir,—Please send following birds, as I was very successful with last Goldfinch I had from you, as I bred five good Mules from it.—Yours, D. Pearson." "5, Balaclava-road, Carnarvon, Sept. 25th. Sir,—Please send following. I have had many a good bird from you and can trust you, as you have always pleased me well.—Yours, R. Griffith." "28, B. Close, nr. Crook, Co. Durham, Sept. 23rd. Sir,—Please send three Linnets. I had one from you a while back and he is a real good keen singer.—Yours, M. Brett." "14, Sea Wall, Skinningrove, Yorks, Sept. 17th. Sir,—Please send following. You have never yet disappointed me with your Linnets, and I have bought many a dozen from you.—Yours, C. Hart." On Sept. 27th Mr. Hart again writes: "Sir,—Received birds and am very well satisfied with them, and I must say you are a straightforward man. Please send two more Goldfinches, as other one is so steady as a rock." The above letters are entirely unsolicited and are open to inspection at any time. All birds are guaranteed exactly as represented and sex guaranteed. No fresh-caught rubbish sent, but all fat, healthy stock, well on hard seed. One trial solicited and I guarantee entire satisfaction or money refunded. See Appliance column for nets and cages, etc.

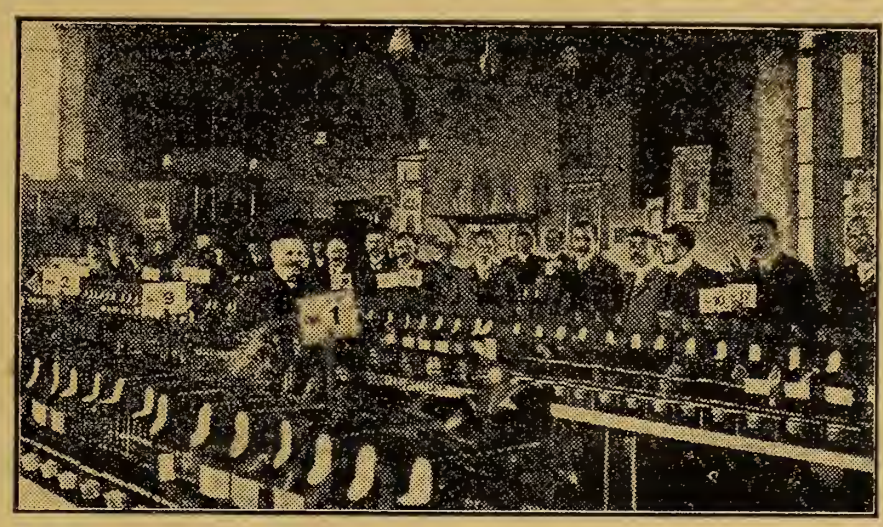
HELP YOURSELVES

AND HELP ALONG YOUR HOBBY.

We have pleasure in putting before our readers on page 226 this week, a novel scheme which will at one and the same time benefit themselves, their hobby, and ourselves. It is, in brief, a scheme by which readers who purchase two extra copies of Cage Birds and distribute them to friends, become entitled to a 12-word advertisement in our "Miscellaneous Sale and Exchange" column, free of charge. You have only to give two copies to two friends likely to be interested in the hobby, and to send us the coupons, vide the full particulars appearing on the above-mentioned page of this issue, when we help you by finding a market for any articles you may have for sale or exchange—this is in return for your help in increasing our circulation.

Turn to Page 226 at once!



You must on no account miss the announcement thereon.

The Shows.

QUEENSBURY.

This Yorkshire Union fixture was held in the Baptist School on October 9th, and was splendidly supported, the entry (455) being only eight short of the record show of last season, and averaged 19 per class, whilst the quality generally was well up to the average. Many of the birds were far from fit, and there is not much doubt that another fortnight or three weeks will make a lot of difference in the positions of some of the competitors. Taking the show as a whole the quality in the Buff classes was far superior to that seen in the Yellows. We know not why, but for the last season or two the Yellows in Yorkshire have not been up to the high standard of excellence one expects in a tip-top Yorkshire, many of them are far too loose and feathery, and lack that smart racy appearance which a good Yorkio needs to satisfy the hypercritical. The birds were very nicely staged, and all their requirements carefully attended to by the committee, all of whom did their best to further the success of the venture. Mr. W. Jagger made a most careful and obliging secretary, and under his direction everything moved as smoothly as possible. Mr. C. A. House judged.

YORKS. YELL. (11): 1, Tate, fine long drawn bird of rare carriage, neat in feather and fit; 2, c, Hardaker and Sample, very neat fine body, capital style, hardly so full in skull; 3, Bailey, a gem for shape, style, and nerve, capital col., but not yet ready, when fit about the best of the bunch; 4, Wilcock, the Saudy Lane winner, grand body and body feather, wings not up yet; vhc, Bastow; hc, Ogden Bros. BUFF (20): Thornton and Bower, charming little bird, full of quality and style, a most typical Yorkie, 3rd in unflighted class last Palace show; 2, Edmondson and Son, another lovely bird for shape and style, but not yet fine in feather; 3, Murgatroyd, great length, nice feather, stands well, but open in tail; 4, Wilson, shorter, very neat in feather, plenty of colour; vhc, Wilcock; hc, Allen; c, Hartley. TKD. YELL. (10): 1, Lingley, cap mkd., grand shape and style, full of quality, and very racy; 2, Briggs, neck tkd., grand shape and position, not yet tightened up; 3, Radley, thigh tkd., grand shape and feather, but needs handling; 4, Shaw Bros., capital feather and style, full of go, thigh tkd.; vhc, Ogden Bros; hc, Hartley; c, Bailey. BUFF (11): 1, 4, Wilson, most charming wing tkd., beautiful quality of feather, rare shape and style; 4th, very smart, racy, cheek tkd.; 2, Coates, thigh tkd., grand shape, very stylish, rare feather, not so full in head; 3, Bailey, the noted cheek tkd., paler in col., and not yet so tight; vhc, Radley; hc, Dykes; c, Wilcock. MKD. YELL. (13): 1, Sutcliffe and Son, almost even mkd., lovely quality of feather, grand shape and position, one of the best birds in the show; 2, Towers, very hot coloured, heavily mkd., a magnificent bird, hardly ready; 3, Mason, cheeks and wings, rare col. and quality, capital feather and style, trifle stouter; 4, Drake and Son, very smart bodied, four-pointed, bit open in tail; vhc, Sandiford's spl, hc, Walsh; c, Shackleton. BUFF (19): 1, Armstrong, very heavily mkd., magnificent shape and style, grand feather; 2, Clegg, very neatly feathered, stylish bird of good shape, mkd. head, eyes, and wings, winner of spl best novice at the Palace show, and for three successive years at Union shows has won 2nd under the same judge; 3, Cooper, eye, cheek, and wing mkd., lovely shape and style, not so tight underneath; 4, vhc, Shackleton, very neat head, neck, and wing mkd., capital feather and position, not so neat in tail; vhc, eye, neck, and wing mkd., shapely and nice feather, not so upright; hc, Hartley; c, Lingley. HEN, MKD. YELL. (14): 1, Mitchell, very handsome eye, cheeks, and wing mkd., lovely col. and feather, very smart and shapely, and shows well; 2, Lingley, another grand little hen, rare shape and style, full of quality, mkd. head, neck, and wing; 3, Briggs, mkd. cheeks and wings, very slim and smart, hardly so tight; 4, he, Hirst, heavy mkd., of nice shape and style, not so much length; vhc, Sutcliffe and Son; c, Hartley. BUFF (16): 1, Edmondson and Son, eye and wing mkd., very slim and neat, grand feather, rare carriage and full of go; 2, Briggs, stouter, but lovely feather and style, full of go, mkd. cheeks and wings; 3, Mason, head, cheeks and wings, grand shape and feather, neat head and shoulders, hardly so steady; 4, Ogden Bros., eyes, neck, and wings, another real gem, lovely shape and feather, but too nervous as yet; vhc, Gaunt; hc, Lister; c, Haigh. UNFLIG. (17): 1, Ackroyd Bros., sweet yell., straight, clean and smart, full of quality and nerve; 2, Tate, wing and neck buff, lovely quality, grand shape, and gets well up to his work; 3, Kirk, another topping yell., grandly drawn, full of quality, not so even in col.; 4, hc, Bailey, lovely buff and yell., both of grand shape and quality, grand style, but not tightened up underneath; vhc, Hartley; c, Radley. No. 9, Brook, magnificent buff, the best bird in the class, but has lost the sight of one eye. HEN, YELL. In the Baptist School Room on the occasion of the Queensbury C.B.S. Annual Show, October 9, 1909.

BROUGHTY FERRY.

Broughty Ferry held their annual show on Oct. 9th, and it proved a record success, both for quality and quantity. Although the Scotch Fancies have been doomed for years gone by, the prophets seem to have made a mistake, as the entry was far beyond the expectation of the executive, such an array having been seldom seen in any show with a mixed classification. Competition in many of the classes was very keen, so keen that the judges were tasked to their utmost. The awards were carefully criticised and gave universal satisfaction. The cup winner turned up in the yellow hen shown by Mrs. Ramsay, and she undoubtedly deserved her position, being of grand size and containing all the essential qualities of a real high-class Scotch Fancy. The judges were Messrs. Berwick and Hailstones, two well-known breeders. Norwich Crests and Plainheads were a real feature, both as regards numbers and quality, and if this Society goes on as at present, two judges will be required for this section. The Crests, for the time of year, were marvellous, the majority being clean moulted, and in rare trim. The cup winner was a hot one, a Crestbred, splendidly put down by the Secretary, Mr. Whitton, who received congratulations on his win, and was quite pleased with the result of his breeding season. Plainheads were a grand lot, and the judge (Mr. Buchan) went for one type throughout—the regular Bullie shape. After Mr. Buchan finished his heavy task very little could be found fault with. Borders were forward in large numbers. All the classes contained birds of the highest quality, but the plums of the day were captured by the magnificent team of Mr. Bennet, the well-known Border Fancy specialist, who no doubt had laid himself out to launch forth a team of his best to capture the challenge cup alloted to this section. He again managed to secure the coveted ticket, and the cup now goes on to his sideboard to keep his others company, he having succeeded in winning it outright with a real good buff hen. The judging here was entrusted to Mr. Stevenson, and although this was his maiden venture, he carefully selected the winners, and his awards were well received. British, Mules, etc., which have always been a feature of this show, were unfortunately down in numbers, and the classes below the average. Foreign and Mules were a nice collection, and were greatly admired by the lady visitors. These classes were judged by Mr. A. W. Watson, and he, too, gave general satisfaction. The management throughout was all that could be desired, the committee being composed of sterling fanciers, ably assisted by the never-tiring and obliging Secretary (Mr. Whitton). The stewards are not all of the masculine sex; they also include lady assistants. The show was held in the Good Templar Hall, an ideal spot, being clean and roomy, with plenty of light.

ACCRINGTON.

Annual Show of the Accrington and Dist. C.H.S., held on October 8th and 9th, in the Central Conservative Club. The room is well adapted for a cage bird show, being spacious and lofty, and kept at a very nice, even temperature. Entries scarcely came up to expectations, several classes being cancelled, whilst others only had half prize money. This we cannot understand, as Accrington always turns out a good schedule, with plenty of specials and good prize money, promptly paid. Although not strong in numbers, the exhibits in every section were of a very high standard, and many noted birds were on view. The following were the winners of the special prizes: Hdyc's, Mr. A. Hirst; Sandiford's medal, Mr. G. Roberts; Norwich Section: Messrs. Seed, Trengove, Cook, and Godley; Yorkshire Section, Messrs. Hirst, Ambler's, Sutcliffe and Son, and A. Cooper; Cinnamons, Messrs. Dormer, Godley, Riding, and Roberts; A.O.V. and Selling, Messrs. Godley, Johnson, Dormer, and Crawshaw; British, Messrs. J. M. Walsh, Riley and Fletcher; Foreign, Messrs. Walsh, and Riley; Gift Class, Messrs. Godley and Crawshaw; Novice Sections, Messrs. Smaller, Ellison, and Linaker, and special for most points in Norwich and Yorkshire, Mr. A. Hirst. The management was all that could be desired. The secretary (Mr. J. W. Philpott) is the right man in the right place, and ably supported as he was by the president, Councillor J. Smith (who, by the way, also acted as hon. auctioneer), and Messrs. Trengove, Seed, Hirst, Godley, Dormer, Riding, Crawshaw, and others, everything passed off without a hitch. Messrs. J. H. Roe and W. Booth Judged.

BANKFOOT AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The first show in connection with this new Society was held on October 9th, at Baokfoot Schools. Mr. D. Sutcliffe, of Wibsey, officiated as judge, and gave general satisfaction. The entries came up fairly well. Messrs. Taylor Bros. won the cup for most points, closely followed by Mr. G. Hudson, who was only two points behind the leader, counting 23 points. Mr. O. Priestley won special for best cock with his clear yellow. Seventy birds were staged.

EDINBURGH (Combined).

The combined annual shows of the Edinburgh O.S. and the Edinburgh Western O.S. were held in the Artillery Hall, Grindley Street, on October 9th. The quality in both shows was excellent. Competition in the Canary classes was active, and was confined to young birds. There was a fair attendance, but the suffragette parade proved a counter attraction.

Edinburgh Western O.S.

This 21th annual event had 312 entries, and was managed by Mr. Whitefield (president), Mr. Lile (secretary) and a splendid working committee. The arrangements were a credit to the secretary and his helpers. It was quite a treat to visit the show. Judges, Messrs. Dalgleish, Thornton, Urquhart and Hogg for Scotch Fancies and Belgians, and for Borders and Mules, Mr. Thomas Todd, and for Norwich and Mules Mr. Holmes. They got through their work quickly, and gave general satisfaction.

WHITBURN, N.B.

On October 2nd the members of the Whitburn C.B.S. held a confioed show (radius five miles). Nearly all the exhibits, which totalled over 100, hailed from Whitburn. The Border section was the outstanding feature, the two green classes especially, which is certainly a credit to such a small village. Seldom have we seen such classes and quality. Only three cards were awarded in each class, which was disappointing to many younger fanciers. The awards were made by Mr. D. J. Gardner (Bathgate), and were well received. Mr. J. Forrest makes a very capable secretary, and was ably assisted by a strong staff of fanciers, composed of Messrs. Councillor Lambie, T. Duncan, W. Lambie, R. Lambie, A. Johnston, A. McLaren, T. Hamilton, W. Livingstone, R. Calder, A. Forrest, R. Whiteford, R. Clelland, and Messrs. Robb, Ramsay, and Easton. In the afternoon the show was well patronised, and everything passed off without a hitch.

CREST. OR C.B. STAMFORD AND DISTRICT F.A.

Third members' show held at the Memorial Hall October 9th. There were only 29 entries on account of the bad breeding season and late moult, but the birds exhibited show an appreciative advance in quality upon last year's. Mr. W. P. Barnes (Grantham) judged, and his awards gave general satisfaction.

Mr. Barnes kindly gave a washing demonstration in the evening which was much appreciated.—A. W. LUDLOW, Sec.

OXFORD.

Annual show of the Oxford F.S. was held on Oct. 7th, in the Corn Exchange, a large, commodious, and well-lighted building, but not large enough for the record entry which necessitated the birds being staged in the gallery, where they were too crowded. However, the birds were well looked after by Messrs. Lees, White, Lewin, Gough, Sandwell, and Holloway. Several of the classes had to be cancelled through insufficient entries, while in a number of others there was a large entry. The best Norwich was undoubtedly Mr. Midgley's buff hen. The winner in the light Mule class was the old champion, a clear buff, who carries his age well, and to-day was looking quite youthful. In the same class was Mr. Lees' noted light Linnet Mule, who won the cup for the best Mule or Canary shown by a member. Mr. White was the winner of cup for the best Britisher, a very nice house-moulted Bullie. Mr. J. Robson judged.

NOR. YELL.: Cancelled. BUFF (7): 1, Mrs. Jeacock, well-made bird, with good head, wings, and tail; 2, Dixon, lovely colour; 3, Jordan, very smart, nice quality; 4, Hall, tkd. on head, good quality; vhc, Carter. ROCHESTER.

Held Oct. 7 and 8 in the New Corn Exchange, Rochester, one of the finest halls it is possible to desire, being lofty, grandly lighted, and very free from draughts. The hon. secretary, Mr. W. Herdman, is most efficient in the discharge of his duties, and courteous to all. He has the assistance of a practical and efficient committee, and the stewards —Messrs. Casemore, Hunt, and Wade, were most attentive to the wants and comfort of the birds. The entry was a good one, and the quality throughout quite above the average. The open special for best in the Classes 90 to 103 went to a typical unfighted Yorkshire, shown by Mr. C. Lockett. The open Mule and Hybrid special fell to Mr. Acland, who also took the members' cup with a magnificent Hawfinch. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and his awards appeared to give satisfactiou. A notable feature of the show was the keen competition in one class, between no fewer than four Missel Thrushes. Mr. Acland's old winner, had this year to play second fiddle to a splendid specimen shown by Mr. J. G. Wade, and strange to say, we heard that this bird was sold to its present owner by Mr. Aclaud.

GLASGOW (Albion Thistle).

Annual exhibition of Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries held in the Mid-City Hall on October 9th. Prosident, Mr. J. McIlwain; vice-president, Mr. Wm. Gray; secretary and treasurer, Mr. Wm. Barrie; committee, Messrs. T. Todd, Thos. Thomson, J. Stewart, J. Knox, A. McDonald, Renfrew, J. McFarlane, J. Mair, J. Smith, G. McIlhenny, etc. Judges for Scotch, Messrs. James Watson (Glasgow), A. Allerdice (Overtown). The exhibits were a creditable show, several Derby winners being staged. Considering the troubled times the club has just passed through, to-day's show gave ample proof that the present members are putting forth every effort to make it second to none. Visitors turned out in large numbers, and many prominent breeders were noticed in the hall. It was very pleasing to see so many ladies present. Secretary Barrie and his committee had everything in trim order. Mr. W. Gray's foul Buff bird was winner of the blue ribbon, cup winner, and best bird in the hall. Mr. J. McIlwain was a good second with a nice clean Buff cock. Awards seemed to give allround satisfaction. Bailie Rae (who was accompanied by his lady) gave a very interesting speech, wishing the club every success. Mrs. Rae thereafter presented the prizes to the winners.

SELKIRKSHIRE.

The 21st exhibition of the Selkirk Ornithological F.A., was held in the Union Hall, Selkirk, on Oct. 9th. The President is Mr. R. Thomson; vice-president, Mr. W. B. Thomson; secretary, Mr. Jas. Robertson; assist. secretary, and treasurer, Mr. A. Gill; auditors, Messrs. Dickson and Thomson; managing committee, Messrs. Thomson, Reid, Rodger, Graham, Imrie, Linton, Hogg, Philips, Watson, Mark, Deans, and Brown. This society is composed of good and keen fanciers, who have worked together well in trying to keep this show going from year to year, and they well deserve the record entry which they obtained in the Cage Bird sections. The display was splendid; the total entry being 307. In fact, there was no spare room left in the hall, and we hope this society may again take rank amongst the best, especially in Border Fancies. Breeders of this variety in this town in former years could hold their own well against all comers. So, buck up again, ye Selkirk Border men. The Borders, as usual, were the special feature of the show, and it was simply marvellous to see so many good ones so well moulted and fit so early in the season. Mr. A. Gilchrist (Coldstream) had the honour of securing his first B.F.C. medal for the season with a very finely staged yellow cock. Grand birds were staged by Messrs. Wilson, Shearer, Tait, Arnot, and Jamieson, Thomson and McKenzie, while Mr. R. Lambie secured the B.F.C. Novice medal with a very neat yell. foul cock. The two Norwich Plainhead classes contained some very special exhibits, many well-known winners here having to give way. Some were hardly up to concert pitch yet, and may alter the placings a bit when ready. The yell. cock shown by Mr. Wilson is a real hot 'un, and no mistake. The first yell. hen shown by that keen exhibitor, Mr. Cameron, is a well-known winner, and with a few weeks over her head, should hold her own in the very best of company. The display of Mules, British and Foreign Cage Birds, was very fine. The management of the show was admirably carried out by the energetic secretary, Mr. James Robertson, and he was ably assisted by his committee. Mr. Henry Bennet (Kelso) had all classes to judge, and they gave him a good day's work.

The Critique.

BORD. CL. OR TICK YELL. CK. (24): 1, B.F.C. medal, Gilchrist, very finely drawn body, excellent colour, free, jaunty carriage, wins well; 2, 5, McKenzie, former fine level colour, good pose, finely drawn, showing more thigh than winner; 3rd, B.F.C. novice medal, Lambie, sweetly moulded body, A 1 colour, wee bit unsteady; 4, Wilson, similar type as winner, very rich colour, neat head and wings, bit wild; 6, Halliday; 7, Watson. YELL. HEN (23): 1, Wilson, gem for quality and style, free and jaunty, lovely colour; 2, 4, Patterson, former excelling in head, rare filled back, only failing to winner in density of colour; 4th, similar type; 3, Connochie, very taking lady, in lovely bloom, nothing behind winners; 5, Hopgood; 6, Bickerstaff; 7, Gilchrist. BUFF CK., CL. OR TK. (33): Hot class, a large percentage of good ones not ready yet; 1, Wilson, again leading with a marvel for feather, neat round head, well filled back and front, wins well; 2, Gilchrist, slightly heavier built, full round head, well moulded body, only beat in mealy feathering; 3, McKenzie, smaller, very fine colour, best of head, lovely front, only fails to winners in back; 4, Tait, another grand one for quality and shape, tick. head, just a bit unsteady; 5, Watson; 6, Linton; 7, Rodger. BUFF HEN (32): 1, Gilchrist, gem, neat, jaunty carriage, very fine head, back and chest, easy win; 2, Tait, similar in make, very neat wings and tail, not so steady; 3, Watson, neatly drawn body, close tail, hardly so well finished; 4, Wilson, sweet rounded head and front; 5, Robertson; 6, Patterson; 7, Gentleman. EVEN MARK. (15): Good class, but only about 5 birds fit; 1, Shearer, nicely balanced markings, buff, eyes, well tapered, grand feather; 2, Aitchison, buff, also, good wings, eyes rather heavier, good type and feather; 3, Connochie, yellow, good markings, sonnd body colour; 4, 7, Robertson, former cinn. mark, well rounded body heavier in markings, not ready yet; 5, Murray; 6, Aitken. UNEVEN, ETC., YELL. BUFF (24): Another strong class, 1st, Tait lovely 3-pointed, type of the best, grand feather, shade pale in colour; 2, Gilchrist, grand var., good head, full front, and well filled back; 3, Wilson, similar type, grand feather, not so steady; 4, McLevy, 3-pointed, very neat shape; 5, Harrinson; 6, Johnstone; 7, Watt, and Storrie. GREEN OR CINN. YELL. (19): 1, Arnot and Jamieson, the old firm still holding their own in this variety, good exhibit, in lovely bloom, well pencilled, rich, grassy green; 2, Thomson, looks like last season's West of Scotland winner, shade heavier body, very deeply pencilled, sound colour; 3, Murray, very finely drawn body, well pencilled; 4, Bickerstaff, similar build, also grand in pencilling; 5, Amos; 6, Harrinson; 7, Lambie. BUFF (18): 1, Thomson, lovely type, good sound under-colour, well pencilled; 2, Phillips, also grand type, heavy pencillings, wee bit paler in undercolour; 3, Arnot and Jamieson, good coloured Cinn.; 4, Forrest, well pencilled buff Green; 5, 7, Watson; 6, Murray. SELL. (21): 1, Gilchrist; 2, Montgomery; 3, Haig; 4, Blaikie; 5, Linton; 6, Harrinson; 7, Johnstone. NOR. CK. (22): Grand class, 1st and spl, Wilson, real beauty, excelling in feather, good head, well rounded body, regular blaze of colour; 2, Cameron, another grand one for type, well rounded chest, splendid wing carriage, only falls in colour to winner; 3, Gill, rich mealy Buff, neat, short body, feather well frosted; 4, Nisbet, Yell., well up in colour, very full chest; 5, Lugton; 6, Gardiner, not ready yet; 7, Lawson. HEN (18): 1, Cameron, well known winner, yell., full of quality, full round head, neat wings; 2, Watt and Storrie, Yell. tick, very chubby, short flights and tail; 3, Hughes, buff, of grand quality; 4, 7, Gardiner, former almost even mark, not so stoutly built as winners; 5, Wilson; 6, Lugton. DARK MULE (9): 1, spl, 4, 7, Gill, two good Yell. Goldies, fine length, hot colour; 2, Laidlaw, very neat Siskin, well laced, rich colour; 3, Henderson, large Linnet, bit unsteady; 5, Gentleman; 6, Dryden. GOLDFINCH (3): 1, Hoyle, best in body and wing bars, lovely moonings; 2, Brown; 3, Beattie. BULLFINCH (2): 1, Laidlaw, Hen, well cut cap, wings and back well marked, souud colour; 2, Robson and Oliver, cock, lovely breast colour, but not well marked wing bars. HARDBILL (12): 1, 6, Simpson, his well known Hawfinch, in splendid feather; 2, Laidlaw, grandly coloured Yellowhammer; 3, Polson, Bramblefinch in rare glossy feather; 4, Brown, neat Siskin; 5, Morrison; 7, Butler. SOFTBILL (6): 1, 4, Laidlaw, winner grandly feathered Gray Wagtail; 2, Hoyle, yell. Wagtail, lovely feather, but unsteady; 3, Henderson; 5, Innes; 6, Paterson. FOREIGN: 1, 3, McWilliam, well feathered Forsteins Lorrikeet; 2, 4, Watson; 5, Hoyle; 6, Mark. Other special prize winners were Messrs. Lambie (3rd Border), Tait (best 4th), Tait (best even or uneven), Bickerstaff, Gilchrist, and Laidlaw. Mr. A. Gill won Hyde's spl.

Some Thoughts on - - - - Cinnamon Breeding.

By THOS. POPE.

As a great admirer of the Cinnamon Canary, it seems a pity to me that the classes for this variety usually fill so badly at shows. There appears to be no recognised centre where the variety is kept in large numbers, as is the case with the Norwich, Crest, Yorkshire, and other varieties. I think if the Cinnamon could once begin to become more popular it would hold its own, and to me it is the most fascinating of the Canary tribe.

Commencing in the Fancy.

Those who take up the hobby of Canary breeding must have a love of birds in general thoroughly ingrained in their nature, and in many cases I have found that Canary fanciers have in times past kept pigeons or fowls, and perhaps owing to want of room, have been compelled to give up the "larger fowl," and, to fill the "aching void," have started with a pair or so of Canaries (kept probably in the kitchen or other room of their house), and, as is almost invariably the case, good luck has attended their efforts with the "commons," and it only required a sight of a friend's bird-room and prize stock to start these people in the cage bird Fancy. If any particular variety is largely kept in the district in which the newcomer resides it generally follows that they will take up that variety, at any rate at first, and probably one is well advised in doing so, as he will certainly get a better insight into the points necessary to breed for in that particular variety. This, I thing, is a great factor in determining the popularity of any particular breed, and as I mentioned at the beginning, I am of opinion that if the Cinnamon were once kept in a given district, as the Norwich is in several parts of the country, we should soon see a better entry at shows.

Here (in Devonshire) the Cinnamon has not made much headway, but classes in some of the Cornish shows during the past season or two have been distinctly on the upgrade, and I am well aware that a few years ago Cornwall could boast of some tip-top specimens of the variety, and could almost be called a Cinnamon centre. May it be revived in the near future.

The Cinnamon Peculiarities.

Like many others, my first attempt in the Fancy was Mule breeding, and my liking for Cinnamons first arose from a desire to breed a Cinnamon dark Mule, and the method that suggested itself to my mind was that of pairing a Goldfinch cock with a yellow Cinnamon hen, and I was somewhat astonished on enquiry of a prominent Mule breeder in my neighbourhood to be told that to produce a Cinnamon Mule the cock Cinnamon Canary must be used.

This led me to gather all information I could from CAGE BIRDS and from other sources, and I found the fact verified, and these peculiarities of Cinnamon blood gave added zest to my liking for the Cinnamon Canary.

During the last three or four years, with a small stud of Cinnamons, I have proved that to breed a cock Cinnamon, both birds must have Cinnamon blood in them, and that the produce of a Cinnamon cock and a Norwich hen without Cinnamon blood is green cocks and Cinnamon hens, and also that a Cinnamon hen, mated with a cock that has not Cinnamon blood, throws no Cinnamon youngsters.

Last season I purchased a yellow green Norwich cock bird, which had been procured from a prominent Norwich breeder by one of the fanciers in my district to improve the colour of his Norwich stock. He paired it to a buff Norwich hen, and the produce was a Cinnamon and a yellow Green. When the old cock came into my possession I paired him to a buff Cinnamon hen, and bred two youngsters, viz., one Cinnamon, and one Green hen.

What is the Ideal Cinnamon?

Amongst all the beautiful pictures which CAGE BIRDS has published from time to time of our prize Canaries, the Cinnamon Club Model, published some few years ago, holds a very high place in my esteem, but I have often wondered if it is possible to breed a bird as this appears to be, without any shading on the back; or is it an ideal to which Cinnamon fanciers must breed up to?

In my endeavour to gather knowledge from the writings of experts, I found that some years ago, when the craze for size was general throughout the Canary Fancy, the Lancashire Canary was chiefly used with the Cinnamon to this end, and one prominent writer gives his opinion that whilst gain is certain in size, the loss of colour is very great, and that the Cinnamon loses considerably in stamina, the Lancashire being closely allied to the Dutch Canary, a bird notoriously of delicate constitution.

During the last few years two fanciers in this district have started a few pairs of Cinnamons, and in conversation I gathered that both thought the present day bird somewhat inclined to be easily upset, and not by any means easy to keep in health, nor yet particularly prolific. I must say that in comparison with the West of England strain of Norwich, I have come to the conclusion that there are good grounds for this opinion.

I have found that I can rarely get more than one nest from each hen. They either do not lay again or else refuse to feed. I have a Buff cock-bird, now over four years old, which won three first prizes last year, and is better than ever before, but I could not get him as a youngster to feed himself, even at five weeks old, and on the off-chance I put him in with a hen that had three Mules about fifteen days old. She luckily fed him with the rest, and even then the Mules could feed themselves first.

Size Not Everything.

Personally, I must admit I have a great partiality for "a good, big 'un," in whatsoever live stock it may be. Not that size is everything, but it should always be accounted for extra merit, other things being equal, and even more than that; and if the crosses used by our forerunners in the Fancy have left behind something that we would rather be without, I think it is very evident, especially in the present-day Cinnamon, that it is quite possible to get a good-coloured, big bird.

I remember hearing a little while ago rather an unusual objection to the Cinnamon, viz., that the colour was not to the fancy of people wanting a singing bird, and consequently the wasters were practically of no value at all. Well, that may be, but I rather think that to those who thoroughly take up the variety and get hold of the proper fascination, so to speak, of its peculiarities, this will weigh very lightly in the balance.

In conclusion, I can but express again my desire that the Cinnamon Canary may be kept by more fanciers, and that we may see more people, not only exhibiting, but winning on the show bench.

There are one or two successful Cinnamon exhibitors. Can it be that their very great successes act as a deterrent to the other would-be exhibitors? One cannot blame anyone for winning all that is to be won, but it is no good to any variety of stock when all the best birds are in the hands of the few.

Crimson Wings have very seldom been successfully bred, and therefore I felt pardonably proud of my babies, though of course not so elevated as I should have been if, like Coleridge's Ancient Mariner, "I had been the first to burst into that silent sea." Still, to breed any sort of Parrakeet is always rather a difficult achievement, unless it be a Budgerigar or a Cockatiel.

Crimson Wings are rather rare. It is a long while since I have seen any offered. Occasionally you can get hold of a cock, as they are often kept for exhibition purposes, but a hen is a rare bird to secure. They are fairly large birds, and square in build. The cock is some 12ins. long, the tail being broad and square. The head and underparts are a beautiful vivid green, the back a rich velvety black, and the whole of the wing coverts deep crimson, hence the name Blood Wings. The principal wing feathers are dark green, and also those of the tail, but the ends are tinged with yellow. The underside of the wings are blue. The beak is red and the feet light brown. The hen is perfectly easy to tell, her body is deep green, merging to yellow under the tail, and she has no black velvet mantle.

It should be remembered that to breed Crimson Wings, or, indeed, any Parrakeet, it is absolutely essential to give a regular supply of green food; by choice, ripe groundsel and flowering grass. Crimson Wings are also very fond of mealworms, and especially when they have young. They take them in their claws and eat them piecemeal, just as we should shrimps, and I believe that my success in rearing was very largely due to the use of these insects. I quite think that in Australia the Crimson Wings feed their young very largely with the big fat maggots that lie in the rotten logs. The eggs are white and very rounded, and about the size of a small pigeon's.

As regards food they are very easy to provide for, for all they require is Canary seed, hemp and millet. They are big, strong-beaked birds, and therefore somewhat difficult to handle. The best way is to get hold of them behind the head, and then if held firmly they are quite helpless. It is quite easy to do, if you only have a little courage, but it is well to remember in parrot catching that everything depends on who gets hold first.

As I looked at the baby Bloodwings I felt inordinately proud, and I felt inclined to echo the historic remark of Mrs. Gamp over the cucumber: "I don't believe a finer cowcumber was ever growed; I'm sure I never see one."

And now I will end with a little story of Lord Beaconsfield. One day a friend asked the aged statesman to give his little son a bit of advice that he would always remember. Disraeli called the lad to his knee and said: "My dear young friend, your good papa has asked me to give you a word of counsel which may be of service to you when you come to man's estate. Never ask who wrote the letters of Junius or on which side of Whitehall Charles I. was beheaded, for if you do either, you will be considered a bore, and that is—well, something too dreadful for you at your tender years to conceive." As I don't want to be considered a bore, I will stop.

Chap. XXXIV.—My Bib Finches.

Love of birds is born in some men like poetry or a pretty taste in claret. It was born in me. As most of my readers know by this time I am very weak where birds are concerned, and a new and strange variety offers an attraction which I find it impossible to resist. Unfortunately for my purse, novelties are always coming my way. As sure as ever I go to a bird shop I see some bird I never saw before, and which I think I shall never see again, unless I buy it incontinent.

Many, many years ago I was in a bird-shop that shall be nameless, when on a dark shelf I saw a cageful of little birds that seemed strangely unfamiliar. They were sitting in the most fascinating way in a long row, and they all looked as like as two peas. I asked what they were, and was told "Bibfinches, from Madagascar." I asked if I might go behind the counter and examine them more nearly, and at once received a courteous permission. I don't know how long I spent in front of that cage. The owner of the shop probably thought I was a "little bit off," as we say here; but if he could have seen inside me, he would have discovered that there was method in my seeming madness.

I was only trying to discover the distinguishing marks of cock and hen. Take twenty peas and try to differentiate them, and you will have some idea of my difficulties. The longer I looked the more puzzled I became.

After a long and weary watch, I at last selected six which I thought might contain some of either sex. I went mostly by size. Some seemed a little stouter than others, but then even these had an aggravating way of pulling themselves together and looking quite slim. Next I tried the beaks, but all seemed to be equally thick. Thirdly, I tried the bib, but here again I found that the same bird by a little manipulation of his breathing apparatus, could enlarge or reduce his bib apparently at will. The only way I felt to be sure of a pair was to buy half-a-dozen, and this I accordingly did, and as the price was not very heavy, seven and sixpence the pair, I felt my purse might survive the shock. At any rate, it had to.

The time when I came across my Bibs was winter, and they came out of a hot shop. I saw, therefore, that it would not do to play any pranks with them. I carried them home, and put them into a nice-sized box cage, in a dwelling-room, and took the precaution to provide them with sleeping accommodation in the shape of several snug little boxes, lined with hay. They showed their appreciation of my thoughtfulness by instantly popping into them, and sitting side by side with their heads peeping out in the most fascinating manner. They seemed very frugal little creatures, as their only need seemed to be millet and water. They were very, very active, and popped about like mice. In size they are very tiny, and snuff-coloured with blue beaks, dark eye marks, greyish mottled heads, black bibs, and rather lighter underparts, finished off with a most absurd and pert little tail.

At the time of which I am writing, Bibfinches were a distinct novelty, and accordingly I felt exceedingly proud of my new purchases. For the moment I had something which my neighbour had never seen; but then comes the question, how long will this last? Has the King, has Mr. Pierpont Morgan, had Madam Humbert a something which nobody else will ever have? Is there any single household anywhere that can really laugh at the Tenth Commandment?

Since that happy day, there have been several importations of Bibfinches, and they are now comparatively common. I was in a state of feverish excitement, as I wanted to be the very first to breed Bibfinches in England, and to do this with any species of bird, you now have to be particularly spry. It is undoubtedly the early bird that catches the worm, so far as bird-breeding is concerned. You never can tell what somebody else may be doing.

I had not had my birds a fortnight before I saw that something was wrong with one of them, and as I gazed upon "it,"—for I did not know the sex—the question of Mr. John Fisker, journeyman carpenter, came back to me; he, when he saw the bust of Voltaire in the Cambridge Library asked, "Kinder sickly like, war'nt he?—certainly looked kinder sickly like." My poor little friend was unhappy, and also looked sickly-like, and a few mornings later I found that he had gone to seek a climate more like Jamaica than England in winter. My chances were reduced by one, and we were like the little niggers of old:—

"One kicked the bucket,
And then there were five."

My Three Favourite British Birds.

A Lecture by Mr. E. HOUGHTON before the Stockton Heath and Dist. O.S. on Sept. 16.

It gives me very great pleasure in being asked to give you a paper on British birds, and I hope that if I don't quite agree with you all, you won't handle me too severely. I may tell you that you have not very far to go from here before you come into touch with the trio of birds which I am going to speak of to-night.

The Handsome Bullfinch.

The Bullfinch is one of our most handsome Britishers. When you have obtained a good specimen, the great thing is to keep him in that lovely condition, which is essential to winning in keen competition. If you wish to keep him in that condition you must remember that Bullie is a fruit or berry eater as well as a seedeater, and you must therefore give him a good supply of his natural colour-food in the way of berries.

The blackberry is full of colouring matter, the juice being the same colour as the breast of the Bullfinch. The privet berry is also a strong colouring agent, the purple-black juice being just the colour required to intensify the black of the head, tail and wings. That these juices have strong colouring powers can be seen by the excrement which is strongly tinged when the birds have been feeding on the berries. It is no use giving them a few occasionally as a luxury, they must have as many as they will eat.

It will be noticed that the berries have a tendency to scour the birds, and to counteract this they must be given a good supply of the best Spanish Canary seed, and crushed sunflower seed, which will keep them in good condition.

Moulted birds are generally larger and in finer feather, through not having to withstand the rigours of our climate. So what they require is to be treated and fed as nearly like the birds would feed in nature as possible, and you will then have size, quality, condition and colour in the birds, and also that gloss and brilliancy one finds absent in Bullfinches fed entirely on dry seeds.

The Yellow Bunting.

The Yellow Bunting or Yellow Hammer is another very pretty species of British birds, and the best to select for the purposes of exhibiting are those two or three years old, as they are then in full colour, and showing more golden yellow than the younger birds. Choose one that is brilliant in yellow colour, and well defined in its dark markings on head, cheeks and back. The body feathers should be of good quality and like wax, and the wing and tail feathers should be in perfect order.

The ideal head mark is V shaped, commencing at the beak and spreading out on the back, the skull being clean in the centre. The bird should be perfectly steady and in good health and condition.

I find that the following keeps them in good plumage and condition: best Spanish Canary seed and a little crushed hemp seed, and a few mealworms and ants' eggs, with plenty of water to bath in.

The Best All-round Finch.

Greypates, in my opinion, make the best all round Finches, and you have always a chance of moulting out a good one or two if you can get in touch with and accompany the catcher, so that you can make your own selection before the birds get into the dealer's hands. On getting them home you must remember that they have been feeding on soft immature wild seeds. I have found it a very good plan to turn them into a good-sized flight cage, with plenty of sand on the floor inside the cage, along the front, so as to be near the light.

Place two saucers in, one containing cracked hemp seed and the other teazel seed, not forgetting a fresh supply of fresh water. You can place the seed boxes on, and as soon as the birds begin to feed from it in the course of a day or so you can cage them off one by one with a view to steadying them before the first full cage moult.

I will now try to give you the show points. Good size in a bird is to be preferred, and one that gets well up, stands straight on his legs, and is bold and graceful in his carriage, and not a squatty and sulky bird. The head should be long, sleek and well formed. The bill should be long, massive and straight, and the red face broad and expansive, square cut and (not round) deep and rich in colour. The white on the cheeks and breast should not be too pale, but show a faint brown tinge. The collar should be intense in blackness, and the bars on wings should be of a rich golden yellow. The black feathers in the wings and tail should resemble ebony, with spots and moons of pure white showing distinctly. The back and sides of the breast should be a rich bright brown, the breast and near vent of a rich chesnut, and the legs and beak in house-moulted birds white.

and 2¾ins. apart. I then cross-cut a piece of cane, about 4½ins. long, and bend round and put into the holes bored for same. This can be taken out any time and cleaned with the greatest ease.—P. RYAN.

No. 353.
An Easily-made Seed Crusher.

Sent by Mr. F. Buxton, 70, Ellison Street, Sheffield.

The enclosed sketch shows a cheap and easily made seed-crusher. All that is required is an ordinary round coffee or cocoa can with a hole knocked in the centre of the lid and bottom (see Fig. A), and a crusher (Fig. B), made as follows: Get a round piece of wood thick enough to leave a space of about an 8th of an inch all round the can when inside, and about three parts the length of the can; nail round this a piece of tin with holes punched in like a 1d. grater; get a strong piece of iron wire, and bore a hole through the middle of the wood so that the wire will knock through tight; leave about an inch of the wire projecting at one end, and bend it at the other to form the handle. Place the crusher in position in the can, and fill up with seed (see Fig. C.). Put on the can lid and then turn the handle a few seconds, and the seed is crushed. Hold the can upright when crushing.—F. BUXTON.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*Some Sociable Rooks.

Some Rooks had built their nests in the trees near a farmhouse. The farmer was fond of them, and often fed them. He left this farm and went to live at one about a mile away. One morning he heard a "caw caw" around the house. On going out to see what it was, he found that there were his old friends the Rooks. He was pleased they had come to live near him, and that they were building new nests.—Taken from a story book, and sent by J. Nicholson (age 13), 6, Weardale Place, Stockton-on-Tees.

*A Parrot that Whistles.

Our neighbour has a Parrot which is a great talker. He hangs outside on a fine day. When the milkman comes round with his milk, he whistles, and the Parrot whistles, too. I just wish you could hear him whistle. He often brings people out for milk when the milkman is not there.—Sent by David Sharpe (age 8), Cora Linn, Union Street, Motherwell.

Nests of birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

A Tame Blackbird.

Last year I found a young Blackbird in the garden one very wet day. I took him inside, and put him into a flannel lined basket. I fed him on mealworms, garden worms, and caterpillars, and in time he became a very handsome young bird with rich chocolate-coloured plumage. He was the tamest bird I ever saw. He would follow me into the garden, which was in the middle of fields, fly away and disappear for some time, and then come back and perch on my shoulder. When I was leaving my home, I gave him to a friend, but she was careless, and he flew out.—Sent by Ethel Fitzmaurice (age 10), Ivy Cottage, Cappagh, Kilrush-le-Clare, Ireland.

Yorkshire Canary Club.

May I call the attention of those members who are exhibiting, and who have not yet paid their subscriptions, that this must be done to enable them to show. Also, several are neglecting to mark three birds Y.C.C.A. when showing more than that number. Novices, too, are showing in the novice classes at shows where the club's patronage is given; by so doing they are not scoring any points, as they must show in the open classes, and place "Novice Y.C.C." to their entries. All the above conditions must be complied with before any points can be scored by the secretary.—JOHN GREAVES, hon. secretary.

Help Wanted from Linnet Fanciers.

SIR,—I wish to know if it is possiblo to force a Linnet to moult, and what to give it? Can anyone tell me, a novice, what to do with a Linnet that is stuck fast in the moult; also how to make a Linnet sing?

Alleged Mutilation of Exhibition Birds.

Why were the Feathers Missing?

SIR,—Shocking treatment was met at Peterborough show by my Clear Buff hen, the one which secured third at Longton the previous Saturday. She was sent on to Peterborough show on the Wednesday afternoon in grand feather and condition, but was sent home in a dreadful state. Some mean person had stripped her of all her feathers between the shoulders, leaving a large bare patch, which, of course, has spoiled her for exhibition. If this kind of treatment is not put a stop to, I am sure entries will fall short. I trust something will be done to punish the guilty.

A Question of Cage Bird Union Rules

And the Carlisle (Border City) Show.

SIR,—I have received a schedule from the Border City (Carlisle) Ornithological Society, and in the declaration at foot of entry form it says: I enter my birds at my own risk, subject to the rules of the Cage Bird Union." Now, no copy of the C.B.U. rules was enclosed in schedule, and if the show is under the C.B.U., why were copies of the rules not enclosed? and, if not, why does such a statement appear on entry forms. I may say several of our members' entry forms for the same show are alike. You might also publish the following question concerning the English and Welsh Border Fancy Club. Can members of above club exhibit at any non-union shows? I was under the impression they were affiliated to the Cage Bird Union.

Rearing Insectivorous Birds on Soft-food Mixtures.

SIR,—Mr. Teschemaker is right, and I am wrong, re the matter of the young Bank Mynah's parents being confined to the back compartment of the aviary in which their nest was placed. They had, as he says, free access to the outer flight all the time, and I apologise sincerely for contradicting him on this point, which I did in all good faith.

FRANK FINN.

SIR,—I have been much interested in Mr. Teschemaker's letter in your last issue. I have read somewhere of a pair of Nightingales having bred in a cage, and having reared the young on meat and eggs. Perhaps they had insect food as well. I suppose there is no doubt that some Softbills can be hand-reared without insect food, so whether they get the artificial food from the hand or from the bills of the parents cannot, I should think, make any difference. It may, of course, be difficult to get the parents to feed on the artificial food, and I don't suppose any one would deny that the more natural the food the better chance there would be of the birds being reared; but I think the chief drawback to an exclusive natural food would be in keeping up the supply, and then if it ran short, the birds being unaccustomed to artificial food, would refuse it and starve. I think egg and mealworms are very generally used for Nightingales, so it would be very interesting if Mr. Teschemaker would kindly let us know how he feeds his. His feeding must certainly be good to keep a Sprosser in song for 49 weeks. I should think this must beat the record. I have never found that Nightingales cared for vegetable food, and so have never given it. It would be interesting if fanciers who are successful in keeping the Nightingale in song would let us know for how many months they can do so, and their system of feeding, also mentioning whether the birds were hand-reared or wild caught, as it would be easier to keep the former in song, I presume. I had a Nightingale that used to begin singing when he had hardly finished moulting. He was a wild-caught bird, but I don't think he sang for more than four months, although he commenced so early. My plan of feeding is as follows:—(1) Pea flour mixture, one part lard to three parts pea-flour in pan by itself; (2) dry ants' eggs and egg flake in another pan ad libitum; (3) teaspoonful of soaked ants' eggs in a separate pan (the ants' eggs are immersed and the water poured off immediately); (4) six mealworms a day and as many Cockroaches as are available. Once or twice a week nothing is given except ants' eggs, dry and soaked, and the insect food. None of the food requires daily preparation except the soaked ants' eggs.

A Pretty and Practical Out-door Aviary.

SIR,—I am sending you a photograph of my aviary, which I have built in a backyard that was of no use for any other purpose. I bought one of the books that are advertised in your paper, CAGE BIRDS, entitled, "Aviaries, Bird-rooms and Cages," and written by H. Norman. This was twelve months ago, and the photo. will show you what it has done for me, as I had no idea before of how to build one. The length of the aviary is 16ft., while it is 5ft. wide and 5ft. high. I am a regular and delighted reader of CAGE BIRDS.

Mules and Canaries in the Same Nest.

SIR,—I am a novice at breeding, and I have five nests this season with Goldfinch and Canary. I have had Mules and Canaries in one and the same nest, the hen's eggs having been fertilised with the cock Canary first, and when she had laid her first egg she was put with the cock Goldfinch. Thus I got two young Canaries and two Mules in the same nest. Some old bird breeders say it is impossible, as when the Canary treads it stands for all the eggs after she has laid her first egg.

Missing Water Tins.

SIR,—After receiving my birds back from several shows. I have found a water-tin missing. Now, the station that I have my birds sent to is a long distance from where I live, and sometimes they have to remain there for several hours, perhaps half a day, before I am able to get them. The station-master at this station (Linley, on the G.W.R.), is one of the best, and upon receiving any birds from shows he unpacks them and gives them water to drink. If there are no water tins how can he do this? Only recently I received two birds back from Longton show without even a single water tin, and I sent two. When I unpacked them to give them water I had to pack them up again and walk a long distance to a brother fancier's house and borrow some water tins. It was the first time out for one of my birds, a young Hawfinch, and this is a bird that requires plenty of water. I hope show secretaries will take this in a kindly light. It is for the sake of the birds and not the tins that I have written on this subject.

The Feeding of Softbills Abroad

SIR,—It was with great interest that I read Mr. Finn's article under the heading of "Ornithological Oddments" re the feeding of Softbills. I was specially interested in the part where he speaks of uncooked rice being used as food for the foreign Softbills in transport, as I have just come home from the East (Malay Federated States in the Malay Peninsular), and brought with me four of those beautiful birds, the Blue-crowned Hanging Parrakeets. In the Malay Peninsular they are fed on the following diet: Rice (uncooked) mixed with water, and banana. Occasionally the Malays give them a little boiled rice, and also sometimes a small piece of sugar cane. The Malays, however, say the cane is bad for them, as it cuts up the tongue. Those I brought home were fed the whole voyage on nothing but the uncooked rice, mixed with water, and occasionally fruit (when obtainable from the steward). I also brought home a pair of Bulbuls, and these birds I continued to feed as they are always fed in the East, namely, with the boiled rice and banana, or any ripe fruit. The Malays always feed Moustache Parrakeets and Ringnecks on the rice mixed with water, and Softbills usually on boiled rice in one cup, and another cupful of Chinese dried flies. My Hanging Parrakeets have been fed on nothing but the uncooked rice and banana since being in this country, and have come through the moult beautifully. I only lost one shortly after arrival, due, I think, to its inability to moult. I hope, sir, the above notes will be of interest to fanciers, especially those who keep Blue-crowned Hanging Parrakeets. REGINALD G. P. NELSON.

Should Goldfinches be Colour-fed for Exhibition?

SIR,—Allow me a word or two on the subject of colour-feeding of Goldfinches, as I should like to ask the question whether it is right or fair to colour-feed Goldfinches, as I was a visitor at the Longton show and saw five Goldfinches colour-fed. Now, I thought of exhibiting a Goldfinch, but I have not given it any colour food, and if colour-fed birds are allowed to stand good in the class, I may as well keep my bird at home, for I always understood that colour-fed Goldfinches were strictly forbidden; and if they are allowed to pass a non-fed bird stands but very little chance. I must admit that a colour-fed bird looks very nice and taking, but it is hardly fair to the bird that is not fed. All I want to know is whether the fed bird is to compete with the non-fed bird, then one will understand what to expect, and act accordingly. I should like to hear what some other British exhibitors have to say on this matter, for a non-fed bird has not the ghost of a chance against the bird that is fed, although he may be much better. Will someone kindly explain why this is allowed, or whether secretaries ought to mention in schedules if for fed or mixed birds, or whether we may please ourselves? Or is it left to the judge? There ought to be some proper understanding about this, just as much as there is about Canaries. Classes are put on for fed birds and for self coloured.

A. WILLIAMS.

Can Chaffinch-Bramblefinch Hybrids be Bred in a Cage?

SIR,—With reference to the above, may I be permitted to give my experience? The past season I paired up a house-moulted cock Chaffinch to a house-moulted hen Bramble, with the following result:—On 7th July the Bramble laid her first egg, which she put her beak into, so the following and two subsequent mornings I was up early before she had a chance to do the same thing again. The three eggs I placed under a Norwich hen. One young one hatched, the other two eggs were clear. The young one lived for two days, and then died. A week later, while I was away at camp, she laid again. The first and second eggs she laid she again tried her beak on, but the third one my wife managed to save, which she put under a Border hen that had three eggs at the same time. The hybrid egg hatched out on the thirteenth day, and the Borders on the fourteenth day. The young hybrid lived for three days, but the Borders are still living. It therefore is possible to breed the above cross in a cage, but the difficulty is to get the young reared. In my opinion Canaries are no use for rearing this hybrid. I would advise Miss M. Young to get a good hen Greenfinch, one that has bred in confinement, if possible, or else, if she should get eggs from her hen Bramble to put them in a wild Chaffinch's nest, and when eight days old bring them home and hand rear them. I may say the cage I used was 3ft. long, 1½ft. high, 1ft. deep. I had a small bush in one corner, but they never used this—she preferred an ordinary nest-box. As regards a wild or a hand-reared cock Chaffinch for the purpose, the hand-reared one would be better, but I should prefer a good, steady house-moulted one. I trust these notes may be of some interest to your correspondent, and wish her and also your highly instructive journal success.

EDMUND TAYLOR.

A Remedy Wanted for a Fatal Disease.

SIR,—I am very thankful to your correspondent, Mr. Robt. Oddy, for his information re the fatal disease, in your last issue. Perhaps he will further enlighten me and other readers of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, what quantity of citrate of iron and quinine should be given, and also does he mean the liquid or powdered quinine?

R. DAVIES.

SIR,—I have been in the same plight as some of the unfortunate fanciers who have been writing in CAGE BIRDS this last few weeks. I had about 45 birds a few weeks ago; now they have all died but a dozen or so. I sent one away, and they said it had had bird fever. The birds all went one way, with one exception, and that seemed all right up to about two hours before it died; blood dropped from it all over the cage bottom, and the poor bird seemed in great pain. Could any fancier tell me the reason of this? I have several more going the same way, and I believe I shall lose all before long. I am trying the iron and quinine as recommended. I have never had one come round after showing the first symptoms—that is, sitting in a lump with the head under wing and panting. About 20 of the lost birds were Crests and Crest-breds, and expensive birds, so that it has been a great loss to me.

NOVICE.

The Song of the Linnet North and South.

SIR,—I have heard Harry Allen's bird, of Leeds, accomplish all I have said. I heard a bird of old Tom Ainy's, and a few birds up and down the country. I have also heard double-noted Linnets, and I know what I am talking about. I kept Linnets for 40 years under old Bob Bocock, of Ossett, who was a judge of the best, and used to be a judge of the bow window breeds. And old Jim Swift was a pal of mine. I heard the Linnets ree and pee, or scrape, and do changes five or six times. I heard Harry Allen's do all these. I heard his brother, Georgie, also H. Lees, and seeing that I am a fair judge, I think H. Allen's birds, of Leeds, are the best I have ever heard.

FIDDLER, DEWSBURY.

SIR,—For the benent of the Fancy I give the following notes of the three birds I am at present using for bird-catching. No. 1 ("Twopenny"): "Tollic, tollic, ick e quaker, weet; tollic, tollic, ick equa, tuck, tuck, wissy." No. 2 ("Donny"): "Tollic, tollic, ick equa; tollic, tollic, fear; tollic, tollic, weet; tollic, tollic, wissy." No. 3 ("Rubbisher"): "Joey, Joey, pew, pew, per, bike, bike, bike, lily, lily, lily, back, back, back, chow chow, chow, tur fear, tur fear, tur fear, tur fear, tur fear, tuck, tuck, tuck, margee, margee, weet, weet, weet." Although I acknowledge that I carry a rubbishing Linnet, I never carry a Cuckoo, Water-hens, or Crows, as we are led to believe by some of the "cracks."

H. W. BARNARD.

The Modern Norwich Plainhead.

SIR,—I was very pleased to read the letter from your correspondent, Charles Key, on the present-day winning Norwich Plainhead. It opens up a very wide subject, and a very interesting one. Recently I saw a friend (a Norwich breeder for many years), Mr. Williams, who had attended the Peterborough show, and he used expressions very similar to Mr. Key as regards the winners in the Norwich Plainhead classes—long tails, duck-chested, rough at thigh, long bodies, in fact, anything but what a typical Norwich Canary should be. What is the use of the Norwich Plainhead Club issuing a standard and we as breeders trying to breed to it, if judges will not recognise a typical Norwich? It seems to me when a judge gets to a show to commence judging as soon as he gets to his classes the first thing he looks for is how many big ones there are, and if there are a few larger ones than medium-sized typical birds, the big ones will most certainly win, never mind their faults—whether Crest-bred, duck fronted, or wagtailed, they will win. Surely this is enough to make an admirer of the typical Norwich Canary throw up the Fancy in disgust. What a waste of time reading the books written by some of our leading judges as to what a Norwich Canary should be, and trying to breed them, season after season, only to find birds winning such as described by Messrs. Key and Williams. But such birds as these are only useful for the breeding cage and as songsters. I, like Mr. Key, think it is time the Norwich club stepped in and stopped these mongrels from winning.

A Cage Bird Section for the Spennymoor F. and F.C.

SIR,—On my suggestion, at the Spennymoor F. and F.C. meeting on October 6th, it was unanimously decided to have a Cage Bird Section, providing I could get plenty of fanciers together to run classes at their forthcoming show to be held on December 29th. Anyone wishful of joining may give their names in to me at Cheapside, Spennymoor, Co. Durham, and I will give full information. All cage bird fanciers are heartily invited to attend the meetings, which are advertised by bills in the town.

OSWALD ARKLESS.

"Going Light": Can it be Cured?

SIR,—I have read with interest the numerous letters which have lately appeared in your excellent paper, CAGE BIRDS, on the subject of "Going Light," and "A Remedy Wanted," but as far as my judgment goes there has not been a remedy, either curative or preventative, offered. Some writers have even gone so far as to hint at its being "septic fever," which I think I have proved is not the case. The "going light," as it is termed, seems to me to be what doctors call malnutrition, and the cause of this appears to be in the food given—not in the quantity, for they are always eating, but in the quality. If the seeds are poor and infested with maggots and mites, what else can we expect than that the digestive organs of the birds will be deranged, and the birds die of slow starvation? In proof of this let anyone examine a bird which has died of this complaint and he will find a mere skeleton covered with skin and a few feathers. But I will give you my experiences during last season, in the hope that others may benefit by them, that is if there is anything new and worth notice. I commenced breeding operations about the middle of March with a dozen hens, all in the pink of condition. From the first round I had 25 fine young birds reared, the hens, as a rule, feeding well. I gave them, in addition to their usual seeds, egg food twice a day mixed fresh each time, also a dish of crushed hemp, and young dandelion leaves and flowers, fresh drinking water in clean glasses every day, breeding cages cleaned out, and plenty of gritty sand two or three times a week. At the second round, while the hens were sitting, I gave plain Canary only as a staple, with an occasional tit-bit in the shape of rape or a little egg food. Between the first and second rounds I had to get a fresh supply of rape and hemp seed. I ought to have mentioned that I used a little soaked rape mixed with the egg food. The feeding of the second round was the same in every respect as for the first. But when the young were a day or two old the hens began with a severe diarrhœa, all food except Canary was neglected, and, of course, within a week, every young bird in that round was dead. Well, as there is no effect without a cause, I began to look round to try to find it. I got a magnifying glass and examined my Canary seed; that was all right. I next looked at the hemp, and there I found nearly every seed with a little hole in one end, and some which were badly broken at the side. I cracked a few to see what the insides were like; some were badly discoloured just where the outer shell was broken, while in one I found a small maggot alive. Now, I thought, I have found the cause, surely the effect will cease; but, of course, it was too late then, the damage was done. Needless to say, I used no more of that hemp. I then put all my breeding stock on to plain Canary seed, and in a week or two they had quite recovered, and were anxious to go to nest again; so, after a good rest, I again paired up, and all went well until the hatching and feeding commenced. I again used soaked rape along with the egg food, and again the same trouble appeared; diarrhœa in both cocks and hens, mostly the hens, and within a fortnight I had lost every young bird except two, and they died at five weeks old; so I gave it up in despair for that season. Now, this time it had not been caused by the hemp, for I had not used any at all; but on going to the dish in which I had the rape soaking, I felt a rather disagreeable smell. No, my friend, I had not forgotten to change the water; so I threw that away and went to the tin in which I kept my rape, and there was a smell nearly as bad as the soaked rape. I got my microscope and examined a few seeds, and found considerably more in number of small white and nearly transparent mites than seeds, in fact, they were simply alive with them. I stopped using that at once, and the breeding stock all got well. But what about the 25 young out of the first round? Well, here comes in the point about the "going light"; out of the 25 young birds I lost 15. I had given them a fair allowance of soaked rape in their egg food, also a fair quantity of crushed hemp. They were constantly eating and sleeping, and yet when dead were little more than skeletons. Now comes the point about "septic fever," which is highly contagious. Purposely to prove whether it was that disease or not, I put some healthy birds of no particular value into the cage in which several of them had died, and to be quite certain about it, I did not even clean the cages out before putting the birds in, and they are alive and well to-day. So much for the septic fever theory. I got some good sound rape and hemp, and have not lost a bird since. I do hope fanciers will not allow this subject to drop, and if each one who has been troubled with this complaint will give a minute description of their mode of feeding, etc., it is just possible that we may find either a cure or a preventative.

DEANS AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held in the Dean's Institute on October 5th, Mr. Brown presiding. There was a large turnout of members, and it was agreed to meet again on October 19th to make final arrangements for the show, which will be held on 13th November.—J. KAY, Sec.

CHESTER C.B.F.A.

Monthly meeting held at the Nag's Head Cocoa House, October 5th, Mr. Crane in the chair. I regret to announce the death of Mr. F. S. Moore, who was President from its inception (1905) to 1908. He was a keen and enthusiastic fancier, and although he had retired from the position owing to ill-health, took a strong interest in the Society and its members. A vote of sympathy and condolence was passed to be sent to Mrs. Moore and family. A communication was read from the Secretary of L.C.B.A. re entering a team for the championship competition, but owing to the proximity of their show to our own, it was thought not advisable, although the members endorsed the scheme. It was decided to avail ourselves of the compensation scheme of the C.B.U. A special prize, either cup or medal, will be given for best bird in the show on 4th December. A new member from Ruabon, North Wales, was made.—J. SWINDLEY, Hon. Sec.

POPLAR AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held on Sept. 30th, Mr. T. G. Hunt in the chair. The chief event was a washing competition, and as only five birds were brought up, it was only possible for the same number of competitors to take part. Mr. H. T. Jones judged, and awarded the prizes. 1st prize, Mr. Plumb; 2nd, Mr. Barber. Mr. Jones carried out his duties as judge in an admirable manner, and his awards were well received. While the birds were drying, the meeting was thrown open, and many questions were asked and answered. The principal question was respecting septic fever. Many members gave their views, and there is no doubt all present learned many things. At this juncture the Chairman asked Mr. Jones if he would pass a few remarks on the methods adopted by the competitors in washing their birds. The comments he made caused an amount of laughter. At the close of his remarks it was proposed that we pass him a hearty vote of thanks, which was responded to heartily, and this closed a very pleasant evening.—H. W. COOK, Hon. Sec.

PONTYPRIDD PWLLGWAUN F.S.

Monthly meeting held at the Hopkinstown Schools on October 11th, Mr. Thos. James in the chair. There was a fair attendance, and a large amount of business was gone through. The schedule was gone through, and will shortly be put in hands of printer. A number of specials were exhibited at the meeting. A large number have been promised, and it was decided to exhibit same publicly later on. Amongst those to be competed for are four cups by the members of the Welsh C.B.C., two cups, 10s. 6d., and two medals by the Welsh U.G.S., a case of cutlery, a cup, and a host of others, too numerous to mention. It was decided to hold a poultry lantern lecture on November 8th, at the schools. This Society is doing all it possibly can to make our coming show a grand success, and if the interest shown by the members goes for anything it is evident our next show, to be held December 15th, will be a record one. It is intended to give a children's pet class, which will no doubt prove a novel feature.—MCLUCAS and JAMES, secretaries.

WEST LONDON F.A.

Meeting held at headquarters, Bush Hotel, Shepherd's Bush, Mr. Mugford in the chair. A letter was read from Mr. Thompson with regard to the reporting of monthly meetings to the Fancy Press, and after some comment it was decided unanimously that he be entrusted with same. A proposition by Mr. Lack, seconded by Mr. Turner, that the cup rules be altered as follows: "That all members, champion, novice, etc., who have already subscribed to the cup fund, should, by marking their entries with a 'C' and paying an extra 3d. over entry fee, be entitled to compete for cup" was considered. After a deal of argument it was decided that all such entries for cup should be judged first, and afterwards should be put back in their respective classes for competition in same. An amendment was also carried that no cards be placed until the birds have been judged a second time. It was proposed by Mr. Cooper, and seconded by Mr. Butterfield, that the entry fee for selling class be reduced to 6d., which was also carried. All other show rules remain the same as in previous years. A long and substantial list of special prizes was subscribed for, and many more were promised, which augurs well for the forthcoming annual show. Any members who would care to add to the list, or have not yet paid their subscription, should communicate with me at 52, North End-road, West Kensington.—J. DEWHURST, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Committee meeting held at headquarters, the Feathers Hotel, Gt. Chapel-street, Westminster, Sept. 30th. Present: Messrs. Robson (Chairman), Silver, Thurling, Dobson, Lott, Marley, Askew, Trower, Dewhurst, Cooper, Weston, Crabb, Frostick, Goodchild, Plumbridge and Carr. A letter was read from the Dulwich O.S., and it was proposed by Mr. Dewhurst, seconded by Mr. Silver, "That by letter received from members of this club, the committee were justified in arriving at the decision of August 25th, and under those circumstances the matter cannot be re-opened." A letter was read from Messrs. Angus and Crane, and the Secretaries were instructed to forward rule book and call their attention to Rule 20. A letter was read from the Secretary of the Scottish British Bird and M.C., also a resolution passed by them re the McQuiston case. After a lengthy discussion it was proposed by Mr. Trower, and seconded by Mr. Askew, "That on the face of the evidence received and the decision arrived at by the committee of this club, they cannot re-open this case unless the S.B.B. and M.C. can bring fresh evidence to justify the Committee's doing so." A discussion took place on the position of the drinking hole in the club's standard show cage. It was unanimously decided that it should be notified in the Fancy Press for the guidance of fanciers who wished to adopt this cage. It was not the intention of the club to make any hard and fast rule for fanciers adopting this cage to place the drinking hole in the right-hand end, but to place it to suit themselves, and it was left to fanciers to adopt either a trough or drawer in their cages. An interesting announcement was made by that old and esteemed member, Mr. Frostick, who said he was the proud possessor of the first Dartford Warblers that had ever been kept in captivity, and that these birds had been taken from a nest found on a Hampshire common. Mr. Frostick also showed photographs of the nest and eggs of the Dartford Warbler. He was warmly congratulated on his unique prize. Mr. S. Hakes (Burton-on-Trent) was made a member. A hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the meeting.—PLUMBRIDGE AND CARR, Hon. Secs.

Wild Bird Life.

Bird Life in the Fields.

Just now bird life in gardens and around buildings is somewhat scarce, the feathered tribe being away in the fields and meadows. With most species the young birds of the year form into flocks as soon as they are safely launched by the parents and can cater for themselves. This gathering of the young ones is the commencement of the huge flocks to be met with by country ramblers during the Autumn and Winter months. While undergoing the annual renewal of a fresh coat of feathers, wild birds are shy and unobtrusive. They haunt the wilder and more solitary tracts, the uplands, woods, or lonely marshes; instinctively they recognise that they have lost part of their power of self-preservation, and so seek solitude and seclusion. The homely Blackbird and Thrush are not exempt from this shyness, and it is only in the very early morning, when the dew lies heavily upon the grass, that we catch them upon the lawn or side walk; for the remainder of the day they haunt the shrubbery, or skulk along the hedgerow bordering the meadow.

At present food in the fields is plentiful everywhere. The atmospheric conditions have been such that worms, slugs and insect life of all kinds have been abundant, so that the Softbills have revelled in plenty. The harvest has been an unusually long one, and the shocks of corn have stood in the fields until blackened and weather-stained by the wet, and while so exposed the Finches, Sparrows, Doves and Rooks have ravaged and scattered the grain, so that the stubble affords meal after meal to huge flocks of ramblers. They number some thousands, as they often do. They are easily disturbed; half their life appears to be made up of false alarms and short wheeling flights. When winter comes with its hard frosts and driving sleet, hundreds will leave the flocks, and then there will be a rush of bird life to the farm buildings and gardens. Wild bird music is far from plentiful. I heard a sprightly Thrush singing a cheerful strain, in spite of wind and wet. That incessant songster, the Skylark, may occasionally be heard as he can in any month of the year. Get but a gleam of sunshine in the dead of Winter and he hails it with song, and often when a thick fog envelopes the surroundings he may be heard trilling happily above it.

Under the White Rose.

QUEENSBURY Show, held on Saturday last was a decided success, the entries totalling 455 in 24 classes, an average of 19 per class. Well done, Queensbury; two grand shows in succession. Last year 463 entries, and now only 8 less, and so early in the season. They should have a nice balance in hand.

THIS Show opened the competition of the National Green Marked Y.C.C., and the four classes provided were well filled, 62 birds being staged, and some splendid specimens amongst them. The hens in particular were enough to delight the heart of any fancier.

NOVICE Yorkshires were numerous, and a very warm lot, 172 in 6 classes, an average of 28 per class. Mr. C. A. House must have been sorely perplexed which to put in and which to leave out. In Novice Norwich the two classes contained 32 birds; keep it up all the season, fanciers of the stout ones.

THE Y.C.C. and C.M.Y.C.C. each had their patronage away from home on Saturday last, Accrington being the fortunate show. The new idea of the C.M.Y.C.C., viz., the provision of classes for their novice members, does not seem to have made a good start. A wrong impression appears to have got abroad as to how these classes have to be constituted. In the first place they are held at shows only where the club gives its patronage; secondly, they are open to all competitors who have not won a first prize in open competition previous to the current season; thirdly, any member of the Yorkshire Union can exhibit and win in these classes without losing his status as a novice in the Union; fourthly, points gained in these classes do not count for Yorkshire Union medals; lastly, there is no limit in price in these novice classes—they are put on simply to foster the breeding and exhibiting of the Cinnamon Marked bird by novices. The society fully expected, having added about 100 new names to their membership roll, and these principally novices, that these classes would fill well, and they are extremely disappointed.

BANKFOOT and Dis. C.B.S. have issued their first syllabus of lectures, etc., for the coming season, and it provides something to suit all tastes.

LOANHEAD.

Loanhead and Dis. C.B.S. held their third annual show on October 9th within the Masonic Hall. The entries, which totalled 140, were down on last year's, the Norwich section being responsible for the decrease. The Scotch Fancy section was up on last year, and contained specimens of outstanding merit, the medal winning yellow hen, exhibited by Mr. J. King, being an eye-opener. This district is a hotbed for Borders, and staid Mr. Peter McKenzie was fairly taken by surprise at the galaxy of quality placed before him, and they gave him a deal of trouble to sort out. The medal in this section was awarded to the ticked yellow cock bird belonging to Mr. Jas. Pearson, and the same bird also carried off the Frichael Cup. Norwich section, although disappointing, contained a few nice birds, the medal for best going to Mr. A. M. Gardiner. The show was well patronised, Mr. Provost Kerr, attended by his good lady, being amongst the number present. Mrs. Kerr presented the prizes to the successful exhibitors after a racy speech by the Provost, Mr. W. Smart, the secretary (to whom all credit is due) looking on with a smile of content. The judges were Messrs. J. Winter (Edinburgh), Peter McKenzie (Kelso), and T. Knight (Edinburgh).

DULWICH.

Held October 12th and 13th, in Dulwich Municipal Hall. For splendid light and every essential that goes to make up a suitable place for a cage bird exhibition, the latter has few equals, and one cannot but regret that the splendid provision made in this respect, the excellent schedule, and the attentions of an energetic body of fanciers, did not produce a more hearty response in the matter of entries. Of these there were about 500. The quality in most sections was of the highest order. A backward moulting season militated against some of the birds' chances, and may lead to a reversal of awards later. Norwich generally were not big classes in any section, except in unflighted birds and hens, but some of the best studs were represented, and the competition was keen. The specials in the open championship classes fell to Mr. Young and Mr. Collings. In the open novice classes, too, Messrs. Sporr and Goodman, Messrs. Rogers and Mazzoni, won the rose bowl for best bird in members' champion classes, and Mr. Sprules the special for second best Norwich. In the novice classes, Mr. Foster won the special rose bowl for best Norwich; also the second special. Yorkshires were a magnificent lot, and gave Mr. Mundell some trouble. The Borders, too, made a splendid show, but British and Mules were by no means large classes. Mr. Baker won Sandiford's colour special, Messrs. Woolhouse and Rogers made excellent show secretaries, while better stewards and committeemen could not be desired than Messrs. Goodwin, Garlick, Fletcher, Lovesey, Aldridge, Sprules, Bruty, Edmonds, Mazzoni, Pocock, Powles, Rees, Foster, Wall, and Wilmot, led well by the able and courteous hon. secretary, Mr. S. J. Kent. Messrs. Robson, Vardy, Mundell, Gardner, and Vale judged.

Mr. Vardy's Classes.

YORKSHIRE C.B.S. OF IRELAND.

Committee meeting was held at Douglas Hotel, Eden Quay, October 7th, Mr. Fry in the chair. Others present: Messrs. Rooney, Sheridan, Dowling, McDonnell, Callaghan, Lynch, Holly, Stewart, Gillen, Birse, Lee, and the hon. sec. Our patronage has been granted to Dundalk, Larne, and Banbridge. The cups were on view to be purchased for competition at our show, November 4th and 5th. The committee decided on three challenge cups, British bird cup, and close-ring cup, the challenge cup to be won three years, not necessarily in succession. The novice cup (which has already been presented) is to be won outright in one year; the British bird cup three years, not necessarily in succession; and the close-ring cup two years, not necessarily in succession.—D. CARRALL, hon. sec.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

Council Meeting.

A meeting of the council of the Union was held at Queensbury Show on October 9th, Mr. R. Halliday (president) in the chair. The complaint from Sandy Lane Show with regard to members of the Union using other than the uniform water tin was thoroughly discussed, and after due consideration it was decided to let the members in question off with a caution, seeing this was the first show where the new rule took effect, and to pay them their prize-money, which had been withheld, pending the council's decision. It would be well for every member of the Union to use the utmost care with regard to this new rule, and see to it that their cages bear the uniform water tin as supplied by Mr. J. Hargreaves, of Eccleshill. The council are determined to enforce the rules, and exhibitors must not treat their decision in this matter as any criterion for the future, for cases that come up after this warning has been administered will be most severely dealt with. I hope this warning will be sufficient, and that our members will see to it that no room is left for further complaints in our Union shows. The correspondence from the C.B.U., dealing with a working agreement between them, the London Federation and this Union, was heartily accepted by the council, and it was decided that from this date forward all disqualifications reported by the C.B.U. to the Yorkshire Union, and vice versa, would be upheld. This decision on the part of the C.B.U. has now brought the three Unions into combination with each other, for the purpose of dealing with all disqualifications, and trying to get some concessions from the railway companies for exhibits and exhibitors travelling to and from shows. I am sure the council wish the effort every success, and are determined to do whatever lies in their power to achieve this purpose. Another letter from the London Federation dealing with the same question was read to the meeting, and this also was accepted. The contract for advertisements on the Union cage labels was given to Mr. Carl, of CAGE BIRDS, the council accepting Mr. Carl's offer for supplying same. A few other important items of business were transacted, one deciding to supply cage-labels free of charge to all societies holding an open show. This brought the meeting to a close, the president thanking the delegates for their attendance.—H. HILL, secretary.

TWITTERINGS—continued.

We have a nice lot of specials to be competed for at our open show on Oct. 23rd, writes Mr. H. Martin, sec. of the Shipley O.S. Shall be glad to send a schedule to anyone overlooked.

The secretaries of the Wallsend and Mid-Tyne C.B.A., are Messrs. Richardson and Greenwell, of 35, The Avenue, Wallsend; the "Guide to the shows" gave Mr. Johnston's name in error.

There is an error in Plymouth schedule, in the Crested Canary Club's specials, the 21s. special being for Crest or Crestbred, and not one for each, as we have it, writes Mr. Thos. Pope, the secretary.

Kindly note that I have removed from Keswick Street to 135, School Street, Gateshead-on-Tyne, writes Mr. G. Buck, secretary of the Gateshead and District C.B.S. Will secretaries please note?

Will secretaries please note that my address is 35, South Woodbine Street, Dewsbury, not 55, as printed in the Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C. handbook, writes Mr. G. G. Stafford, hon. secretary, Dewsbury O.F.S.?

Fanciers who have not yet received schedules, writes Mr. J. W. Papple, hon. secretary of the Hartlepools C.B.S., should apply at once. We have a grand lot of specials, and are looking forward to a good entry.

Will members of the Lancashire C.A., who have not paid their subscriptions, writes Mr. Wm. Adams, the hon. secretary, kindly note that they will not be able to compete for the specials at the shows until they have done so?

The special given by Mr. Adam Melrose, of Galashiels (a trouser length), writes Mr. W. Curry, joint secretary of the Newcastle Show, should have been stated in our schedule as being confined to members for the best young Scotch Fancy Canary.

OBITUARY.

Mr. GEORGE CORKILL (Douglas).

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. W. H. Gill, hon. secretary of the Douglas and Isle of Man C.B.S., I write to inform you of the death of one of our oldest and most respected members, Mr. Geo. Corkill, in his 66th year, after a long and weary illness. He was interred at Braddan Cemetery on October 5th, and several fanciers and friends attended, including members of our Society. He was a member for a number of years, and was an ardent lover of the Linnet as a songster. He was also a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Canary of late years. I am sure all fanciers will join me in conveying our deepest sympathy and condolence to his family.

McPhail Subscription Sale.—Winning numbers:—2,051, 1,988, 1,079, 963, 3,446, 2,068, 1,251, 1,036, 2,591, 3,013, 1,440, 1,262, 599, 1 489, 1,485, 2,447, 766, 2,385, 4,238, 1,531, 2,988, 1,520, 1,067, 2,885, 1,219, 2,331, 4,212, 27, 83, 3,349, 1,303, 1,389, 184, 1, 1,926, 2,070, 3,021, 470, 1,185, 1,061. —(Advt.)

We are holding a concert on October 21st in aid of Trophy Fund, writes Mr. W. Pawley, hon. secretary of the Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S., and we shall be pleased to see any fanciers at same. All wishing to join should do so now to be in time to compete for specials at annual show.

On Wednesday last, October 13th, at St. Peter's-in-the-Forest, Walthamstow, Mr. C. A. House, the well-known judge and writer upon Fancy topics, was married to Miss E. Hanson, formerly of Idle. The good wishes of Mr. House's many friends in the cage-bird Fancy will go out to the happy couple.

We have a silver medal, by N.B.B. and M.C., and a bronze medal by F.B.C. to be competed for by their respective members at our show on October 23rd, write Messrs. Elliott and Wood, joint secretaries of the Burton-on-Trent C.B.S. We have also four extra specials for the foreigners. We are hoping exhibitors will appreciate our efforts and give us a bumper.

The Cage Bird Union: Book of Rules

TO BE ENLARGED AND IMPROVED.

We have pleasure in informing advertisers that we have this year been entrusted with the production and publication of the Cage Bird Union Handbook of Rules, etc. Many new features will be introduced, many pages will be added, all the matter will be brought thoroughly up-to-date, and the whole book will be produced on a more imposing scale than has hitherto been the case.

The Handbook will be distributed throughout the whole of the membership of the Cage Bird Union, and will therefore be in the hands of a vast number of practical fanciers, every one of whom is a possible buyer of "birdy" goods.

We have decided to accept a limited number of advertisements at the following exceptionally low rates:—

Breeders' Cards.	Display Advertisements.
Half inch .. 2/6	1 page .. 30/-

Advertisers should avail themselves of this splendid opportunity of securing a cheap and lasting advertisement. Entries close Oct. 16.

All communications respecting advertisements should be addressed to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London.

The London and Counties O.S., writes Mr. W. Gilbert, the hon. secretary, are to be favoured on October 18th by a lecture on the Crested Canary, by Mr. J. S. Clarke, at the Sessions House Hotel, Clerkenwell Road, E.C. The meeting will commence at 8.30, when fanciers and friends will be welcome.

We omitted to state in our schedule, writes Mr. J. Butterworth, secretary of the Rochdale O.C., that the Foreign Bird Club are giving a cup and bronze medal for best bird shown by a member, also that Mrs. J. Rukin is giving a special. The cage said to be given by Mr. J. E. Davies is an extra special for most points in Yorkshires, should read: "given by Mr. A. G. Davies, 110, Tib Street, Manchester.

Battersea Show has had to extend the date of entries closing to this Saturday, October 16th, writes Mr. Easterling, the secretary. I hope fanciers will rally round and make our show a thorough success, as we offer them a fine classification, a good hall, careful management, and prompt prize-money, with several other advantages. Enter from the review of schedule.

Next Week.

GRAND SPECIAL NUMBER.

Our first special issue of the present show season will contain a very Beautiful Coloured Plate and many additional attractions.

Readers

Should place orders for their Copies at once.

Advertisers

Should send in their announcements to reach us on Tuesday next certain, and specially note the very novel Offer made them on page 226 this week. Seize this tempting opportunity. Remember that Sales in our Special Numbers are always Record ones.

Exhibitors wishing to have their birds out of our show before the close, writes Mr. B. Peake, secretary of the Hanley and Dis. C.B.S., may do so by writing to or seeing the secretary on day before show. We are federated with the Leek and Longton Societies, which guarantee entries at their shows, so that fanciers may get their birds ready without fear of disappointment of return of entries marked cancelled.

Readers will be pleased to learn that Mr. Gore, the Roller Canary importer, of Gooch Street, Birmingham, has just received his first consignment for this season of the famous Leipzig Rollers. They are in magnificent trim, all clean moulted, and full song. Being selected from first round of young they are exceptionally strong and vigorous. Full particulars will be found in Roller Canary advertisement of Mr. Gore.—(Advt.)

I have received very few entries, writes Mr. Maggs, the secretary of Bristol Fanciers' Show. These lines are copied from one of the few entry forms received: "These are more entries than I ever sent to any show before, but each occasion I have shown with you the birds have come back looking so well that I think yours is the show to patronise; also the cards you send out are a step in the right direction, they are worth keeping."

My birdlime should have read in my last advertisement as 2s. per pound, and not 1s. per tin, although I am now able to do half-pound tins at 1s., writes Mr. W. Wallace. (I have moved from Flimby to Pinfold Street, Workington). A friend of mine, I may mention, whilst out catching, had a Hawk swoop down on to his call-bird, and caught it by means of the birdlime twigs.

The subscription sale on behalf of Mrs. McPhail and family has been a success, and I wish to convey the thanks of Mrs. McPhail to you for assisting in gathering together a large number of the Glasgow fanciers, August 28th, to consider the best means of disposing of our late friend's stock, and to all who have contributed towards the success by disposing of the tickets.—J. Brown (Glasgow).

I see in Twitterings of Cage Birds, October 9th, that Mr. Bell, secretary, Carlisle, states there is no other show on October 27th and 28th in the north. I think he must have forgotten there is a place in the north, not many miles from Carlisle, called Harrington, where a show is being held on October 28th and 29th, and are catering well for cage birds, and giving lots of specials, in addition to prize-money. We held a most successful show last year, under C.B.U. rules, and I see Carlisle is not under C.B.U. rules, and we expect to keep Mr. J. Patterson (Chirnside) very busy judging.—W. Irwin, secretary, Harrington Show.

At Blaydon-on-Tyne Open Show, held on November 5th and 6th, all prize-money is guaranteed (whether competition or not) writes Mr. George Hawver, the secretary. A large working committee will give special attention to birds from a distance.

Owing to the new Licensing Act prohibiting boys from being on licensed premises, writes Mr. Geo. Peters, hon. secretary of the Coventry O.S., we are compelled to abandon the "boys' bird drawing competition" in connection with our annual show on November 20th, as the show room is part of the Sydenham Palace Hotel.

Mr. Goodall has resigned his position as secretary of the St. Helens Ornithological Society, and I have been appointed in his stead, writes Mr. R. Gibbic (10, Reservoir Street, Thatto Heath, St. Helens). Mr. A. Sherlock has been appointed show manager. All correspondence must be addressed to me.

I am hoping to make someone have a tough competition in the buff class, writes Mr. F. Armstrong (Halifax). My old Palace champion '09, winner of 23 Y.C.C. and Y.U. first prizes in class for yellows and buffs, is coming on as hot as ever, as well as my heavily variegated buff, son of the winner of three firsts and sixteen seconds, and never beaten in two years. Both were bred by myself. I only desire that we shall have a dozen competitors running neck and neck to the finish; then we shall have some fine sport.

The English and Welsh Border Fancy C.C.'s list of specials includes a handsome cup for most points gained by the three highest birds at each show, and cash specials of 15s., 10s., and 5s. in both champion and novice sections for the Northern Division; and the same for the Southern Division. The international contest, we note, is to take place at the Altrincham Show on December 3rd and 4th, the judges being Messrs. Hadwin and Wellings. The secretary is Mr. S. Hadwin, 28, Pembroke-place, Liverpool.

EXETER AND DEVON.

Twentieth Annual Show, held October 13th. It proved a success. Yorkshires made a nice display, Mrs. Garland and Mr. Keegan putting down some excellent exhibits. Amongst the Norwich were some very typical specimens that will, no doubt, be heard of again. The Canary-Bullfinch Mule of Messrs. Lashbrook and Sons had an easy win in its class, and is a bird of much merit. The selling classes contained several cheap birds. The exhibits were nicely arranged in a circle, the staging being draped with bunting, giving it a nice set-off. Mr. Cornish, the hon. secretary, as usual did his work in a most efficient manner, and he was well supported by a good committee of genuine fanciers. Mr. J. H. Payne made the awards.

BORDER (7): 1, spl, 3, Hoskings, four-pointed yell. leading, grand feather, nice shape and carriage, well balanced markings, 3rd jonque Cinn., nice feather, sound col.; 2, c, Hopgood, cl. buff, grand wings and tail, nice shape and feather; vhc, hc, Dart. NOR., YELL. CL. OR TKD. HEN (4): 1, spl, 2, 3, Evins Bros., good shaped skull, well clothed, with nice, long, wide teather, good entrance, 2nd good shaped skull, nicely feathered, 3rd good pied tail green; vhc, Hobbs. YORKS. CL. YELL. (14): 1, Mrs. Garland, stands well, grand feather, nicely braced wings and neat tail, good back; 2, Thomas, well-drawn out, good position, nice, long flights and tail, not quite ready; 3, Harris, good length and nice quality feather, good position; vhc, German; hc, Fox; c, Marshall. BUFF (11): 1, spl, Mrs. Garland, splendid quality, slim built, neat head, stands well, nice, narrow shoulders, in good form; 2, Thomas, good position, nice flights and tail; 3, Fox (R. and W.), beautiful position, nicely moulded; vhc, Harries; hc, Churchward; c, Miller. UNEVEN MKD. ETC. (14): 1, spl, 3, Keegan, yell., griz. wings and cheek, slim built, beautiful feather, straight as a pencil, nice pipe tail and well packed flights; 3rd, cheek and neck mkd., grand col. and quality, nice position; 2, Fox, neck tkd. yell., well on leg, slim built, good position; vhc, Mrs. Garland; hc, Lashbrook and Son; c, Thomas. HEN (13): 1, Fox, yell., well drawn, stands on a good pair of legs, nice feather, wings well packed; 2, Harries, buff, slim and stylish, nice feather, good flights and tail, full of quality; 3, German, smart yell., nice length and style; vhc, Lashbrook and Son; hc, Miller; c, Osborne. MULE, DARK (6): 1, spl, Lashbrook and Son, Canary-Bullfinch, wonderful size, grand feather and condition, easy win; 2, Badcott, good Linnet-Can., nice feather; 3, Gregory, buff Goldfinch, in good form; vhc, Commins; hc, Endacott. NOV. CLASS (9): 1, spl, 2, vhc, hc, Miss Finch, good Crest, and yell. Belg.; 3, West, shapely buff Nor., nice col. and feather; hc, Butts; c, Harris. A.V. CAN. (exhibited by lady) (10): 1, 2, c, Miss Finch, two really nice Crest-breds; 3, Mrs. Luxton, buff Nor., good shape and col.; vhc, Mrs. Garland; hc, Mrs. West. GOLDFINCH (9): 1, 2, Cockram, good blaze, nice col., well tanned chest, fine bars and buttons; 2nd, nice buttons and wing bars, not yet up in face; 3, Rees, very promising bird; vhc, Longden; hc, Smith; c, Adams. BULLFINCH (7): 1, spl, Russel, grand cap, well defined bars, nice back and good breast col., well shown; 2, Southcombe Bros., nice glossy cap, good back and bars; 3, Bond and Davey, another good one; vhc, Teed. LARGE (6): 1, Bond and Davey, good feathered Hawfinch, well mkd.; 2, Rees, well spotted and good coloured Song Thrush; 3, Pickard, very nice Missel Thrush; vhc, Bonns. SMALL (13): 1, Jones, Whinchat, beautifully feathered and well mkd., put down in grand form; 2, vhc, Lean and Son, Wheatear, splendidly mkd., good col. and feather; 3, Russel, Siskin, gem for size, col. and markings, in fine order; vhc, Commins; hc, Tremlett; c, Rees. FOR. (9): 1, c, Slowman, Paradise Whydah, good col. and feather; 2, Bousfield, nice Grassfinch, splendid feather; 3, Mrs. Hurdle, Troupial, grand col.; vhc, Mrs. Barse Bayley; hc, Mrs. Southcombe. SELL (21/-) (8): 1, Evins Bros.; 2, Webber; 3, Redwood; vhc, West; hc, c, Roberts. (10/6) (8): 1, Adams; 2, Webber; 3, Jones; vhc, Mitchell; hc, no name; c, Stone.

CATERHAM.

Held October 13th and 14th, and proved a success, considering that the fixture clashed with another not far away. There were 164 exhibits, all of which were very nicely staged. Some really grand birds put in an appearance, and many of them will be heard of again. The Norwich Plainheads especially were a hot lot. The hall in which the exhibits were staged was an excellent one in every way, possessing among other advantages splendid light. The management of the show was in the very capable hands of Mr. A. J. Kilby, the popular hon. sec., who is to be congratulated on this score, and he was ably supported by a capital committee. Mr. J. Rohson judged.

NOR. BUFF (9): 1, spl, Spinner, stands right away, splendid meal and type; 2, Kilby, good one, not quite ready; 3, Hodder, head and wing mkd., fine bouncing bird; vhc, Gunnell; hc, c, Kilby, he will improve. YELL. (9): 1, 2, 3, vhc, Kilby, grand team, very keen competition, very hot fed; hc, Silk; c, Hodder. BUFF UNFLIG. (11): 1, Hodder, gem head and wing mkd., splendid quality and type; 2, 3, c, Kilby, another good team, 2nd head mkd., loses a bit in size; 3rd, cl.; vhc, Cosen and Crisp, nice bird; hc, Taylor. YELL. (8): 1, spl, Kilby, all over a winner, very neat; 2, Hodder, beaten only in head properties; 3, Jeffrey, not quite ready, should be heard of later; vhc, Silk, grizzle back of head and cheek; hc, Spinner; c, Taylor. NOR. HENS (10): 1, spl, Hodder, beauty, mealy buff, stands right out all round; 2, 3, vhc, Kilby, 2nd nice buff; 3rd, cinn. green, grand stock bird; vhc, very nice buff, hardly ready; hc, Jupe; c, Kilby. YORKS. YELL. (13): 1, Harris, grand length and side, will do with another fortnight; 2, Wheeler, sweetly drawn, not quite ready; 3, vhc, same stable, all want a bit longer time; hc, Taylor, griz. cheek; c, Green. BUFF (14): 1, Taylor, grand cl., full of quality, straight as a dye, plenty of swagger; 2, vhc, hc, Wheeler, another good team; 2nd, griz., wing mkd.; 3, Harris, full of quality, not ready, fine moulded, will stand higher later; c, Jupe. YORKS. HEN: 1, 3, Taylor, 1st varieg. yell., good win; 3rd, another yell., not quite fit; 2, Tillett, grand buff, very stylish; vhc, Harris; hc, Wheeler; c, Green. CREST AND C.B. (8): 1, Mrs. Haysom, Crested cock, cl. body, wing, and dark crest; 2, Fellows, big bouncing C.B. cock, heavy varieg., splendid leafy feather; 3, Mrs. Haysom, another Crested hen, good crest, fails in body substance; vhc, Hall, Crested Green cock; hc, Mrs. Haysom, wonderful feather, Crest-bred; c, Cox, Crested ck. BORD. FCY. (7): 1, Weaver, cl. yell. cock, easy winner, nice model; 2, J. Gorringe, buff, not the style of winner; 3, Weaver, cl. yell., too slim, otherwise sweet exhibit; vhc, Hooper, buff too leggy; hc, c, Gorringe. A.O.V. (5): 1, 3, F. J. Green, Lancs. coppy and Lancs. Plainhead; 2, Cosier and Crisp, very neat, Gold Liz.; vhc, Green, broken cap, Gold Lizard; hc, Kilby, cinn. Green Norwich. MULES A.V. (7): 1, Gunnell, Goldfinch Mule, even mkd. yell., not quite ready, but a stormer; 3rd, lightly varieg. buff Goldfinch Mule; 2, Cook, graud even mkd. buff Goldfinch Mule, very taking; vhc, hc, Miss J. Reeves, vhc Greenfinch-Can., col. broken; hc, Linnet-Can., a little gem in hot company; c, Terry, Goldfinch-Can. GOLDFINCH OR BULLFINCH (9): 1, Gill, Goldfinch, good expanse of blaze, very neat; 2, Bacon, Bullfinch, well deserves place, well shown; 3, vhc, Fellows, Goldfinches, not quite ready; hc, Coomber, Bullfinch; c, Gunnell, Goldfinch. A.O.S. BRIT. (9): 1, J. Bailey and Son, Cornish Chough; 2, Bacon, real gem of a Chaffinch, in splendid bloom; 3, Cook, Redpoll, also in grand fettle; vhc, Gunnell, beautiful Yellow Bunting, hard lines here; hc, Botting, Reed Bunting; c, Gorringe, Greenfinch, outclassed here. FOR.: 1, spl, Kilby, Paradise Whydah, very taking exhibit, nicely staged; 2, Mrs. Aldred, Cockatoo, would persist in holding a conversation with our reporter, could do with bath; 3, vhc, hc, Botting, Canadian Weaver; vhc, Combassou; hc, Orange Bishop; c, Miss Hopwood, pair White Javas. SELL. (20/-) (18): Strong class, one or two very cheap birds; 1, Kilby; 2, Green; 3, Hooper; vhc, Cox; hc, Kilby; c, Weaver. LOCAL NOR. (7): 1, 2, 3, vhc, hc, F. Botell, 1st cl yell., could win in better company; 2nd, varieg. buff, splendid stock bird; 3rd, another good yell; c, French, cl. yell. A.O.V.: 1, Harris, yell. Yorks., not quite ready, fit to win in better company; 2, Tillett, another yell. Yorks., lightly varieg.; 3, Gorringe, varieg. buff Border; vhc, Harris; hc, Tillett.

Yorkshire Union Records Broken.

"City of Bradford Show entries 655—a Yorkshire Union record." This telegram reaches us as we are on the point of going to press, and evidently the visitors to the show have a great treat in store. The show officials are to be congratulated upon their good fortune.

A Correction.

Owing to a slip of the pen, our artist, Mr. Norman, had down Mr. Dixon's Border Fancy on our frontispiece last week as the winner of first prizes at Cardiff Show, instead of Carlisle Show. The firsts at Cardiff in Borders went to Messrs. Hammacott and Card, of Swansea.

Two Rare Mules Produced.

When on my journey last week, writes 'Observer," I learned that a "non-such" had been bred in Cumberland. I took a trip up to Wigton, and called on the breeder of this bird, Mr. John Dixon, well-known in Muling and Border Fancy circles. I was invited into the bird-room, and found a proper "Hornet's nest" in Mules. The bird I have referred to is a splendid fellow, a grand colour—a perfectly clear, yellow cock! I got an eye opener, and no mistake. I have never seen its equal. I asked Mr. Dixon if he had a name for him, and he replied, "Yes, I am calling him 'Cumberland Perfection."

Our representative at Dulwich Show writes: There was one bird which stood out from all the others in point of rarity and interest—a clear buff Greenfinch Mule, an undoubtedly genuine specimen, of fine size and exceptional colour. It was staged with what looked like a nest brother, another Mule with only a few grizzled markings here and there on its plumage. Both are this year's youngsters, and were shown by a Mr. Archer, of Plaistow, who is, I was given to understand, quite a novice at Mule breeding. Lucky man!

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

For Rules see last week's "Cage Birds."

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Park and Lake Aviculture—Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. M.B.O.U., &c. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Food and Breeding Cage.

H. Steadman.—The cause was the hen's refusal to feed with the new food offered so abruptly. All changes of this kind should be made gradually when birds are rearing young, as they have their likes and dislikes, and are always apt to resent sudden changes I cannot understand the strange behaviour of the young bird unless it is a precocious hen making love to one of the others. The difference in colour is that one—the whitish specimen—is a buff, and the other a yellow. It is rather early yet for birds to commence singing after moulting, but if these are really cocks, they should be coming in song soon. To help, give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, maw, yellow, mustard, gold of pleasure, and sesame seeds two or three times a week. There is no special type of cage for breeding Yorkshires in. The Norwich breeding cage you saw illustrated will do. They might be made a couple of inches higher, but it is not essential. Perhaps "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages," 2/3 post free from our Manager, would help you, and a copy of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, 7d. post free, would certainly help you to choose a Society. Don't hesitate to write when in difficulties. See also reply by the Editor.

Hen Pants and Puffs.

A. Lee.—I suspect the hen is either older than you say, or that it has not been very well managed; a hen four years old should not be worn out. Had you said how you fed the bird it would have helped me. Keep her in a comfortable place, quite free from draughts and extremes of temperature, and see the cage is free from red mites. Put her on a diet of plain Canary, only as a staple, and give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and a liberal supply of green food daily for the next month. Give also on the days when you are not giving rape for the next fortnight a small piece of bread sopped in milk, pressed nearly dry, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it, and sprinkled with a pinch of gold of pleasure seed. Keep cage supplied with clean gritty sand, and the greenstuff may be occasionally varied with sweet fruit or a bit of boiled carrot. In the drinking water give six drops each dandelion juice and syrup of rhubarb, and a pinch of Epsom salts, every second day for a week, and in the following week six drops tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel, every second day. At the end of the fortnight, if the hen is fairly active, place her in a flight, where she can get plenty of exercise, and after omitting the medicines for one week, begin again and repeat the two weeks' treatment in the same order.

Going Queer, etc.

A. G. P.—(1) You do not give enough particulars. I think it not unlikely your birds may have a type of septic fever which may become serious at any moment. I would, therefore, advise you to have a post mortem on the next that dies. Read reply to "E. D. G.," and do not introduce any fresh stock until you are quite sure you have not this disease among the birds. Keep cages and perches scrupulously clean, and burn all debris removed from same immediately. See the food and water are above suspicion, as regards purity, and see, too, the cages are not infested with red mite, or exposed to draughts. Feed on a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as a staple, and twice a week give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of two parts hemp to one part each of inga, millet, gold of pleasure, maw, and linseed. Every second day for a fortnight give a small piece of bread and milk, sprinkled with soft sugar. Give a little green food or sweet fruit daily. Give no egg food at all whilst on this diet, and you should not find any more "going queer." (2) Put these birds on the dietary mentioned in No. 1 at once, and in the drinking water give six drops each of dandelion juice and syrup of rhubarb, and a pinch of Epsom salts, every second day for a week, and on the alternate days six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid. The last-named may be continued on alternate days for a fortnight if necessary. The sample of rape sent is very good, but seems rather new, and should improve by a few months' proper storage. The canary is sweet, but only a very second rate quality.

Fever Points.

E. D. G.—(1) Yes, it is possible for "bird fever" to break out without any infected bird having been introduced. It may be introduced by many means, or it may break out spontaneously; in the latter case the cause is generally to be found in a tainted food or water supply. Overcrowding will always increase the risks, and particularly where egg food is used liberally, or allowed to become the least bit stale; indeed, the egg food is clearly the great cultivating ground of the bacilli which cause the disease. I think it is probable also that eggs laid by unhealthy stock may be much more likely to set up the disease than really good and untainted eggs. It is just probable the Thrush was an escape or a "release" from captivity, and was suffering from the complaint, and thus introduced it. (2) You do not say whether the four birds were seized with the illness and have recovered, or whether they escaped without being attacked. In the latter case, they have evidently good resisting powers, and provided you have efficiently disinfected everything, and the birds, they should be quite safe. If they were seized with the disease and recovered, however, although they are probably quite safe from the attack now, I should advise you to keep them strictly isolated and under hygienic conditions until next spring at least before introducing any other birds. During this period also cut off all egg food from their dietary. (3) This query is rather vague about "sulphuring" the room, and these four birds remaining in it. If you mean to fumigate the room with sulphur, and leave the birds in during the process, you will most assuredly kill them if the fumigation is properly carried out. Personally I have extremely little faith in the utility of it. After a room is properly fumigated it would be quite safe to return birds to it after it had been thrown open and well aired for twenty-four hours. You would do well to get Dr. Clarke's handbook on "Septic Fever," 7d. post free, from our manager.

Ailing Yorkshire.

Novice J.W.W.—Is the bird old or young? If you bought it as a singing bird and it did not sing at all after you received it, you should have courteously informed the vendor and asked for an explanation, and if the vendor was as you say, you would have been fairly met in the matter. Now, however, you have kept the bird too long, and it is not unlikely your feeding and management may be the cause. Its loss of song may be simply due to moulting, although you make no mention of this, which, again, seems to suggest that the trouble may be connected with difficulty in breaking into moult. Give the following a trial for a few weeks. See first that the cage is quite free from red mites. Keep it in a fairly warm place, but where the warmth is regular and equable night and day, quite free from draughts, away from the fumes of burning lamps or gas during the evening, and where the atmosphere is pure and fresh. Give plain Canary as a staple diet, and every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape seed, and on the alternate days about the same amount of bread sopped in milk, pressed nearly dry, and sprinkled with a little soft sugar and maw seed. Every day give a little green food and allow the bird to bathe daily provided it is not badly affected after bathing. Continue this diet for a month. In the drinking water give six drops syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and during the following week give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. See the cage is kept strewn with clean gritty sand.

Inflammation of Bowels.

R.M.—Had you described how the bird was affected, and said how and where kept, and how fed, I should have been in a better position to help. From the fact that the bird has been ill a month, it is pretty safe to conclude the trouble is not what you suspect. Try following treatment for a fortnight, and if bird is not much better, then write again. First see that the bird is not exposed to draughts or extreme fluctuations of heat, and that the cage is not infested with red mites. Feed on a staple of plain Canary only, and give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days a small piece of bread and milk, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped upon it and sprinkled with a little soft sugar. Remove at night all that is not eaten. Three times a week give a half-ripe plantain stalk, or a seed head of shepherd's purse, or a scrap of banana. Keep cage nicely strewn with clean gritty sand, and the perches quite clean. In the drinking water give six drops syrup of rhubarb and a small pinch of Epsom salts every second day for the first week, and on the alternate days four drops each of tincture of gentian and aromatic sulphuric acid. During the second week give twenty drops Chemical Food and six of malt extract every second day. Concerning the effect of the medicine, etc., you enquire about, let me advise you not to dabble in all these things simply for the sake of giving something. Leave medicines severely alone, save when really necessary. The first and last named are aperient; the second has a good stimulating effect; the third is a useful diuretic; and the others are good generally useful tonics. There is no such book as you mention, but "bide a wee."

Brevities.

Various (T.N.Z.).—Sorry, but I do not remember if you mentioned what variety your hen is. If you want to breed pure bred, you must have a cock bird of the same variety as the hen. If not particular about pure breds, especially as you are just beginning, you had better get a 1909 Roller, Border Fancy, or Norwich, as these are all very hardy. About February next would be a good time to buy. To hear the bird in good vigorous song will be your best means of knowing if it is a cock; otherwise buy from a dealer with a reputation, and trust to his judgment, in addition to which you might deposit cash with our Editor until you had heard the bird sing. Get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," or the "Canary Manual"; see advert. I would not advise you to wash the sand from the cages to use over again; it is surely cheap enough.

Dieteties (A Keen Beginner).—To cater for the inmates fill one section of the self-feeding hopper with good Canary, another with summer rape, and the third with a mixture of one part each hemp and black rape, and a half part each teazle, thistle, gold of pleasure, wild mustard, and linseed. Any other wild seeds, green foods, crushed biscuit, etc., throw in as needed. Let them have free access to a large shallow bath at all times, but see it is emptied and cleaned daily, and also keep a separate water supply for drinking purposes, which should be renewed and the vessels cleaned at least every day. Unless the floor is covered with gritty sand, a supply of this should be kept in a shallow box in a corner. The Mule caged alone may be fed on a staple of two parts Canary, one part summer rape, and a half part teazle, and a pinch of a mixture of equal parts black rape, gold of pleasure, maw, hemp, and linseed, given separately twice a week, with a scrap of green food daily, or sweet fruit when greenstuff is out of season, and a little crushed biscuit once or twice a week.

Heat and Air (G.B.).—If the temperature is not extremely variable, the present average of sixty degrees is very suitable. You should, however, aim at keeping it steadily within a range of five or six degrees, say, between fifty-seven and sixty-two or three. After the moult a temperature of from 45 to 50 is quite sufficient, even where artificial heat is used. But I am afraid your room, being small, and having glass roof and sides, must be very variable, particularly if the sun shines upon it in any part of the day, and in that case you need to be very careful, and may find it necessary to either cover the glass section with some non-conducting material, or provide them with shutters or blinds. Your method of ventilation seems unsatisfactory. Cannot you continue to make a sash that would open on hinges in the side and another in the glass roof? At least, you should have two openings 18 inches by 12 for the ingress of pure air and the exit of foul air, the latter preferably near or in the roof, and arranged so that there will be no direct current of air through the cage.

Historical ("Dispute").—Who was responsible for the introduction of the Canary into this country is, unfortunately, lost in antiquity, so we are deprived of the satisfaction of raising a monument of brass to his memory. Probably it was some ordinary Jack Tar of the sixteenth century. The earliest authentic record of them I know of is in the writings of Francis Willughby, written about the beginning of the seventeenth century, but not published until 1667, long after Willughby's death. He writes of them as being brought to England from the Canary Islands in his day as singing birds—the name of "Canary-birds" being given them from the place whence they were brought. From this we may reasonably infer that the Canary, although probably something of a rarity in those days, was not unknown as a cage bird in this country as early as the year 1600.

Improving and Feeding Crests (E.H.W.L.W.)—Your suggestion is correct, but I am sorry I cannot confirm your hopes. As a matter of fact, you are expecting a little too much. If you produce a few show birds the second or third season after crossing, you will do as well as can be reasonably expected. You could save a year by using a first cross Lancashire once, if you can procure one which you know is bred to suit your purpose. Otherwise, get a yellow Lancashire Plainhead cock bird and mate with a good stout-bodied, well-bred Crest hen, green or variegated buff for choice. Do not look for show birds among the progeny, but the following season pair the cross-bred cocks back to good Crest hens, including one to the original hen, when the effects will begin to show in the future progeny. The cross-bred hens may also be bred back to Crests, but when breeding in a small way I should prefer to limit the alien blood to the male side. The feeding depends upon what your special mixture consists of, whether your dietary is good or bad. About three weeks ago a fully detailed dietary for Crests was given.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Two Points.

P. Doonan.—I have never personally known of a case where a cock Bullfinch has bred with a hen Canary; the reverse mating is usually adopted. There would be no harm in experimenting with the cock Bullie, of course. We shall be able to supply you with the book you desire in the near future. A 1909 Goldfinch would be very likely to breed Mules next spring, if a kind, steady bird. White-legged Goldfinches are generally the most reliable mulers, but black-legged birds will often breed freely; it is largely a matter of disposition. Some Goldfinches are far better tempered than others; that is, they take to captivity like a duck takes to water. A wild, unsteady Finch is not often a success in a breeding cage.

A Trio.

E.E.—1. The dried seed-pods sent are those of one of the campanulas (known as bell flowers). I have never given them to birds, so can't say anything about the usefulness or otherwise of the seed as a food. Stick to the old, tried wild seeds, and you can't go wrong. 2. My own Mule-breeding cages are of the two-compartment pattern, some being 36 inches long and some 40 inches long. The former is a really fine all-round size. Width, 9 inches, length 16 inches. My Hybrid cages are 16 inches wide and 20 high. 3. Any cross between a Bunting and a Canary would be extremely rare; I doubt whether such has ever been produced. All the known Finch-Canary Mules are common enough (light examples being the only scarce ones), but either Hawfinch, Bramblefinch, or Chaffinch-Canary Mules would create a sensation—especially the former.

Breeding Items.

Goldfinch.—If the Goldfinch has bred Mules previously, there is no need whatever to run him with the hen Canary throughout the winter. Most of my own muling Finches never see their wives until the latter are showing signs of anxiety to get along with the nest-building. If you have a two-compartment breeding cage, you can keep the Goldie in one half, the hen in the other, with the wired division down the centre, thus enabling the couple to get on terms of friendship, and yet being able to feed them differently. A good winter stock seed mixture for Goldfinches is teazle and hemp three parts each, Canary two parts, linseed one part, and just a slight sprinkling of charlock and summer rape. For Linnets: Canary and teazle two parts each, charlock, summer rape, and linseed one part each. Keeping Finches in a warm room is not exactly good for them, but certainly will not prevent them breeding. Both Goldies and Linnets can be bred with the season after they are hatched.

A Thrush Puzzle.

R. I. E.—Your communication is very puzzling. You don't state how you are feeding the bird, and this information should always be given. It may merely have a touch of "indigestion," in which case a dose or two of saline medicine should put matters right, or it may really have a cold. Have you had the Thrush in a draught? Or do you have him indoors in a more or less warm room and now and again hang outdoors? But I should not think that "indigestion" would cause him to pull out his breast feathers; or a cold, either. Are you, however, sure that he "pulls" them out? It is the moulting season; may not their presence in the cage be due to this? Has it moulted yet? It may be that the bird is troubled with bird lice or red mite. Can you trace any about bird or cage? If you can give me something more definite to go upon I shall be glad to try to help. A first-rate cough mixture was given in the reply to "E. C." last week.

A Heavy List.

Grateful.—To go into the feeding and management of nine different birds is too much for the space allowed these queries. You should certainly get a book dealing with British bird keeping, such as Mr. Norman's (published by CAGE BIRDS at 1s. 1d. post free). The Yellow Bunting eats practically only canary seed; a little crushed Finch mixture will sometimes be picked over, likewise wild seeds. Bramblefinch, canary and teazle three parts each, hemp and sunflower one part each, linseed, charlock, and summer rape half-part each. Greenfinch the same. Chaffinch the same, but with the hemp left out. The Linnet and Goldfinch are dealt with in the reply given "Goldfinch." The Redpoll should be treated exactly the same as the Linnet. A "lit-bit" for them all is given in the reply to "Novice, A. W."; while for suitable greenfoods see the answers given "Briton." Weavers and Bishops are Foreign birds, so not in my department; Mr. Page looks after their interests.

Cheaply Feeding Skylarks.

Confusion.—I can quite see that you find the recipe mentioned too expensive. It certainly contains a surprising number of eggs, and to anyone like yourself, with a dozen Larks, that is not an item to be ignored. I look upon such recipes, personally, as merely "fad" foods. You can provide a really good and cheap staple diet in the following manner: Get a supply of Lark or Thrush food such as is advertised in our columns (good brands can be bought at most bird and seed stores); also a bag of dog or puppy meal (such as Melox or Spratt's). For the daily feed, take the required quantity of the latter and add sufficient hot water to thoroughly soften it (mash it with a fork); then reduce it to a crumbly consistency by adding the necessary quantity of the Lark or Thrush food, when it is ready to give to the birds. This method is both easy, cheap, and satisfactory. The quantity to mix up you will soon be able to gauge; it is deceptive stuff, dogmeal, so don't take too much at first. A little chopped green food should be frequently added, and some minced hard-boiled egg now and again helps to keep the bird in high, singing condition. Live-food give, of course, as obtainable. Do not give the food in too sloppy a state; birds do not relish it in that condition.

Tit-bits for Seed-eaters.

Novice, A. W.—I think that the claim made for wild seed mixtures as a "conditioner" of Finches is quite justified. I am sure I get good results from using such a mixture in my own stock. I am bound to admit, though, as you ask the question direct, that I think of little value some of the wild seed mixtures which I have seen. They contain nothing but a variety of those seeds termed "bird rapes," and a more or less liberal percentage of waste. My own method of preparing a "tit-bit" mixture is to get a good wild seed mixture. Then I get made up the following: Thistle, dandelion, lettuce, plantain, gold of pleasure, and sesame, half a pound each, cornflower and wild mustard, a quarter-pound of each. This makes a good quantity, and is somewhat expensive (thistle, dandelion, and cornflower being dear), but there is no waste, and, of course, the quantities of each seed can be reduced. The cost is greatly reduced, however, by the addition of the aforesaid wild seed mixture, two parts of this to one of the other. It is greatly relished by the majority of seed-eaters, and grand stuff for getting them into stout song. I sometimes add inga and maw to it.

Feeding a Bullfinch.

Briton.—I. I dealt fully with this question a week or so ago. There is no necessity to "cover up" a Bullfinch to moult him out for show. At the same time, I believe in keeping them out of the direct (strong) rays of light. If you decide to give a little sweet pepper, it can be given amongst the seed (note the many replies on colour-feeding recently given) if the bird won't eat soft food, or the prepared soft food be mixed with the seed. If natural colouring agents be used, Bullies should have a free daily supply of all the fruits and berries with colour in them, especially blackberries (in both red and black stages) and privet blackberries; in addition to these you have straw, rasp, elder, mountain ash (rowan), dew and other berries, black currants, and cherries, etc., according to season, to say nothing of the wild seeding plants, such as ripe plantain, dock, thistles, heather tops (where possible), shepherd's purse, chickweed, mouse-ear, groundsel tops, etc. Let your bird bathe freely. A bird which is not a free bather never comes out so polished as one that revels in cold water. If your Bullie is lax in this respect, he must be lightly sprayed every day with a fine sprayer (such as barbers use for bay rhum, etc.), which may be bought from most fanciers' specialists advertising in our columns. Never drench the bird. The stock seed mixture should be canary three parts, teazle two parts, linseed, summer rape and charlock, one part each, by measure. Sunflower and safflower seeds should be offered fairly liberally, cracked, if necessary. Don't give hemp. 2. I should think a Chaffinch and Greenfinch would be safe with Budgerigars in your aviary. This, however, is really a question for Mr. Page (see rules).

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Brevities.

Scab on a Bullfinch (C. Horlebog).—You must dress the place twice daily with Calvert's carbolic ointment; anoint it gently with the tip of a finger. For three or four days give two tablespoonfuls of drinking water with a very small teaspoonful of fluid magnesia stirred into it—fresh daily, of course.

A Lark Matter (C. O. X.).—The recipe you give seems to me as good as others of its kind. It is full early yet for the Larks to be singing, especially seeing they have been caught only three weeks (I presume they are cocks). I guess you will have to wait a little longer. You might give them a little live food now and again—such things as gentles, mealworms, blackbeetles, and the like.

Yellow Wagtails (Perplexed).—Young cock Yellow Wagtails moult in the autumn, but then pass, of course, into winter plumage, in which they are difficult to distinguish from the hens, especially by the inexperienced. In the spring they come into full colour (the bright yellow nuptial plumage). Young cocks, however, can generally be "spotted" by their more masculine build and demeanour, while they are generally a little clearer in colour than the hens, especially in the wash of yellow on the underparts.

Three Kinds of Goldfinches (Greypate).—The term "peartree" Goldfinch intends to convey that the bird has been bred in an orchard or garden (in a pear tree, to be precise). Whether it is a ridiculous term or not, I must leave you to think out for yourself. A "cheveral" is a bird with its under-blaze divided down the centre by a white line, more or less broad. Was the other term "pea-throat"?—a bird with a white spot in its under-blaze. I expect your own bird is just a plain, everyday kind of Goldfinch; in other words, a bird fit for a king. No such plate as you mention has been published by anyone.

Seeds and a Hedge Sparrow (Thistle Heads).—A machine for separating thistle seeds from the heads was illustrated in CAGE BIRDS a few weeks ago. I used to pull open the heads, knock out the seed into a sieve, which allowed it to fall through, and blow away any down, etc., which also got through. When my fingers got too sore, I cut open the heads with strong scissors. The seed has to be got out of all the weeds you name. A cute dodge is to let the thistle seed fall into water, when it sinks, while the refuse floats. It is then drained and dried; in the sun, preferably. A Hedge Sparrow needs a good Insectivorous food as the staple, with some live food (mealworms, etc.) frequently, and a few seeds and berries now and again.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

A Sick Parrakeet.

J.S.—I have not a copy of my previous reply to hand. On receipt of this give the bird, for one day, one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water, and after an interval of three days repeat the dose. During the three intervening days give the following mixture: Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine in equal parts. For use, take one part of the mixture to two parts of water; let this form the only drinking water. Remove the water from the cage, and offer this at intervals during the day. Also bathe the nostrils with diluted glyco-thymoline twice daily while the trouble lasts. The diet is not sufficiently varied. Apple is good; try it with a few nuts (shelled walnuts are best), plain biscuit just moistened in water, and the following seed mixture: Hemp, oats, Canary and sunflower seeds in equal parts. Keep the bird warm and out of draught. Unless the bird has practically recovered, you had better report progress in a week or ten days.

About Paradise Whydahs.

Mrs. Lawrence.—Insect food is not necessary for these birds, but when such are plentiful during the summer (such as beetles, smooth caterpillars, spiders, and green-fly), they certainly help to keep the birds fit and robust, and, I am persuaded, improve the lustre of their plumage. Your diet is satisfactory, providing you are giving greenfood, grass in flower (seeding grass), and lettuce. Very few Whydahs have bred in this country, though, if given suitable quarters, there is no reason why they should not, but it would have to be, I fear, an aviary with growing plants and bushes—bamboos, willows and the like—to give any probability of success. In a Devonshire aviary the Giant Whydah has been bred this year for the first time in this country. The time would probably be July and August. If you make the attempt, let the open flight of your aviary be a wilderness of plants, weeds and bushes. Willow cuttings would be very suitable to plant; these readily take root and grow rapidly. They should be planted in clumps fairly thick, say, quite 12 inches apart. Prepare your aviary quite early in the spring.

About a Green Amazon.

H. Peddie.—As well as giving boiled maize, keep a tin of the following seed mixture in the cage: Canary, millet, oats, hemp, small maize, and sunflower seeds in equal parts. Twice a week, at equal intervals, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water—four applications should be sufficient. Also put ten to twenty drops of Parrish's Chemical Food over the boiled maize daily, till the bird is in condition again. A piece of plain biscuit can also be given occasionally slightly moistened with water. It is not well to keep the bird close to the fire, as this makes the temperature too variable for it; choose some light, airy position, which is free from draught, and there should soon be an improvement. I note your remarks re Grey Parrot; if this bird died from anything contagious, and you have not sterilised the cage, it is quite possible your Amazon has contracted the same disease. If the bird gets worse, you had better write again, fully describing all symptoms. Do not give slops or messes of any kind. Hope there will soon be some improvement.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free, a mine of information of use and interest.

Greenhouse as Aviary.

Grateful.—Your greenhouse will answer well if you cover the roof with felt, outside the glass, leaving the ventilator only exposed. I have carefully noted your remarks, and you will have ample light after this is done. I should advise you to take down the staging, and to have two flights the whole length of the house, with a walk or gangway down the centre. The ground should form the base of flights. Only light wood framework would be necessary, over which must be stretched half-inch mesh wire-netting; the netting must also be stretched in front of all glass (on the inside), not protected with felt on the outside. By the above you would secure one flight for Waxbills and another for Mannikins, Finches, etc. Or you could have three flights, each two feet wide, one right across the end and the other two running along each side to meet the end one. You could also have some growing bushes (evergreen) either planted in the ground or in tubs, which would much enhance the appearance. Insects are not necessary for the birds you name, but they are the better for blighty foliage to pick over when it is available. Diet: Canary, millet and spray millet would form the staple seed mixture, but oats, paddy rice, and a little hemp (the latter in winter) should be given in smaller quantities, green food and a little of such ripe fruit as the birds fancy. If you care to send me a stamped addressed envelope through the Editor, I will with pleasure send you rough sketches indicating the divisions. The birds would require soft food when feeding young. You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners" very helpful.

Brevities.

Obstruction in Throat (F. Goodacre).—It is an exceptional case. During the years I have answered the Foreign Bird Queries in this journal, a similar query has never reached me. If the obstruction is visible, then with a pair of small tweezers or something similar, lay hold of it and gently draw it out. If the obstruction is so low down as not to be visible, I fear nothing can be done, and the probability is the bird would soon choke. I have had quite small birds which were very fond of grapes; they partially empty the skin, then swallow the remainder whole. If the bird still lives, I should in future supply the grapes cut up, say, each one into four pieces; you are not then likely to meet with a similar mishap.

The British Bird Manual.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London E.C.

Parrakeet Dying (J. Spall).—Much regret reply arrived too late. I should say there was acute internal inflammation and that nothing could have saved it. Fruit alone was hardly sufficient for it. In such a case I should have tried boiled maize well flavoured with orange juice. Of course, as well as this it could have had liberal supplies of ripe fruit. Sterilise (see other replies) the cage before using it for another bird.

Blackheaded Nuns ("Nimny").—For one day make drinking water just saline with Epsom salts, or, preferably, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of drinking water, repeat dose after an interval of three days; use a crock drinker. Give a mixture of two parts each Canary and white millet, and one part paddy rice (rice in the husk). A little greenfood should also be offered; try it with a little fresh and tender lettuce. It is possible your birds, especially if recent purchases, have bird fever, which has been very prevalent this year. If the bird does not recover, send it for post-mortem, and if the trouble is fever, your cage should first have carbolic acid solution well brushed over it inside and out, well searching all crevices, then well swilled with boiling water, finally with cold, and, when dry, be re-distempered before using for other birds.

Cockatiels Not Rearing Young (Torquay).—Some pairs make unnatural parents, and if the birds were mine, and they repeated the operation, I should get rid of them and procure another pair; or you may by observation find that only one of them is the culprit. Again, such cases are by no means uncommon with young birds with their first broods, but afterwards they make good parents. Another possible cause is mice. You could easily keep a "well trap" in the aviary without danger to the birds, which would get rid of a good many of these pests. I should advise you to procure a nest box with concave bottom; such can be procured at about 1s. 6d. each from those advertising husks in our columns. I should advise the removal of all nesting receptacles from the aviary (unless you have other species of birds to provide for), and not replace them till next spring, when very probably there will be no recurrence of the trouble.

Treating a Young Amazon (W. W. Walker).—It is probable your bird is about two years old. There is no age limit for talking, but most Amazons talk more or less, though there is much variableness with individuals as to teachableness. There are two methods of training, one by constant repetition of some short phrase till it is learned, then taking on another, and so on; the other, keeping the bird where it will hear plenty of conversation, some of which it will ultimately pick up. In each case petting and kindness will help towards final success. If the bird is not yet quite tame, it should not be kept where constant passing will repeatedly scare it. When the bird is quiet and restful is the time to talk to it, also whenever you give it any tit-bit, or scratch its poll, talk to it the while. I have quite a talented Hawkhead Parrot, which has picked quite a large vocabulary this way, and has not profited at all by the constant repetition method. Try both methods.

Feeding (B.A.C.).—(1) The Ruddy Cowbird should have soft food, ripe fruit, green food, some live insects, mealworms, if no others are available, and access to the seeds given below, also sunflower seed; (2 and 3) The Paradise Whydah and Orange Bishop should have a mixture of two parts each Canary and white Millet, and one part each oats and paddy rice, also green food and a few live insects, such as beetles, smooth caterpillars, spiders, and blighty foliage; a little fruit is also very wholesome, and most species will take it readily; (4) The Long-tailed Grass Finch will thrive on Canary, white and spray millet, and a few oats, with spray millet as a change with green food, etc., as above; (5) The Crimson-breasted Waxbill requires Canary and white millet in equal parts, with a liberal supply of spray millet, also green food, grit, etc. The best green foods for Foreign Finches are fresh and tender lettuce and flowering grass, blighty foliage when procurable is a great help in keeping them contented and fit.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (J. Yeoman).—Septicæmia, or bird fever. If you have other birds they must be run into perfectly clean cages, and everything thoroughly disinfected with burning sulphur.

Canary (M.L.R.).—This bird also died of septicæmia, or bird fever, with which it was doubtless affected when you brought it a week or ten days ago, and when it could not eat its seed. It was a bird of this year, and I opine a hen. Its cage should be burnt or boiled.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

Illustrated Ideas (H. Attwood).—We have already dealt at length with ideas for catching seed husks, etc., and preventing them littering the floor.

Rats (Scotch Fancier).—We have taken steps to bring this matter before the committee of the show in question. We did not publish your letter as we felt there would be a suspicion of unfairness about it appearing just as entries were due to close.

The Ideal Norwich Plainhead (W. Watson).—We will endeavour to reproduce your sketch in our next issue.

A Society (H. Steadman).—There are three societies within easy distance of you, viz., The City and Suburban, with headquarters in Marylebone (Hon. Sec., V. Wynn, 22, Park-lane, W.), the Queen's Park and Dist., headquarters, Harrow-road (Hon. Sec., J. C. Birch, 68, Ashburnham-road, Willesden), and the West London F.A., headquarters, Shepherd's Bush (Hon. Sec., J. Dewhurst, 52, North End-road, West Kensington). Either would no doubt be pleased to welcome you as a member.

An Address (C.M.).—It is Mr. C. P. Arthur, Market-place, Melksham, Wilts.

Tool for Cage Front Making (G. Mander).—We fail to grasp the idea from the particulars given, which are not sufficiently explicit.

The S.B.B. and M.C. Patronage (Novice).—We do not quite see the connection between the alleged incident you mention and the patronage of the club. We should, anyway, require full particulars, with names, before we considered the publication of your letter.

A Legal Matter (F.J.W.).—Thanks for your letter, which we have perused with interest.

The Young Naturalists' Corner (A. Edwards).—Contributions may be sent in for competition at any time.

The Hawfinch (A. Boulton Bishop).—The picture referred to was not a coloured plate, but a drawing which appeared in the art supplement of the last Birthday Number. We may say, however, that your wish may very soon be gratified.

WIGAN AND DISTRICT CAGE BIRD SOCIETY.

At our monthly meeting, held on October 2nd, we had a visit from Mr. W. Massey (Bolton), who spoke to us about Roller singing Canaries. His remarks were brief and to the point, and very instructive. Mr. Vickers proposed that our best thanks be given to Mr. Massey. Mr. Large seconded, and it was heartily agreed to. In reply, Mr. Massey said it had been a great pleasure to him to come, and if he could do anything to help us to further the interest of the Roller Canary, he was at all times ready to do so.—W. RIDGE, Hon. Sec.

PETERBOROUGH.

Held Oct. 7th.—The Peterborough C.B.A. met with an excellent measure of success at this, their 5th annual venture. The spacious and beautifully lighted Corn Exchange was nicely filled with a very attractive display of birds, the quality being exceptionally good, considering the £5 price limit, the latter, of course, keeping away the "cracks," and giving the average exhibitor the chance of a better ticking amongst the prizes. The day was fine and a very fair number of fanciers put in an appearance, though the gate afround was not what this enterprising society deserved. Possibly the general public could not tear themselves away from the roundabouts, the cocoa-nut shies, and other allurements of the Great Fair. Sir Robert Purvis opened the show, and made a happy little speech, saying that he considered such exhibitions very beneficial, for the man who was a lover of singing birds and kept them in the condition of those he saw there to-day, such a man must of necessity be humane; further, this hobby must foster a love for the home, and take one out of the dull routine of ordinary life. The Mayor presided at the opening ceremony. The hon. sec., Mr. S. L. Cocks, made the arrangements in first-class style, as might be expected of such a genial and practical fancier. He had a good working committee at his back, comprising Messrs. W. Abbott, R. Barley, W. Clark, G. Clark, M. Dawson, Herbert, A. Rowles, E. Smith, Stacey, and A. Watts, with Mr. H. C. Lilley the capable hon. treasurer. The judges were Messrs. J. H. Roe, who handled the Canary Mules and Forcign, and S. H. Mays, who handled the British Section, and their awards seemed generally approved.

The Canary Section.

NOR. CL. YELL. CK. (11): 1, Priestley, very good shape and quality, neat and well braced, in nice bloom; 2, Emery and Hathaway, good typical bird, nice head and chest, not quite the finish of lender to-day; 3, Belcher, fine size aud shape, very stylish, also not quite fit yet, very close up; res, Smith, shapely, rare quality; vhc, Brooks; hc, Howe; c, Popple. BUFF (18): 1, Lawson, real bouny bird, great size, splendid front, good feather and meal, just a wee bit browed; 2, Rippon, another very nice bird, good quality and meal; 3, Irons, excels in body, lovely quality of feather, nice undercolour, little pinched in head; res, Pole, grand chested bird, in good form; vhc, Mason; hc, Punchard; c, Popple. TKD., ETC., YELL. (5): 1, Rippon, excellent stamp of bird, grand head, full of quality, lightly varieg.; 2, Brooks, bit longer, but very well built and good in carriage, grizzled on head; 3, Johnson, eye and wing mkd., nice substance and shape, good feather; res, Hesp, taking, stylish bird; vhc, Jupe. BUFF (13): 1, Lawson, varieg., big, bouncing fellow, very cobby and compact, nice head, shade coarse in feather; 2, Crimes, saddle-mkd., short and well built, stands well over perch, good silky feather, nice undercolour, must have been a close race; 3, Emery and Hathaway, mkd. head and wings, good fronted, nice quality bird, stylish; res, Rippon, wing tkd., excelleut, slight failing in head; vhc, Punchard; hc, Stevens; c, Ette. YELL. HEN (11): 1, Lawson, clear, real gem, rich, sound colour, beautiful shape and style, short and cobby, wonderful good head, we made her the pick of the section, claimed at £5, and excellent value if really a hen; 2, Popple, another beautiful clear, not the colour and finish of winner, but hard to beat for shape, style and alround excellence; 3, Irons, also clear, and also a taking bird, very compact and well built, best of carriage; res, Johnson, real good, saddle-mkd.; vhc, Keech, typical and neat; hc, Moore and Sons; c, Hodder. BUFF HEN (21): A stinging class; 1, Moore and Son, clear, great size, grand head and front, good quality, tight and well finished, very nice; 2, Lawson, another lovely clear, best of type and quality, grand carriage; 3, Hodder, fine big varieg., splendid fronted, well cut away behind, excellent quality; res, Irons, grand bodied hen; vhc, Howe, fine hen, but not looking very pleased with herself; hc, Axe; c, Stevens. UNFLIG. YELL. CL. CANNOCK.

Held October 13th and 14th, the first fixture held under the auspices of the Cannock and District F. and F.A. The new hall is an admirable place for such a purpose, being spacious, well lighted, and free from draught. The cage birds were comfortably staged on the platform, and carefully tended by capable stewards. Fortunately the weather, which, in the early morning was wretched, cleared up, and quite a nice day followed. The secretary, Mr. H. W. Briggs, is a painstaking, courteous official, and the society is indeed fortunate in having the services of such a careful and hardworking organiser to assist in making their first show a success. Mr. T. J. Ambrose judged.

The Yorkshire section was the best the Dulwich O.S. has ever had, some real gems being benched. Messrs. Amblers' buff ticked took the 10s. 6d. special for best in show; this is a gem and will take some stopping. Mr. Wilcock's unflg. buff is another good bird. Messrs. Ogden Bros., Robertshaw, Walsh, and Broadley and Son staged some grand Yorkies. The last-named's unflig. yellow (Class 28, No. 1) was looking very bad at the time of judging, but we were pleased to see that the bird was picking up a little later on. In the open novice section we must congratulate Mr. Lacey on having two fine young Yorkies, his yellow is a real gem, and with care will make a name for itself. Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford) made the awards.

The Yorkshires.

ALNWICK.

Alnwick and Dis. C.B.S. held their second annual show on October 13th, and it proved a great success, the entries exceeding the first show by about 80. It was held in the Corn Exchange—an ideal place—being well lighted from roof and free from draughts. Norwich were forward in large numbers, and contained some of the cream of the fancy. The unflighted class had 30 entries, and not a duffer among them. The winner proved to be a local bird exhibited by Mr. Dixon. Borders were forward in strength, and here also were some good specimens. Mr. Smart cleverly accounted for two 1sts with a pair of gems. Yorkshires, Mules, and Forcigners were a representative lot, and there were to be found among them some likely winners this season. British birds were a grand collection both for numbers and quality. The Song Thrush exhibited by Mr. J. W. Bruce was greatly admired. It secured the coveted special for best bird in show. The management may be equalled, but it can't be excelled. Such a lot of hard-working members of committee we have seldom seen, and everything passed off without a hitch. The hard-working and genial secretary is Mr. Broadley, who was to be found here, there and everywhere. The show should prove a financial success. The judges were Messrs. Dixon (Canaries) and Maddison (Mules, British, and Foreign), and their awards were well received.

The Canary Classes.

I am returning to England again, writes Mr. John Nicholson, and will sail from Quebec on October 8th. I am very sorry to say that I have been called home on account of my wife's health. She was put under an operation which has turned out a failure. I left Flimby, Maryport, Cumberland, just 3 years ago, for Canada, and brought all my birds with me. If all goes well at home I will soon be in the Fancy again. My address is 6, Cornation Street, Grasslot, Maryport, Cumberland.

We have now made arrangements for our forthcoming show, which is to be held in the McGarel Town Hall, Larne, on January 20th and 21st next. A committee is selected, and we have engaged Mr. J. Wilcock (Eccleshill) to judge. We have arranged schedule, and have decided to give 36 classes. Our association is now under the distinguished patronage of Wm. Chaine, Esq., D.L., and Colonel J. M. McCalmont, M.P., President Dr. S. W. Hill. We have been favoured with the patronage of the Yorkshire C.C. of Ireland, and the N.P.C. of Ireland.—W. Geddis, sec., Larne and Dis. C.B.A.

IT'S STOREY.

Here I am again, and I know you are pleased to see it. I must first thank my thousand and one customers for their past patronage, and inform you that all orders entrusted to me shall receive the same (or better) prompt and careful attention as in the past. My first consignments of Rollers are expected to arrive next week, when all orders will be forwarded in rotation. St. Andreasberg Roller cocks, specially trained, day and artificial light songsters, 6/9, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; hens, 2/-, 2/6, 3/- each; Hartz Roller cocks, the best and cheapest, loud free songsters in the world, 5/9, 6/3, 6/9 each; matched pairs, 7/6, 8/6; neat travelling cages, 3d. each extra; no humbug or deception here; every customer guaranteed satisfaction; all Canaries carriage paid on seven days' approval at my sole risk; illustrated price list post free.—Miss E. L. Storey, Crowle, Doncaster.

YOUR PATIENCE

is at last rewarded. I am pleased to say that I have just received the first consignment of the famous Leipsig Rollers for this season. These birds are all in magnificent condition, clean moulted, and in full song, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, water bubble runs, soft roulades, piccolo trills, bell, harp, and gong notes, etc., etc., and guaranteed entirely free from any harsh or chopping notes whatever, price 6/- and 7/- each; Roller hens, 3/- couple, 16/- dozen. I also have a grand lot of loud free singing Hartz cocks in full, loud, vigorous song, at 4/6 each, seven for 28/-. Hartz hens, 2/6 couple, 12/- dozen. As usual, all will be sent on a full week's trial at my risk on receipt of cash or deposit system of CAGE BIRDS, and money fully refunded if every satisfaction not given. These Leipzig Rollers are far in front of any other Roller on the market for quality of song and lowness of price combined, and command the largest sale of any Rollers in United Kingdom. All cocks are stamped under wing, "Hans Weber, Leipzig," and as I am the only importer of this strain, no other dealer can sell them unless he first purchases from me. Thousands of testimonials have been received by me, some saying that the Leipzig Rollers have beaten birds costing three times more money from elsewhere. Dealers supplied. Wholesale list on receipt of trade card. See British Bird and also Appliance columns for further advertisements.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

"SALE AND EXCHANGE" ADVERTISEMENTS FOR READERS WHO DISTRIBUTE ONE COPY OF "CAGE BIRDS" GRAND DOUBLE NO.

Novel Scheme to Benefit Our Readers and Ourselves.

Everyone at some time or another wants to sell some article for which he has no further use, or to exchange it for something he wants. Amongst the 50,000 other readers of "CAGE BIRDS" there must be some who are ready to buy from, or exchange with you.

To enable our readers to dispose of, purchase, or exchange various articles, we have decided to insert private advertisements free of charge for those who are willing to promote the circulation of "CAGE BIRDS." All you have to do is to get one extra copy of this splendid Double No., and give it to a friend who you know would be interested, tell him or her what your opinion of the paper is, and how much he or she too can benefit by the articles and advice contained in each issue. Send the coupon which appears on this page, from the one extra copy and your own—two coupons in all—together with the advertisement you want inserted. For two coupons sent bearing the same date, we will insert twelve words free of charge. Every additional word will be charged at ½d. per word. Not more than two coupons can be accepted for any single advertisement.

This plan benefits you by finding a market for anything you wish to dispose of, at a cost of only threepence, including postage, and benefits us by bringing "CAGE BIRDS" before new readers. We are helping you in return for your help towards the increase of our circulation.

If you have anything to Sell or Exchange fill in and post this Form, sending two coupons of the same date, for free insertion of twelve words, and stamps to cover additional words (½d. per word).

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

						FREE FOR 2 COUPONS.

Coupon advertisers must have replies addressed direct to them and not to a box number at this office. Two coupons of the same date pay for twelve words. One halfpenny is charged for each additional word.

Not more than two coupons may be used for any single advertisement. Coupons cannot be accepted for Trade advertisements, the charge for these being 20 words for 1/-. The proprietor reserves the right to decline any advertisement that seems to him undesirable.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

I WANT YOU

to particularly notice the entirely unsolicited letters given below. These testimonials are from professional catchers who depend upon the appliances they use for their living, and consequently will have nothing but the very best obtainable. You will see what they say, so if I can please them so well, surely I can give you the same satisfaction. A glance at my prices will show that they are far lower than others, and to prove that goods are better, I invite you to have anything you like on approval and test it side by side with a similar article from elsewhere, and if mine is not by far the best, return it and I will refund every penny of your money. Could I afford to say this unless I knew what I was talking about? Clap nets, made from ¾in. mesh, genuine thread netting, 3 yards long, 4/- pair, 4 yards long 5/-, 5 yards 6/-, 6 yards 7/-, 7 yards 8/-, 8 yards 9/-, 9 yards 10/- 10 yards 11/- per pair; all guaranteed 5½ft. deep and 4ft. fly; price includes two nets to the pair, pegs, poles, lines, etc., all complete ready for immediate use. Sparrow nets, fitted on 15ft. bamboo poles, 5/6 pair, ditto 17ft. 6/-, ditto 19ft. 6/6 pair. Loose thread netting, same as used in all my clap nets, ¾in. mesh, 7ft. deep, 3d. yard; ditto 9ft. deep, 4d. yard; ditto 12ft. deep, 5d. yard, post free. Lark netting, 1¼in. mesh, 10ft. deep, 4d. yard, post free. This netting is specially made for bird netting, and must not be confused with the cheap American cotton fishing netting often sold as bird netting for sake of extra profit. Self-acting spring net traps, 18in. long, 9d. each; ditto, 24in. long, 18in. wide, 1/- each. These net traps are by far largest and best traps on the market, and will catch and hold any bird from Wren to Rook without injury. They can be baited for Hard or Softhills at same time, and call bird can be used inside them if required. The only trap of its kind on the market. (Imitators please copy as usual.) Single trap cages, 6d. each, double ditto 1/- each, treble ditto 1/3 each, all with separate compartment for call bird, in addition to the one, two, or three traps as stated. Round-topped call cages, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen; square-topped ditto, 4d. each, 3/- dozen. All with all-wire tops and wood bottoms. The real Japanese birdlime, guaranteed absolutely strongest made, ¼lb. 6d., ½lb. 10d.; 1lb. 1/6; sample 3d., all post free. Kindly note, mine is the genuine Japanese lime, not merely a copied name. I guarantee it to hold in all weathers, even in rain or frost, and will leave birds' feathers as clean as a whistle; will hold any Hawk or Rook that flies. Bird brace swivels, three 3d., twelve 6d., post free. Pull lines, specially spun from soft Italian hemp, without snarl or hack twist, strong enough to pull a boat along, 68 yards long, 1/4 each, post free. Cheaper Russian hemp lines, 80 yards long, 1/- each post free. (These are not recommended for hard wear.) Hundreds upon hundreds of clap nets, Lark nets, Sparrow nets, side nets, and everything else required by catchers kept in stock. Send stamp for full printed list, which also gives hints on net-making. "Gedney, Holbeach, Lincs. Oct. 4th. Sir,—20 yard pair clap nets to hand. They are exactly right. I tried them to-day and they worked lovely, even although there was a big wind blowing. Please send a 12 yard pair same width.—Yours, C. Cuhley." On Oct. 11th Mr. Cuhley again writes: "Sir,—I received 12 yard clap nets safely and am highly pleased with them. Many thanks for sending so promptly. They are made of very fine thread, almost invisible when set, and just what are required for catching.—Yours, C. Cuhley." "72, Denmark-rd., Beccles. Oct. 15th. Sir,—Nets, etc., to hand. I am exceedingly pleased with them, as they are excellent quality for price paid. I received them in perfect condition.—Yours, H. Barber." "Garrion Gill, Pit Cottage, Overtown. Oct. 16th. Sir,—Please send 2lbs. birdlime. I got 1lb. from you last year and found it best in frosty weather.—Yours, R. Wyper." "Church-st., Garmouth. Oct. 12th. Sir,—Please send ¼lb. lime. I had some last season, and it was splendid stuff.—Yours, A. Clarke." "Waulkmills-by-Arbroath. Oct. 12th. Sir, —Please send ¼lb. lime. I got some last year from ——, and it was just like syrup, it ran off the sticks. —Yours, J. Smart." "Redding, Polmont Station. Oct. 11th. Sir,—Please send following. I had a pair clap nets from you 2½ years ago, and they are as good as ever, and have been out in all kinds of weather, so I know who I am dealing with.—Yours, Alex Rennie." "15, Bourne-rd., Bromley Common. Oct. 9th. Sir,—Please send following. The 20 yards netting pleased me very well.—Yours, A. Knott." "Holbrook-rd., Belper. Oct. 10th. Sir,—Please send ¼lb. lime. I had some last year and found it best I ever had.—Yours, T. Alton." "3, Hydney-st., Easthourne. Oct. 8th. Sir,—Lime to hand; it is best I ever had. Please send pair 12 yards clap nets.—Yours, G. Hunt." "Byards Leap, Sleaford. Oct. 5th. Sir,—Received trap cage, net trap, and birdlime all safe, and am very pleased with them all. Thanks for quick dispatch.—Yours, G. Christian." "35, Higher Bellevue, Redruth. Oct. 4th. Sir,—Trap cages are giving me every satisfaction.—Yours, F. Faulkner." "Brinsley Moor, nr. Eastwood. Oct. 1st. Sir,—Received clap nets quite safe and am very well pleased with them. Please send following. —Yours, C. Hewes." "20, Vernon-st., Sbirebrook. Oct. 1st. Sir,—Please send following. I received netting all right and am quite satisfied.—Yours, G. Goodwin." Please note that I have sent to Editor of CAGE BIRDS sixty unsolicited testimonials received by me during past few days for his inspection to prove their genuineness. These letters prove without shadow of doubt who is the best man to supply anything in fanciers or catchers' line. All nets sent out are properly "armed" or "geared," not merely line run through the netting, and I have a staff of fully competent workmen making up nets. These are men who thoroughly understand exactly what is required for successful catching, and nothing is spared in order to make my appliances most useful and durable on the market. I send all on approval, and cordially invite customers to put them to any test within reason, and if not in every way satisfactory, return them to me. Terms: Cash or CAGE BIRDS deposit system. Send stamp for full list. See British Bird and Roller Canary columns for further advts.

Perhaps You Wonder

why I am at all times willing to send birds on approval at my own risk. The reason is this. My birds are correctly described in advt., and are well on seed and in perfect health and condition; therefore customers not only expect what they get, but get exactly what they expect. My system of trading is this: I send everything on approval at my own risk, either on receipt of cash or deposit system of CAGE BIRDS, and unless perfect satisfaction is given, birds have only to be returned and back comes the whole of your money. Could you imagine more straightforward terms than these? I have grand lot cock Goldfinches, in perfect health and condition, at 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 7/-, twelve 12/-; specially selected larger cocks to moult for show or Muling, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-; few extra special clean moulted cocks, in full colour and superb condition, fit for keen competition, 3/- each, three 7/6; ben Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-, twelve 7/-. Grand lot cock Siskins, in perfect health and feather, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-; few selected yellow exhibition specimens, with full bibs, 3/- each; hen Siskins, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-. Splendid lot cock Bullfinches, in perfect health, 1/6 and 2/- each; exhibition specimens 2/6 each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- each; few extra large steady rich coloured hens, 1/6 each. Grand lot cock brown Linnets, everyone guaranteed to have nut brown backs and rose-red breasts, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially selected larger cocks for show, Muling, or contest, singing, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 3/6, twelve 6/-; scores of dozens of these Linnets sent every week to contest singers of Yorkshire, Lancashire, Durham, Northumberland, London, etc. Remember, I hold record for cheap contest winners, having supplied one for 4d. that won the cup in Yorkshire, beating, among others, a Leeds bird that cost nearly as many pounds as mine cost pence. Cock Chaffinches 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; exhibition specimens 1/- each; cock Greenfinches 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6, twelve 2/-; exhibition specimens, 1/- each. Redpolls, 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6, twelve 2/6; exhibition specimens, 1/- each. Splendid lot cock Skylarks, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 3/6; few specially selected birds, very steady and in song, 1/6, 2/-, and 2/6 each. Hand-reared cock Song Thrush, 2/6. Two-year-old cock Blackbird, splendid songster, 2/-. Goldfinch, Linnet, or Bullfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen. Lark runner cages, 6d., 8d., and 10d. each, 3/6, 4/6, and 7/- dozen. Dealers send stamp for wholesale cage list; price will astonish you. The following letters prove quality of birds sent out: "Water Works, Balfron Station. Sir,—Goldfinch arrived in pink of condition. Many thanks for despatching bird so quickly and such a good bird for money.—Yours, W. McAdam." "14, Temple-ter., Morriston. Sir,—Goldfinches arrived in pink or condition. They are a fine lot, and I am perfectly satisfied with my purchase.—Yours, T. Evans." "22, Union-ter., Clarence-st., York. Sir,—Goldfinches arrived safe, and am very much pleased with them. I am surprised at your turning out such nice birds so cheap as compared with other dealers.—Yours, H. Brough." "82, George-st., Whiteinch, Glasgow. Sir,—Linnets arrived in lovely condition and are the best Linnets I ever had sent. I have told all my friends to send to Gore for their birds. Please send me another dozen.—Yours, R. Rough." "12, Exeter-st., West Hartlepool. Oct. 15th. Sir,—Received Bullfinch and Goldfineh, and am very pleased with them. I have tried other dealers, but find yours are the best.—Yours, G. Rohson." "5, Bellefield-ter., Ford Croft, St. Mary Cray, Oct. 16th. Sir,—Please send four Goldfinches as follows. I have spent 25/- on Goldfinches from other dealers this season, and only have one left, and that not worth 1/-. My cousin recommended me to you. He still has four left out of six he had from you three years ago, and two of those are prize winners.—Yours, F. Smith." "124, Southwoodside-rd., Glasgow. Oct. 13th. Sir,—Received birds in good order and am very pleased with them; they are good value. Our first deal being satisfactory, will lead to future business. For prompt attention and value for money you cannot be beaten, and deserve the confidence of all intending purchasers of birds.—Yours, R. J. Jago." "71, Amity Grove, Raynes Park. Oct. 13th. Sir,—Bullfinch arrived safe and am very pleased with it. Thanks for honest dealing; you set an example for others.—Yours, R. Chastney." "40, Brunel-st., Ferryhill, Co. Durham, October 9th. Sir,—Received Linnets all right. I never had better for the money in my life. I was told you was an honest and upright man, and I am thankful to say you are. Please send another dozen cocks.—Yours, Frederick Curry." "48, Church-st., Seaham Harbour. Oct. 7th. Sir,—Linnets arrived in first-class health and condition. Many thanks for promptitude.—Yours, G. Craggs." "Broughton, Stokesley, Oct. 5th. Sir,—Received birds quite safe and am well pleased with both. The Linnet is a good call bird and knows his work. I am pleased to get hold of a straightforward man at last, having been taken down so much.—Yours, A. Jackson." "29, Handel-st., Halifax. Oct. 9th. Sir,—Received Lark safe and he is a grand bird. I am very proud of my two birds. No one need be afraid to send to you for birds; they will get what they pay for—good value for money. If all were like you we should want no approval with our birds.—Yours, B. Holmes." As some people may be doubtful of the genuineness of these letters, I have sent 60 unsolicited testimonials, including the above, all hearing Government postmarks, to Editor of CAGE BIRDS for his inspection, and will give £10 to anyone that can prove that any letter I publish is not genuine and entirely unsolicited. See Appliance column and also Roller Canary column for further statements of facts.

HARRY ALLEN.
CNLY HONEST DEALINGS WITH ME.

For over fifteen months not one single bird has been returned to me. Proof, the Editor of this paper. Is not this sufficient proof that I stand alone for high-class British? Goldfinches, Goldfinches; real English Peartree cock Goldfinches, the largest in England, with grand broad heads and beautiful square cut scarlet blaze, with splendid wing bars, richly tanned on breasts, and beautifully buttoned, a credit to send out, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6. A few that can win in keen competition, 5/-; Goldfinches, used to catching, both for netting and for liming, 3/- each; Goldfinches, singing very hard, and showing splendid colour, 2/- and 2/6; exhibition British show cage, with one of my best Goldfinches, 6/6. My cages are a treat, with my A1 special Linnets, 4/6; ready for the show bench at once. Linnets, Linnets; my A1 specials can beat the world for steadiness, size, colour and markings; for three years this class of birds have won all before them, price 2/6; Linnets, singing grand, with a beautiful polished contest cage, and my new book of secrets, and a packet of my special mixture, 3/6, worth double. Look; fierce singing cock Linnets, with extra loud voices, with cage, and my book of secrets, right for catching or contest singing only, 2/6; Linnets, taught by the champion Linnet of the world, will sing anywhere, only 1/6; a few specials, 2/-; Linnets, from the same place as the world's champion, only 1/-; the same as I have supplied most of the leading Linnet clubs of England. I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. Deposit your money with the Editor of this paper, or send direct to me. I have a few quality singing Linnets to dispose of, 30/- and £2 each, can win; for full particulars write. House-moulted Linnets, singing with their wings down, 10/6; these are cheap birds. Look; the finest cock Larks in England, singing daylight and gaslight, and as straight as arrows and as steady as rocks, 1/- and 1/6; a few singing extra loud, 2/6; exhibition British show cages, 2/- each; polished singing contest cages, 1/6 each. Please read what others say:—"Raplock-st., Larkhall, N.B. Dear Sir,—Received Goldfinch in good health and condition. I am satisfied with same; thanking you very much for you attention.—L. Nisbet to H. Allen." "90, Wigshaw-lane, Culcheth, nr. Warrington. Sir,—Goldfinch arrived all right and pleased with it.—Yours truly, William Hindley to H. Allen." "46, Union-st., Larkhall. Sir,—Received birds all right this morning, and I am more than satisfied; many thanks for your selection.—Yours, R. McClue to H. Allen." All my birds are on 7 days' approval, cash or deposit; over 2,000 in stock; postcard before birds; no waiting, only honest dealing done with me. Please state wants and write to the largest British bird dealer in the world, Harry Allen, bird specialist and judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

Please write for Softbills or Hardbills; singing contest clubs and aviaries supplied by return of post. Ladies and gentlemen, all I send out are on 7 days' approval, cash, or deposit with "Cage Birds." Read what others say. From Mr. Smallwood, Newcastle-rd., Staffs.—Sir,—I got the Linnets safe; thanks for sending me such grand birds. From Mr. Moscrop, 23, Walton-st., Gateshead. Sir,—Got your special Goldfinches safe; they are real gems, splendid blazes, and also large giants, as steady as rocks; thanks for the way you have treated me. From Mr. Hoare, Gilfordgoch, Bridgend. Sir,—I got Goldfinch and Linnets safe; am highly pleased with them; I don't think any approval is required with your special bird; you will have all my orders for future. From Mr. Bergeman, Abbotswood, Buxted, Sussex. Sir,—Here I am again. Send me 3 special Goldfinches at once, the Linnets and Goldfinches I got from you are champions; I never had a better lot in my life; we shall send for all we want to you; wishing you every success which you honestly deserve. From Mr. Jeffrey, 17, Norfolk-st., Swansea. Sir,—The 6 birds arrived safe; you are a champion; all extra value for my money; send me on the following at once; perfectly satisfied. So, gentlemen, send at once to Matthews, Bird Specialist, and Judge, 24, Avenue-st., Aviaries, Portwood, Stockport, Cheshire.

Thousands of testimonials have been published by me in CAGE BIRDS from satisfied customers. I guarantee strictly honourable trading and satisfaction to all.—Varney, sole proprietor and importer of this remarkable Roller Canary. Twenty years' advertiser.—Varney, Stratford, London.

is at last rewarded. I am pleased to say that I have just received the first consignment of the famous Leipsig Rollers for this season. These birds are all in magnificent condition, clean moulted, and in full song, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, water bubble runs, soft roulades, piccolo trills, bell, harp, and gong notes, etc., etc., and guaranteed entirely free from any harsh or chopping notes whatever, price 6/- and 7/- each; Roller hens, 3/- couple, 16/- dozen. I also have a grand lot of loud free singing Hartz cocks in full, loud, vigorous song, at 4/6 each, seven for 28/-. Hartz hens, 2/6 couple, 12/- dozen. As usual, all will be sent on a full week's trial at my risk on receipt of cash or deposit system of CAGE BIRDS, and money fully refunded if every satisfaction not given. These Leipzig Rollers are far in front of any other Roller on the market for quality of song and lowness of price combined, and command the largest sale of any Rollers in United Kingdom. All cocks are stamped under wing, "Hans Weber, Leipzig," and as I am the only importer of this strain, no other dealer can sell them unless he first purchases from me. Thousands of testimonials have been received by me, some saying that the Leipzig Rollers have beaten birds costing three times more money from elsewhere. Dealers supplied. Wholesale list on receipt of trade card. See British Bird and also Appliance columns for further advertisements.

W. GORE, The Importer, Gooch-st., Birmingham.

BEST QUALITY. Lowest Prices.

Without a douht it is well known that as high-class songsters my Rollers stand supreme. During the past 15 years the high quality of their song has earned for me a reputation that cannot be shaken. Yet my prices compare favourably with those charged for common songsters.

I Hold What I Offer.

And, knowing what I have, and my great desire to give such value as is next to impossible to be obtained elsewhere, is the reason of the unbounded satisfaction given year after year; and the fact that I have received more testimonials than any man living. I have also published more than any person or firm in existence. I know also that price is a great object to many; but a high quality and a low price is still a greater consideration to the purchasing public. Note the following prices and make a comparison of these prices; but, above all I want a comparison of birds, to test the full value. Some good show birds at special prices; also in the stock are cinnamons, cinnamon marked, and greens.

DYKE'S Yorkshires.

"Still winning." See reports at Coventry, Longton, Peterborough, etc. Read this testimonial, from Joseph Street, Sutton, St. Helens. Oct. 16, 1909.—Received bird this morning, and am very well pleased with it, and shall recommend you to my friends if they are ever in want of a good bird, as I am sure you will give them every satisfaction, the same as you have given me.—E. Davies to L. Dykes. Another, from Colmer Place, S. Streatham.—Birds arrived quite safe, and am very well pleased with them. Have sent to editor to pay you deposit.—A. Osborn to L. Dykes. I have a grand lot now ready, in Clears, ticked, green marked, Cinn. marked, and clear pink eyed, all cold rooms bred and kept, and every bird in best of health; colour fed or natural colour. Long slim typical yellow cocks at 6/-, 7/-, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/- each; buff cocks at 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6; all on full song, and 7in. long, some over, pairs matched to breed own winners, at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- per pair. Grand typical hens, feathered like wax, yellows or buffs, at 3/6, 4/6, 5/6, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6 each. Inspection invited.

Exhibition specimens, that can win in keen competition at reasonable prices; or others that can win at members' or small shows, from 12/6 each; all on 7 days' approval, at my risk. Either for cash, or deposit your money with Editor and have on approval. Travelling cages, with proper food for journey, 3d. extra, on all orders. Illustrated price list with scores of winning testimonials, post free.

Place your orders with the old reliable breeder, exhibitor, and judge, who has won thousands of prizes, cups, gold and silver medals, etc., during the last 18 years in keen competition, at leading shows. State wants to.

BOOKLET FREE.
Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

Canary Breeding for Beginners

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Post Free 7d.

A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary Breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby.

Contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing, and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, etc.

SOME BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1909 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the recent breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others, and must be accompanied by the sender's name and address in every case.

Breeding results have this year round here at Keith, been on the whole very favourable. I myself have reared over 40 young ones, and several of our local fanciers have also reared a good many. But at the first most of us had a good deal of trouble with non-feeding hens. All our birds are now deep in the moult, but we hope for some good weather yet to get our birds well through it, and then to get them into trim for the show season, which is now fast advancing. I wish your paper, CAGE BIRDS, every success; I am a constant reader of it.—G. GRANT (Keith).

Lochcraig F.A.

Three friends gave the members of the above society a call round to see how they had fared this seasen, and found on the whole poor results. The severe cold nights we had during the season played havoc among the youngsters. The first we visited was Mr. J. Brown, who easily heads the list with a total of 35 young birds; he had 4 pairs Borders, 3 Muling pairs, and one pair of Linnets up, and had got 28 Borders, 2 Siskin Mules; he also had 5 Greenfinch Canarics. He has one very promising Siskin Mule, and should be well in the running with his Borders this year. This is only his second year breeding, so results are very encouraging. We next visited Mr. C. Schoolbreads, who has just finished with 17 Borders and 5 Scotch Fancies. We noticed here a young Scotch Fancy cock (yellow) that should put some of the "dons" on their mettle. Mr. A. Wilkie has had very hard luck, indeed, his young Scots Fancies dropping off just when about on the sticks; he had only half-a-dozen young Borders—a pity he didn't get any Scots Fancies, as he had 3 pairs of grand birds paired up. This appears to be Mr. Robt. Bullock's "year off." First of all his old pairs dropped off mysteriously, which he believed was caused by bad seed; then, when he did get young ones on the spar, they started "quarrying operations" in a quarry near his house, and the heavy blasting killed over a dozen Borders. However, he reared 10 Borders, and some of them should give him consolation. We finished up at Mr. J. Ewenson's; this breeder has had exceedingly hard lines. He had half-a-dozen pairs of Norwich and Yorkshires up, and he only got 20 young ones, having lost a large number through mice getting amongst his seed. But he is enthusiastic, and will yet be heard of in the birdie world; we noticed he had a Greenfinch that should make itself felt this year.—ROBT. BALLOCH, secretary.

Teaching My Softbills to Sing.

By THOMAS SIME.

I used to keep Blackbirds. I hunted in the woods in the year 1871 and onwards for Blackbirds' nests, which were plentiful in the east of Scotland, and I could tell a Blackbird's nest whenever I saw it.

Nesting of Blackbirds.

This species builds its nest in low trees or hedges, on the ground, and even in old sheds, or any places it thinks it would like. They are not cunning like the rest of our small birds. The nest is built of hay, old twigs and grass, and a layer of "glaber" in the bottom; then the nest is left to dry. After three or four days the hen has her first egg, and she lays four or five altogether. Their colour is bluish with dark spots, though the eggs are not always the same in colour; sometimes they are lighter and sometimes darker. The hens sit for from thirteen to fourteen days, and sometimes longer. When the hen lays her last egg she sits all day, and the male bird feeds her; then the male bird takes his turn at sitting, which he does at night, but not for so long.

Hand-feeding the Young.

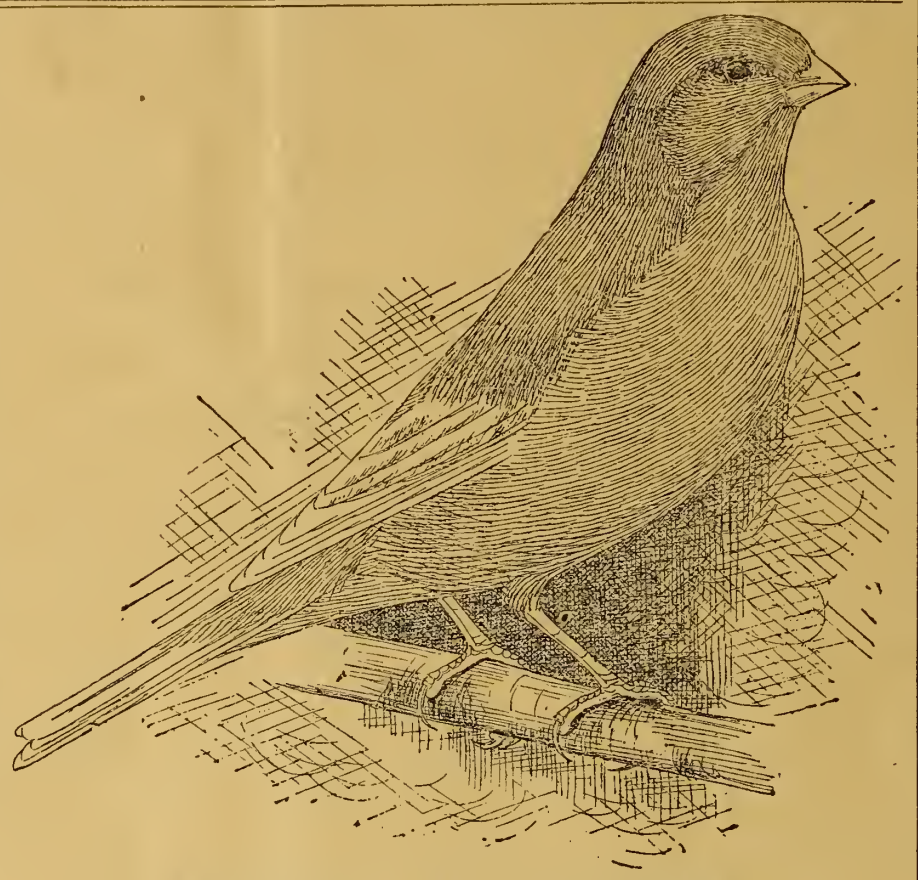
When the young are hatched the work of feeding begins, as soon as daylight comes, in fact. Whenever a young one was four weeks old I used to take it out if it were a cock bird, to feed him myself. I fed him on pearmeal ½lb., ¼lb. of fat, ¼lb. of crushed hemp, pinch of salt; these I put in a pan and boiled till they became stiff. Then I dried it before the fire, afterwards allowing it to cool. I fed the young one on that until he was able to do for himself, and so on all the year round. I gave a bit of raw beef now and again.

I was able to know the cocks from the hens by looking for the biggest birds, which were the cocks. Another way I had of telling was seeing whether there were any dark feathers on the butts of their wings; if there were I could tell they were cocks. The hens, too, had a light patch under the neb (beak). The sexes are alike in the body feathers. Other fanciers tell me they can distinguish the cocks from the hens because the former have yellow nebs and yellow legs, and the hens do not; but I have seen a cock-bird with a black neb and black legs, and there are some flying at the time of writing about the west of Scotland.

Teaching Blackbirds to Sing.

I used to teach the birds when I was younger to sing. I taught the cocks that I brought up to say "jockey," and to sing "Up in the morning early," and for me it was a case of "up in the morning early." I used to put a cloth over the cage for an hour every morning; then I would start with the first verse, and continue teaching him until he knew the song by heart, and sing all the verses from beginning to end without a mistake. Then I used to lift the violin and play the first verse over till he would catch the sound; then he would follow me, and I would "take" 1, 2, 3, on the violin, and the Blackbird would repeat the sound after me, and when we started we could make the whole house ring.

But you cannot teach a bird to sing when there is any other bird in the house, for when a bird of mine heard the other birds singing he would follow them, or he would follow part of his tune and part of the other bird's. But if a bird is kept in the house, either in a warm kitchen or in a cold room by himself, you will find he will learn alright.



The cage was 38ins. long, 18ins. high, and 15ins. wide. I cleaned each bird every other day; the cleaner you keep your birds the more they will think of their home.

You can open the cage door of one of mine and let him out to have a bath in a basin on the floor, and let him stay out till dry; then he will make for his cage. You can let him fly out of the house, and he will come back if some unkind person does not come along and snip him away, for he is always so tame and they may think it a fine chance. Many a good singing Blackbird have I had, and many a bad one. The method of feeding I gave above is the right one, at least, that is my opinion.

Concerning the Starling.

Now and again Starlings can be taught to sing in the same way I said I had taught Blackbirds. I have taught them to sing "I will mend my Jonnie Grey breeks for awa' the ill he has dane me yet." I could tell the cocks from the hens by their nebs, for most of the cocks' nebs are yellow when they are coming out of the nest.

They are easily caught on a wet morning, or the first few days they are out of the nest, when you can "run them down" and pick the one you want. When you have it, feed it the same as the Blackbird, but give bits of "rat's tails" with the green seed.

A SCOTTISH TYPE OF PLAINHEAD.

The Clear Yellow Norwich Plainhead cock which won 1st prize at the great Glasgow City Show for Mr. Geo. Mitchell (Brechin).

The Thrush Considered.

The Thrush is another bird that can be easily taught to do like the Blackbird. I used to be able to tell the nests of the Thrush or the Starling by seeing the old birds near at hand, when one knows their nests cannot be far away. I used to tell the cocks from the hens by the spots on their breasts; the cock is spotted from the neb down under the tail, while hens are only spotted half-way down. Another way of distinguishing the sexes is to notice whether the birds have large and pointed nebs; if so, they are cocks. The hens, however, curiously enough, make the best show birds. I have known it when it has been hard to tell the cocks from the hens, so good were the latter, but in time you can easily find out.

If you get a good cock Mavis, and you allow yourself plenty of time in which to teach him, you will find that you have a good friend, and he will know your footsteps when you come near him, long before he sees you. He will cry his name to you if you have taught him it. If he hears some other person going near him he will say his name just the same, but will be very shy, for he will think they are going to do him harm. But I don't care so much for the Thrush for teaching purposes, as I do for the Blackbird or the Starling.

I have had many different kinds of birds, and I feed all my birds by the one method, and I don't believe in the cheap shop food. The food one makes up for himself is the best, and one knows what he is doing. The food mentioned will keep these birds going along finely.

Some Advice to those Unversed in Exhibiting.

By J. C. BARNES.

The Show and the Show Cages.

The list of shows published in CAGE BIRDS week by week, and the Reviews of Schedules, greatly assist a fancier to select a show most likely to fit in with his requirements. Having made the selection, write the Secretary, and ask him to kindly forward a schedule to you. When you get it carefully read the rules and regulations so as to avoid mistakes. Make out your entry form clearly and distinctly, and enclose a postal order to the full amount of your entries. Get the same off at an early date. Don't wait until the last moment, as late entries are a bugbear.

If at all possible, take your birds yourself to the show. If this is not possible, forward them the night previous to the show day, so as to ensure an early delivery. Don't run risks, or you may have all your cages labelled "Too late for judging." I have on several occasions actually seen birds delivered at the show room at mid-day; at times even later.

The Show Cages, etc.

See that your show cages are clean and in good condition, with no wires broken. Clean cages add to the appearance of your specimen. If you are showing Norwich, tie your cage label on the left-hand side of the front, about three wires from the end. If exhibiting Yorkshires, tie the label on the top wire, over the water hole. Use only plain Canary seed for the bottom of the cage; don't use husks, sawdust, chaff, or even mixed seed. By so doing you will avoid the suspicion of "influencing the judge."

Bathing and Washing.

Don't be afraid to let your show birds bathe on bright days. Bathing is a good conditioner, also a capital tightener of feathers. Give the bath in the early part of the day, so as to give the birds ample time to dry previous to roosting time.

Birds that you wish to exhibit must be washed. Always make a practice of washing them at least four days previous to the show day; longer than this if possible. A week is a nice time (providing you keep the birds free from dust), as it gives them a better chance of "fining down."

The utensils required for tubbing purposes are three basins, a sponge, a flat camel hair-brush (or shaving brush), a few squares of old soft sheeting (or old silk handkerchiefs), soap that is free from soda, a drying cage and a drying board. The basins I use in this manner: one for my soapy water, and the other two as "rinsers," which enable me to get all the soap away from the feathers. Should you leave any soap in, the bird will look worse than if you had never touched it. The sponge I use in order to absorb the water from the feathers previous to wrapping the bird in the drying cloth.

As regards the brush, I like one of the broad, flat camel-hair kind in preference to the shaving brush. You can use the former around the bird's eyes with less risk. I use two drying cloths while the bird is before the fire. The drying board I place on the top of the fender, at a fair distance from the fire, and my drying cage is located about three feet away from the fire, just so that the birds will receive a comfortable warmth.

When washing a bird I always place it in my left hand firmly, and I commence washing the back, flights and tail; then I turn it over to do the neck, chest, sides and tail, finishing the head last. By doing the head last, you exhaust your bird far less. Always brush the feathers the way they lie.

Don't dry your birds too much in the drying cloth, for if you do they will appear harsh in feather. Place the birds in the drying cage, when they are, say, three parts dry; then, as a rule, they come out nice and "bloomy." The temperature of the washing water should be such that you can hold the back of your hand in the water without any uncomfortable effect. The rinsing water should be a shade cooler.

Steadiness and High Condition.

Birds for the bench must be steady, in order to show off all their good points. Run your birds out of the usual cages into show cages as often as time will permit. Talk to them, gain their confidence, and if they should "wire," drive them carefully down on to the perches.

Some birds are very obstinate. When I find one of this description, I place it in a show cage and leave it in until it does settle down.

Exhibition stock must face the judge in the best possible condition. Birds that are not "up" find themselves very much "down" when the tickets are distributed. Condition tells its tale.

There is such a thing, however, as getting birds into too high condition. When in such a state they more often than not put themselves out of shape considerably; so you must use discretion. Various ways are practised to bring birds into show trim. Maw seed alone, given in small quantities every day, will often answer well. Another method is to give one teaspoonful of Allen and Hanbury's Bynophosphates in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water twice a week, and to give three or four times a week a little soft food, made up of hard-boiled egg and bread-crumbs, with a sprinkling of maw seed added.

Another very reliable agent which I can recommend is made as follows: Take one pint of best port wine, 1lb. of honey, and 1oz. of citrate of iron and ammonia. Heat the wine, add the honey and citrate, stir well, until all has dissolved; let it go cold and then bottle up. It is then ready for use. Make up some soft food (egg and bread-crumbs and maw seed), then add sufficient of this mixture to make the food moist, but not too wet. About half a teaspoonful of this moistened food for each bird given every other day is ample. When your birds have indulged in this "good stuff" for a short time, they will be in tip-top form. You can treat either "stout" or "slim" varieties to this. It is not fattening.

In Conclusion.

During the show season birds are apt to lose feathers in some way. A good plan is to give twice or three times a week, right through the show season, a small quantity of colour food.

When packing up your birds for a show, be sure all are on the perches. At times birds cling to the cage front when you are placing your show cages into your travelling case, and this is apt to cause a mishap. Only a short time ago I observed a gem of a Yellow Norwich with its leg broken through being caught in the wires when the bird was sent to the show.

Should it be your good fortune to visit the show you exhibit at, compare your birds with the winners (providing, of course, you don't happen to be at the "top of the tree"). This is a practical lesson, and beats all theory. Study the good and bad points through all the classes in which you have entered, and by so doing you no doubt will come away the wiser. Don't "throw cold water" on your fellow fancier's birds simply because they have beaten yours. Let the best birds win with honour.

Birdie Items in Brief.

A Few Topical Hints by an "Old Hand."

At the risk of occasionally repeating a well-worn piece of advice, I venture to recount a few brief items on various topics which may be useful and opportune just now, especially to those to whom it will again come fresh and new, for the interest in certain subjects must be perennially new.

Fresh Caught Birds.

Fresh caught birds are now becoming extremely common in the market, and consequently in the hands of novices. When you buy them don't put them in a warm corner of the kitchen in a pokey little singing cage, and then say they died of "shop fever." Remember that, being native birds, in most cases living in the open air with us throughout the year, even in the severest winters, they require no coddling at any time, much less when freshly taken from their native wilds. On the contrary, give them as much fresh pure air as possible, and an airing out of doors daily whenever the weather is tolerably fine and dry.

Another point concerning them demands discretion. That is, the food supply. It will be readily understood that after a summer and autumn such as we are having there is little for the wild birds to pick up in the way of seeds, save what has been thoroughly sodden with rain and dews, so that the sudden change to a diet consisting solely of hard, dry seeds is likely to affect the birds' digestive organs.

To obviate this difficulty, one should make a much more liberal use of freshly gathered wild seeds than usual until the birds are well over the moult, by which time the change of food will have lost any harmful effects. Where this is not feasible, soak a little seed overnight, draining and wiping dry in the morning, and giving it to the birds in addition to their dry seeds an hour or so later. Freshly-gathered wild seeds are, however, preferable, if procurable.

Insect-eaters are not so much affected by the food supply, provided one takes sufficient care to keep a goodly proportion of natural insect food on hand during the meating-off process. Mealworms and gentles are not to be despised or doled out with a niggardly hand when other supplies fail, but with fresh-caught birds these should always be set aside in favour of such livo insects as may be collected fresh from day to day. Don't be afraid to offer anything that comes to hand in the insect world. Birds know better than you what to eat and what to reject, as you will soon discover when you find given species of soft-bills systematically picking out certain insects from a mixed supply, and just as systematically declining without thanks certain other kinds.

Mixed food eaters, such as Buntings, and some other species, will do well with a little sprouting rape, and a few grains of soaked wheat and oats, added to their diet, though here again I should rather increase the usual supply of insects, besides supplying these extras.

Open-air Aviaries.

If you have a collection of British birds which have been in an open-air aviary through the summer, and think that some of them might make good exhibition specimens do not remove them indoors to moult. Let them moult out in the aviary, and remain there until the plumage has regained its full brilliancy and lustre. Keep a large shallow bath filled with clean rain water in the aviary constantly, and see that it is cleaned and refilled afresh at least once a day. Allow plenty of natural foods, weeds, seeds, fruit, berries, and insect life according to the species. These, with shade from direct sunrays, but plenty of diffused light, will give a brilliancy not to be surpassed by any amount of artificial colouring agents.

On the other hand, where the aviaries are stocked with foreign birds not properly acclimatised, or with delicate species, now is the time to begin to get them into indoor aviaries, or open-air aviaries protected from the weather, so that they are practically of the same conditions as indoor structures. Of course, birds that are hardy and well acclimatised may be left out for some weeks to come, and some of them all the winter through, but the more delicate Doves and Finches, and nearly all recently imported specimens, should be taken in now on the first approach of cold weather.

Gas and Canaries.

This is a subject that gave rise to a little controversy a while ago, opinions being divided as to whether the burning of gas in a room was injurious to the birds. It is, indeed, a question that can be truthfully answered by either a "Yes" or a "No." The crux is in the injudicious burning of gas—the abuse rather than the use of it. For example, many folks will turn the gas valve on full under any circumstances, and if the pressure is high the jet will "fizzle" quite distinctly, and a certain amount of gas is probably going to waste contaminating the air which the birds are breathing. A simple remedy is to economise the gas bill by closing the valve until the audible "fizzling" ceases.

Then there is the heat given off, particularly where incandescent lights are used, which will seriously affect any bird hung within range of the heat thus given off. With incandescent lights a bird kept within several feet of the burners must get tremendously overheated during the evening, and proportionately cold after the lights are extinguished; it will get extremes of heat of the very worst description. There is, therefore, no wonder if health and condition quickly fail.

The obvious remedy is to see that the birds are kept well beyond the range of the heat of gas jets, and very little, if any, above the level of them. Then, I believe, one may quite confidently say that gas is not injurious to cage birds kept in the same room.

SOME FAULTS OF YORKSHIRE CANARIES.

A lecture by Mr. S. DEAN, delivered before the Bradford East O.S. on October 5.

Mr. S. Dean opened the winter syllabus of lectures before a splendid attendance of members and friends on October 5th. Taking as his subject "Faults we don't want in a Yorkshire," he was ably assisted in his lecture by Mr. P. Jowett, of Great Horton, who sketched the faults on a blackboard as Mr. Dean dealt with them. The sketches were a treat, and I anticipate a splendid future for Mr Jowett, as he is only quite young, and some of the paintings of bird-life which have come from his brush are really first-class.

Mind the Beak.

In his opening remarks, Mr. Dean said he would deal with the more pronounced faults of the Yorkshire, and try to give an idea as to how these faults could be remedied. The beak, he said, is a very important thing to watch in Yorkshires, as it requires to be in uniformity with the other parts of the body, or it looks out of place altogether. Be careful not to breed them either too long or like a Parrot's beak, too curved on the top; both bad faults.

Try to get the head nice and round, as those we see occasionally with broad flat heads show that there is too much Lancashire blood in them. From the head to the neck is not a great distance, but the matter of having the birds nicely filled in at the neck is a very vital point. Otherwise, they look too snaky, and although a bird may be good in other respects, this is such a glaring fault that it will seem to throw the bird out of shape altogether.

A Troublesome Part of the Bird.

The breast of a bird is a place that has proved troublesome to a host of fanciers, especially when they have got a lot of bred into their stock, this leading to the sharp-pointed chest and the inevitable frill. Although this is a bad fault, I prefer the frill to those that are guilty of throwing loose feathers at the thighs, as this spoils a bird's appearance altogether. Birds that are not in proper condition will sometimes throw these out.

Then there is what is generally called "the cracked-backed bird," a most glaring fault, and one that is noticed as soon as one gets a proper glance at it.

Wing carriage is one of the most essential points about a Yorkshire, and whatever you do see to it that bad wing carriage is remedied as soon as you detect it, for if it creeps into your stock it takes some "shifting."

The Tail.

We next come to the tail, another respect in which many birds fail; in fact, the drop-tail is a perfect nuisance, and I hardly ever breed with birds having such, as they often throw young which possess the same fault. The same remarks apply to the legs. As you are well aware, position is everything in a Yorkshire; without it the bird adopts a stooping attitude, and this is most detrimental, as however good a bird's shape may be, if it has not some nice legs to stand on, it is practically useless from the exhibition standpoint.

Mr. Dean gave some very useful information for the benefit of the new members present on the art of colour-feeding, and also the washing of birds for exhibition, and his remarks were listened to with much satisfaction. The Chairman (Mr. Wm. Cruise) invited questions, and several were put to the lecturer, who answered them readily. Mr. Laycock proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Dean for his kindness in lecturing, coupling with it the name of Mr. Jowett for the excellent sketches; this was seconded by Mr. J. Stobart, and was carried enthusiastically, thus bringing to a close a happy and most instructive evening.—H. HILL, secretary.

The Shows.

BRIDGEND.

Second annual show held at Market Hall, October 20th. Mr. T. H. Melhuish judged the cage bird section, and gave satisfaction to all concerned. The Market Hall is a lovely place for the purpose—splendid head light and plenty of room. Good specimens were seen in most classes, the winners being well up and fined nicely in feather. A few of the back markers were real good ones, but looking a bit moulty. The feature was the Nor. and Yorks., which gave the judge some difficulty in placing. The winning Goldie and Wheatear were lovely specimens.

NOR. CL. ETC. CK. (12): 1, Hughes, splendidly moulded buff, fine size, good quality feather; 2, Castree, mkd. buff, beautiful correct type, shows frosting nicely; 3, Jones, another good cl., plenty of substance; 4, James; vhc, Yeo. HEN (9): 1, E. James, massive yell., scores heavily in head properties, feathered like silk; 2 (no name), big yell., very short and chubby, finished off with lovely jacket; 3 (no name), very close to leaders; vhc, G. T. Jones; hc, Ray; c, Bradshaw. YELL. YORKS. CK.: 1, Wilkins, rare lengthy one, intense col., fine carried wings and tail; 2, 3, Mrs. H. Smith, couple of gems, lovely position, good length, smart; 4, Mrs. E. M. Jelly, full of character, neatly feathered; vhc, Hughes; hc, Garnett and Evans; c, J. Jenkins. BUFF CK. (7): 1, Mrs. Hannah Evans, good cl. buff, plenty of length, nice carriage of wings and tail; 2, Mrs. H. Smith, good straight position, grand wings and tail; 3, T. Williams, another cl., beautifully moulded body. HEN (7): 1, Mrs. Smith, clinking yell., fine length, position and carriage, well feathered; 2, Hughes, good position, highly feathered, neat wings and tail; 3, Beaven, typical specimen, erect carriage; vhc, hc, Harry; c, T. Williams. BRIT. GOLDFINCH (7): 1, Rees, a real nice one, finely cut face, good buttons and bars, bang up in col., wonderful lustre in face; 2, Short, nicely polished, good face col., and extra in rows; 3, Sullivan, good bird, but not quite ready; vhc, hc, Mrs. H. Smith; hc, Ray. A.O.S. BRIT. (7): 1, 3, Castree, good Wheatear and Bramble, former very steady, in lovely col. and feather; 3rd, Bramble, good spangle; 2, Caddy, field-moulted Linnet, good Nor. type; vhc, hc, Morris and John; c, Trigg. SELL. (10/-) (7): 1, Hughes; 2, 4, Jenkins; vhc, G. T. Jones; hc, Beaven.

NORTHAMPTON "Good Intent."

Northampton "Good Intent" O. and F.S. held their 38th annual show in the Corn Exchange on Oct. 20th and 21st, when it proved a great success. The cage bird section contained some really excellent birds, which did great credit to the exhibitors. The management of the show was in the hands of Mr. E. M. Larkman, the hon. sec., who is evidently the right man in the right place. He was ably assisted by a grand committee, consisting of Messrs. G. Barrett (chairman), J. King (vice-chairman), F. Cox (treasurer), T. Butler, J. Smart, J. Mason, and T. Wilson. Messrs. J. H. Roe and G. Hobbs judged.

Owing to some mishap, two folios of our reporter's notes have failed to reach us, consequently we are unable to give the awards and critique upon three or four of the Norwich Plainbead classes until next week.—EDITOR.

NOR. UNFLIG. YELL. (12): 1, hc, Packer and Bott, ticked on head, excels in head and body, rich col. and full of bloom; 2, French, very smart clear, correct type and col., beaten only in substance; 3, Ette, bird we like much, lightly ticked, nicely moulded, some thought might have gone up; 4, Felce, nice quality, good bird; vhc, Russell, very smart, good colour; c, Gilbert. UNFLIG. BUFF (11): 1, 2, Irons, one of the very best, put up by a master hand, in the pink of condition, grand head, nice wings, good col.; 2, another grand headed bird, smooth as a Java, runs winner close; 3, Watson, excellent body properties, but beaten colour; 4, Ette, nicely moulded throughout, good; vhc, Russell, good stamp of bird; hc, Mitchell; c, Packer and Bott. YELL. HEN (7): 1, 3, Irons, grandly made, lovely colour, will improve yet; 3, another good one, close up to winners; 2, Lawrance, wonderful colour for a hen; fine shape, nice quality; 4, Breitenfield, has quality and colour; vhc, Packer and Bott; hc, Ette. BUFF (13): 1, Howe, real Bullfinch type, short and thick, good col., full of quality; 2, hc, Felce, lovely mealed bird, no doubt about it being a hen, full of bloom; 3, 4, Irons, couple of very fine large birds, correct type, rich colour; vhc, Fennell; c, Hall. YELL. NAT. COL. (5): The two best birds in class were passed, as showing too much colour; 1, 2, Holding, smart birds, rather small; 3 (no name), nice colour. BUFF, NAT. COL. (9): Here again, two were "wrong classed" as being a bit too warm; 1, spl, Horne, very nice type, good colour, and quality; 2, Notley, large variegated, correct type and quality; 3, 4, Holding, smart birds, but hardly enough of them for present day type; vhc, Smith; hc, Dickens; c, Hobbs. LISKEARD.

Annual open show in connection with the Liskeard, Devon and Cornwall F.A. was held in the Public Hall and Market House, on October 20th. The Public Hall is an excellent room for a cage bird exhibition. The birds were well staged, and everything was arranged in the best possible manner. Dr. Curtis made a most courteous and obliging secretary, and was ably supported by an energtic committee, consisting of Messrs. Burleigh, Carlyon, Hambley, Nicholls, Toy, Ough, Skinner, Wills, Hicks, Symons, Leaves, Hoskin, Deacon, Hoar. Some of the classes were well filled and contained some good specimens. No doubt there would have been a much larger entry had not the show clashed with Plymouth. The special for best bird in the show was awarded to Messrs. J. and J. Symons, for an exceptionally good clear body dark crest. The Yorkshire, Norwich, and Crests classes contained many excellent specimens, and were a great improvement on last year. Over 70 entries we heard had to be returned on account of being sent too late. Mr. R. B. Tope judged, and the awards were favourably received.

Starlings in a Beehive.

For twenty years, it is said, bees have hived themselves in the wall of a house on Merle Common, Oxted. In the hive was found a Starling's nest and a quantity of egg shells, and the occupier of the house states that a brood of Starlings was hatched there this season. The bees and Starlings entered their abode by the same small aperture, and had lived and worked harmoniously together

Thanks to your grand paper, CAGE BIRDS, I have had a very good season—28 young from two hens.—F. COOPER (Walsall).

Entries for the Gt. Yarmouth Show, writes Mr. J. Shearman, the hon. secretary, will be accepted up to October 25th.

Mr. John Pettigrew will judge the cage bird classes at the Carlisle Show on December 4th, writes a Scottish correspondent.

Entries exceptionally short, writes Mr. C. Parnell, secretary of the Torbay O.S. (Paignton). An trusting fanciers will assist.

Your novel "circulation scheme" is one of the best introduced, and is in the interest of all.—E. HAWTHORN (Llandrindod Wells).

Will secretaries please note that my address is 376, Harrison Terrace, Preston, not 100, Emmanuel Street, writes Mr. W. Sherrington.

Stockport Members' Show will be held on December 2nd and 3rd, and Mr. H. W. Battye will judge, writes Mr. W. Stafford, the secretary.

Exeter and Devon Show report honoured Miss Finch with 2nd Yell. Belgian, whereas it should have been Butts, writes Mr. F. Butts (Barnstaple).

Schedules of the Frome C.B.S. Show, writes Mr. W. Minty, the secretary, will be ready next week, and will be sent out as soon after as possible.

Entries at Barnstaple Show are short, writes Mr. P. Harris, secretary. The committee trust fanciers will rally round and support such an old favourite.

The prospects of our open show are excellent, writes Mr. Havver, hon. secretary, Blaydon-on-Tyne C.B.S.; we have a greater number of specials than ever before.

Exeter and Devon Show report, writes Mr. C. Rowdon (Newton Abbot), gives first and v.h.c. in the Buff Class Norwich to Roden; it should have read Rowdon.

Will secretaries and fanciers please note that my address is 66, Napier Road, and not 61, or 74, Napier Road, writes Mr. J. Gibbons, secretary, Wolverhampton C.B.S.

A new society has, we hear, been formed at Wiston, Lannington, and the members will hold their first show on November 13th. Mr. John Neilson is the hon. secretary.

Morecambe C.B.S. Show on November 30th and December 1st, writes Mr. W. H. Pickles, the hon. secretary, is to be judged by Mr. W. Mundell. It is not under C.B.U. rules.

Your paper, CAGE BIRDS, has helped me a great deal, and I hope it will my friend whom I have given a copy to. I think it deserves all recommendation.—W. SMITH (Woodford).

The number of classes at our show on November 10th, writes Mr. R. Hall, secretary of the Leek and Dis. C.B.S., is 48 and not 21 as given in CAGE BIRDS "Guide to the Shows."

Mr. J. Maddison, of Newcastle, will judge the Mules, British and foreign birds, at our show on October 30th, writes Mr. J. Brown, hon. secretary of the Derwent Valley C.B.S.

We hear that Mr. C. Hunter, a Glasgow fancier, has brought out a new safety padlock, which (when applied to show cages) it is impossible for anyone to unlock unless in the secret.

The address of Mr. Ralph Hutler, writes Mr. J. Barrass, secretary of the Shields C.B.S., should be 7, Suffolk Street, Jarrow, and not 52, York Street, as stated in our schedule in error.

Mr. Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., Mr. A. Silver, and Mr. J. Rohson are the judges for the City and Suburban Annual Show, on November 19th and 20th, writes Mr. V. Wynn, the hon. secretary.

Bolton Show report, in class 26, No. 2, and class 32, No. 7 and 8, reads 2nd and 1st and 3rd respectively Jackson Bros., instead of Johnson Bros., writes Mr. J. W. Johnson (Ormskirk).

Owing to shortage of entries, writes Mr. A. C. Askew, hon. secretary of Clapham Show, on October 27th, we are reluctantly compelled to extend date of closing to the Saturday, October 23rd, mid-day. If exhibitors will forward entries from CAGE BIRDS review of schedule, we will classify.

We hear that Mr. A. Wellings, of Prescot, will judge at Bootle on December 11th, at Earlestown also on December 11th, at Barrow-in-Furness on December 18th, and at Pwllheli on December 27th.

Our entries are extended until October 23rd, writes Mr. H. E. Parrott, secretary of the Weybridge and Dis. F.S. I hope fanciers will give us their support to enable us to again hold a successful show.

Kindly notify exhibitors who have applied for schedules of our show on November 10th and 11th, writes Mr. A. Hitchings, secretary of Swansea C.B.A., that these will be forwarded in the course of a few days.

We have another record—over 800 entries, writes Mr. J. Butterworth, secretary of the Rochdale O.C., just as we go to press. The extra special given by Mr. Wood is for most points in novice classes, not class.

In the Cinnamon classes at the Liverpool O.S. Show, on November 5th and 6th, the special of a case of pipes 16s. 6d., is for most entries, and not for most points, writes Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, the hon. secretary.

We have decided, owing to the continued illness of Mr. D. G. Lewis, writes Mr. F. P. Dymond, of Messrs. Lewis and Dymond (Cardiff), to give up showing for the present, at any rate, and so are disposing of our stock, as advertised in your columns this week.—(ADVT.)

By way of answer to the many who have wished to buy my Burnley winning yellow Norwich, kindly allow me to say I have sold the bird to Mr. T. Sandiford, of Preston, for a good sum.—J. E. DAVIES (Stockport).

Dulwich Show catalogue and report should have credited me with 2nd prize in the evenly-marked yellow Border Fancy class, writes Mr. J. Hocking (Swansea). Also the Exeter report gives my name in error as Hoskins.

Mr. J. Nicholson, of Skipton (late of York), writes: I am sorry to say I have lost my Goldfinch-Bullfinch, first-prize winner at the late Burnley Show. The bird was entered for Darlington, but died two days previous to the show.

There is a printer's error in our schedule, writes Mr. A. S. Treasure, hon. secretary of the Cheltenham C.B.S. The extra second prizes are for competition in classes 46 and 47, and class 48 is guaranteed, and not as stated in schedule.

I am pleased at the novel idea of introducing your paper, CAGE BIRDS, to those who have not read it. I have been a reader of it for some time now, and I think it is a splendid pennyworth to all bird lovers.—RALPH GRANGER (Glasgow).

Coventry Godiva C.B.S. thank all exhibitors for their hearty support in making their show such a grand success, writes Mr. W. H. Bray, the hon. secretary. We had over 50 more exhibits than last year, which shows we are getting better known. We hope all exhibitors' birds arrived home safely.

The October issue of "Bird Notes"—the journal of the Foreign Bird Club—contains many interesting articles, not the least of which are those by Mr. W. Goodfellow (on the Black-winged Lory), and Mr. R. Suggitt (on the Redwing). There are, besides, many notes and many admirable illustrations.

My Bramblefinch which was 1st at Oxford Show, was credited with being my old champion, etc., writes Mr. D. A. S. Longden (Swansea); but it was a 1-year moulted bird. My old champion was 1st at Glasgow recently in a class of 34—the first time for him to be on the show bench this season.

Exhibits for the Manchester Show, October 29th and 30th, should be sent to reach Belle Vue, on Thursday, October 28th, writes Mr. G. W. F. Lythgoe, the hon. secretary. If they are not received until the Friday morning we cannot undertake that same will be judged, owing to the very large entry.

The Greenwich and Deptford C.B.S. have made arrangements with the Wimbledon and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. F. W. Hamer, secretary of the former society, whereby any bird entered at the Wimbledon Show and also at the Greenwich Show will be dispatched in good time for judging at the latter fixture.

Kindly note my change of address, writes Mr. David Anthony, secretary of the Broxburn and Dis. C.B.S., to Main Street, Uphall, Broxburn. The judges for our show are Messrs. W. Sharp, J. Brown, G. Hislop, J. Winter, and W. Rogers. We are providing 55 classes, and not 40 this year.

At Bo'ness Show, held November 6th, the schedule (now ready) provides a splendid classification, writes Mr. McGillivray, the secretary, with all specialist judges. This year it is an entirely cage bird show, so there will be more light in the hall, as there will be no pens to darken the window. So will fanciers please rally round us this time.

The members of the Broughty Ferry C.B.S. take this opportunity of thanking the many exhibitors for their support, which made their show the success it was. We also thank you for the able report in CAGE BIRDS, also for the publicity given to any report of club meetings that may from time to time be sent you.—R. WHITTON, secretary of the Broughty Ferry C.B.S.

Poultry Keepers! Don't miss this week's

"POULTRY WORLD."

It contains a lovely coloured plate. All Bookstalls and Newsagents.

There is a mistake in the Border Fancy Classes in the Gloucester schedule, writes Mr. M. Jamieson, secretary of the Border Fancy C.C. Class 30 should read: Clear or ticked buff cock; Class 31 should read: Clear or ticked buff hen.

That well-known Scottish breeder and exhibitor, Mr. John McLay, of Kirkintilloch, owing to business reasons, is having to dispose of his noted stud of Crests and Norwich Plainheads (all his winners included), which are advertised this week.

My committee, writes Mr. J. R. Hyland, hon. secretary of the Yorkshire C.C., of Ireland, are of opinion that our show this year will be better than ever, and that the special prizes are more valuable than in any previous year, thanks to the donors.

Through pressure of business, write Messrs. Wilson and Atkinson, we have been compelled to resign the secretaryship of the Guisborough and Dis. "Priory" C.B.S., which has kindly been taken over by Mr. R. Mayes, 58, Bolckow Row, Guisborough, Yorks.

The Runcorn C.B.S., writes Mr. T. P. Baxter, the hon. secretary, will hold a members' show on December 11th, when Mr. H. Abbott will judge, and a cordial invitation is given to those fanciers who reside within the 14 miles radius to become members.

I have taken CAGE BIRDS from its birth, and have not only continued it ever since, but have recommended it to many in this district who had not seen it before. I always tell all my birdy friends it is the paper that just suits us.—SAMUEL HONEY (West Looe).

Owing to our autumn show clashing with another, writes Mr. H. W. Cook, hon. secretary of the Poplar and Dis. C.B.S., we have had to alter the date, and the show will now be held on December 11th; judge, Mr. C. A. House. Will members kindly note?

In looking over the "Guide to the Shows" in CAGE BIRDS, I was glad to see our show included there. I am secretary, however, and my address, 4, Nicholson Place, Forres. We have 36 classes, and our judge is Mr. Strachan (Aberdeen).—WM. CUMMING, hon. secretary.

The Harrogate C.B.S. have secured the large Lecture Hall in the Y.M.C.A. buildings for their show on December 4th, writes Mr. G. H. Barnwell, the secretary. The room is situated two minutes' walk from the station (over the Drug Stores), and is a most suitable one for a cage bird show.

Will intending exhibitors at the Hucknall Torkard Show on October 29th and 30th, writes Mr. E. Mellors, kindly note that I am the secretary, and not Mr. H. Marshall as inadvertently stated in CAGE BIRDS "Guide to the Shows," and my address is 59, Annesley Road, Hucknall Torkard.

At the recent dairy show, one of the most notable stands was that of Liverine, Limited (Grimsby), and among their numerous exhibits for cage birds was a unique display of their noted "Sing Song," a Canary mixture composed of seeds of the very best quality. This, we were informed, is rapidly gaining the confidence of well-known fanciers, while their food for Soft-bills seemed to be equally popular.

In answer to the "Twittering" of Mr. Irwin, the secretary of Harrington Show, I may still say we have the only show for cage birds only in the North, on October 27th and 28th, writes Mr. John C. Bell, the secretary of Border City (Carlisle) O.S. I should also like to say that the Border City management would be pleased to forward any birds direct on to the Manchester Show, if fanciers enclosed P.O. for carriage and the labels for their cases.

Only specials Nos. 22 to 27 inclusive are confined to the members of the Southern N.P.C., writes Mr. A. C. Askew, hon. secretary of the Clapham and Dis. C.B.A. The bold type between specials Nos. 21 and 22 is a printer's error. Mr. Frostick's Dartford warblers will be exhibited for the first time on record at the Clapham Show, along with Mr. Vale's red-backed Shrike, which has not been seen on the show bench for a number of years.

Though the Crested Canary Club are not guaranteeing their classes, re Mr. Ley's scheme this year, writes Mr. T. S. Moore, hon. secretary of the Cambridge and Cambs. C.B.S., we are determined to be progressive, and so give ten classes, and trust we shall get the support we warrant. Also we ask the Border men to rally round us; we are giving seven classes, and are trying our hardest to make the wee bird popular in the eastern counties.

A very beautiful coloured plate of Mr. H. Goodchild's forms the frontispiece to the October number of the "Avicultural Magazine." Levaillant's Barbet is the subject of the plate, and some notes concerning the species are contributed by Major B. R. Horsbrugh. The Blue-breasted Waxbill, the White-crested Touraco, the Blue-winged Grass Parrakeet, and the Redpoll are also dealt with by various writers. This issue completes Vol. VII. of the new series.

In your "Guide to the Shows" issued on October 9th, which I find most useful for reference, writes Mr. H. Smith, hon. secretary of the Wimbledon and Dis. C.B.S., I note you give Wimbledon as a one-day show. It should be November 16th and 17th, and the "approx number of classes" should be 71. Schedules are in the printer's hands, and will be issued as early as possible next week. I have had applications for them from all parts. I am pleased to say that up to the present the prospects for the show are rosy.

Some Points about the Hawfinch.

By S. A. SANDY.

A well-known and practical fancier writes an interesting article around this week's coloured plate of our largest British seed-eating bird.

The Hawfinch, the largest of our British Finches, is most easily catered for, and docile in captivity, but is one of the shyest, if not actually the shyest, in its wild state, and for that reason frequently escapes detection. That it has become very popular with fanciers and birdkeepers of late years there can be no doubt, and very rightly so, for while it well deserves the title of a "cage-duster" when fresh caught, it soon gets tame and appreciates any tit-bits that may be given it by its owner. A hand-reared Hawfinch is a delightful bird, and runs that popular favourite, the Bullfinch, very close for tameness.

It is said to be still somewhat local in its distribution, but is stated by the best authorities to have bred in every county in England with the exception of Cornwall, and to be comparatively plentiful in the home counties, especially Kent and Surrey. In Scotland and Ireland it is of rare occurrence, while in Wales it is anything but common.

Nesting of the Species.

The Hawfinch begins nesting towards the end of April, when it builds in low bushy trees, such as the hawthorn, holly, or some similar tree. The nest is a rather flat structure, composed of small twigs mixed with lichens, and is lined with fine roots and hair. The hen usually lays four eggs of a pale bluish-green colour, spotted and streaked with greyish brown. When the young are hatched they are fed largely upon caterpillars and other insects, but their food otherwise consists very largely of the kernels of cherry stones, when obtainable, and nuts, berries and seeds.

Young Hawfinches are usually on the wing when the garden peas are in season, and unless the peas are well protected a brood of ravenous young Hawfinches, accompanied by their parents, will work great havoc among the rows of peas, of which they are passionately fond. Many of the birds get entangled with the protecting nets, and unless the gardener happens to be a bird lover—which many are not—I am afraid they meet an untimely end, as does the Bullfinch earlier in the Spring when his fondness for young buds often brings his career to a full stop.

Hand-rearing Young Birds.

Hand-rearing young Hawfinches is by no means a difficult task if the birds are taken from the nest when about ten days old. They should then be fed upon a mixture of soaked rape seed and hard-boiled egg, with a little dust of sweet biscuit ground fine. They should be fed every two hours from early morning, and as the bill is of large proportions, the feeding is rather easier than in the case of a Jenny Wren or other small bird.

As the youngsters get on and feed themselves they should be supplied with plenty of soaked seed, crushed hemp, and green food of almost any description that may be at hand. When in the nest feather it is not the easiest matter to select the cocks. Either sex makes a delightful pet, but usually run a shade smaller than wild caught specimens.

One has only to glance at a Hawfinch's bill to see that he can well take care of himself, and also be capable of causing great havoc among other birds he may come in contact with if so disposed. Personally, I have kept these birds in my aviary with other mixed birds, Goldfinches and Redpolls included, and so far have had no cause to complain of their behaviour towards the other occupants.

Keeping Up to "Concert Pitch."

I prefer my birds to be in an outdoor aviary; but this is not always advisable, if the birds are kept for exhibition, where tameness plays such an important part. I consider the Hawfinch a rather heavy feeder, and therefore the aviary has a great advantage over the cage, as the bird is enabled to get plenty of exercise and fresh air, and, what is most important of all if it is to be kept in a condition as perfect as in its wild state, the access to a large bath of fresh water to bathe in every day. I think there is nothing like fresh air and plenty of bathing to keep a bird up to concert pitch, as it were. For the bath in an aviary I have yet to find some vessel more suitable than a flower-pot saucer nine or ten inches across and about a couple of inches deep. These I have used for many years, and want nothing better for the purpose.

If, however, an aviary is not possible, a cage, say, 2ft. long by 10in. deep and 16in. high, of the box pattern, will be very suitable. The front (removeable) should be 1in. gauge, and I prefer inside food and water vessels, but this, of course, is a matter of fancy.

Assuming, however, that our bird is newly caught, I should place him in a cage of smaller proportions, and only about a foot high, and use a canvas inner top for a while.

The Food Question.

On the question of food, many fanciers seem to rely upon sunflower seed almost entirely, but this, I think, is a great mistake, and one that I must admit having some years back fallen into. My own experience is that the bird's liver soon gets out of order if fed on sunflower alone, and this can easily be detected, as the excreta will be of a greenish colour; the feathers will puff out, and the bird will get quite out of condition. I prefer to use mixed seed—Canary three parts, and hemp, rape, and linseed in equal proportions, one part, together with hawthorn berries, beechmast, nuts, cracked walnuts, pea nuts, apple, and such like. I also give a little insectivorous food occasionally, and daily during the moult, and as a tit-bit a mealworm or two. Of the latter Hawfinches are exceedingly fond, and these are very useful when taming a freshly-caught specimen.

Exhibition Birds.

As exhibition birds the Hawfinches are very popular both with fanciers and the judges, and a tip-top specimen is almost sure to be in the first three, and most likely secure the coveted place in the class "1st and special." The beautiful coloured plate accompanying this issue of CAGE BIRDS will convey to the reader what an exhibition Hawfinch looks like, and what a striking bird he is. One of the chief points in present-day judging seems to be size, and as it is not often that one can get a few dozen of these birds to select from, a medium-sized specimen more often has to suffice; but care should be taken to select a male bird with a massive head, clear cap, and large bib, as much after the shape of a "V" as possible, and clear cut, and with the grey band well defined and not running into the cap or back feathers, the white on the secondaries as pure as possible.

Whilst on the matter of plumage, it might be well to point out a peculiarity attaching to these birds, namely, that the flights from the fifth inwards are jagged, rather giving the impression that the bird had bitten the tips of its flights. The hen is similarly marked, except that the head is much paler, and the whites in the flights are more dingy. Now that there are classes for hen seed-eaters at many of the shows, from an exhibitor's point of view a hen of this species is a very useful bird to keep, and should certainly be included in the stock. I am afraid some of the larger specimens that have been exhibited of late years would find a grave difficulty in proving their claim to be called British, but, apart from the size, there is little else to cause suspicion.

As regards a suitable cage for exhibiting either sex, I prefer a cage enamelled dark green inside, say, 14ins. long, 12ins. high, and 8ins. deep, with inch gauge front, and a food drawer on the right side. Care must also be taken to see that the water hole is large enough to enable the bird to get its head through easily. The perches should be ¾in. thick, so that the bird may get a firm grip when travelling.

One task the exhibitor of a Hawfinch will find easier said than done, and that is giving his bird a tubbing. The first time I tried it I felt pretty confident that if I got our friend's head between my thumb and forefinger I could give him a tubbing quite easily; but before I had got far on with the lathering I had received some sharp bites, and found it was not so easy as I expected, for it is then that he holds on to the skin for all he is worth. Nevertheless, it is an operation that has to be got through once or twice in the show season if the bird is to win in keen competition.

I must not conclude without a few words on colour feeding, for I find it is as necessary to feed Hawfinches, both male and female, for exhibition, as it is a Yellowhammer or other bright plumaged birds. I give the cold, sweet, red feed mixed with a good insectivorous bird food daily during the moult. I find the colour of the cap, breast and back is much improved, and I am satisfied that I get a better finish upon this and most birds, also a more silky texture in the plumage, by colour-feeding. I know at least one of our leading exhibitors of the present day who will disagree with me on this point, and I must admit that the condition of his birds, moulted without colour feed, is a very strong argument in favour of non-colour feeding. Still, I give my own opinion for what it is worth, based upon my own experience, and also upon the experience of leading exhibitors who are in favour of colour-feeding.

In conclusion, I hope some of the readers of CAGE BIRDS who have not yet kept the Hawfinch, will try their hand with one, and I am sure if they treat it as I have described they will find it an interesting pet, and one that with ordinary luck will live cheerfully in captivity for a considerable period.

PROUD OWNERS OF PRIZE-WINNERS.

The Lizard Canary 40 Years Ago and Now.

By LEVI BUTTERWORTH.

Some personal recollections of striking changes in the Lizard Canary Fancy, with a description of the writer's methods of breeding and feeding, etc., this curious member of the Canary family.

So much has been written about the Lizard Canary that it appears almost impossible to write anything fresh, but I will try to record a few of my recollections of the Lizard Canary Fancy. My experience in the breeding of the variety goes back over the last 40 years, but I will endeavour to keep from trodden ground as much as possible.

The Lemon Jonque Lizard.

When I first joined the ranks of the Canary Fancy, a certain strain of Lizards was very plentiful in and around Rochdale; this Lizard was known as the Lemon Jonque, on account of the pale yellow cap, somewhat the colour of a lemon, and in its nest feathers the bird had a back full of straight, narrow rowing. After the first moult the colour of the cap, and the edges of the small feathers were of the same pale yellow colour. The spangle being not nearly so distinct as that of the orange-coloured variety, breeders saw that it stood no chance on the show bench, and so refused to breed with it. Consequently, in a few years' time, the strain died out.

About the same time there was another strain, known as the flat, or hollow-backed Lizard. This bird had largo, distinct spangling, or moons, as we called them, distributed all over the back, and not in straight rows, as in the Lizards of to-day. This class of bird had very often a parting of the feathers (or a split down the centre of the back), and very rarely got in the money at any show. The variety gradually became scarcer, until it has now almost died out, like the Lemon Jonque.

Buying Birds by Candle light.

There were a few fanciers at one time (and probably are some to-day) who preferred to buy their stock after the birds had gone to roost, and I have known such people regret buying this class of bird by candle-light, for after the bird has gone to roost it looks much better spangled than the round-backed variety. Personally, I prefer buying birds in the broad daylight, and the lighter the day, the better. I know of only one advantage in buying birds at night, and that is that after the birds have been to roost a couple of hours, and you go into the bird room by candle light, if there are any wheezing birds in the room, that is the time to find them.

The Deterioration of the Variety.

I mention these two strains because probably many of the present-day fanciers have never seen them. But in those early days, the round-backed variety were more plentiful than the other two strains. I have been asked in private what was my opinion as regards the merits of the winning birds of 40 years ago and those of the winning birds of to-day. I will give my answer here. I believe the best birds of to-day are rather larger, especially the golds, than formerly, but it is my honest opinion that the winning birds of 40 years ago were equally as well spangled, and I am certain they were darker in beak, legs, and claws than are the winning birds of to-day.

Taking all the properties together, I fail to see any improvement in the variety, and, in fact, I consider the Lizard has rather deteriorated, for even 30 years ago a Lizard, no matter what other good properties it possessed, if it was not evenly eye-lashed (that is, had a narrow, dark streak of feathers over each eye), it was not considered a good show bird; a narrow eyelash being supposed to add to the bird's beauty. What do we see to-day at our leading shows? Birds without the slightest trace of an eyelash, and even white or bald eyed birds take the premier honours. At one show I visited last season, I saw a white, or bald-eyed bird with three first-prize cards on its cage; which would have been impossible 30 years ago, and ought to be impossible to-day, for there is nothing more unsightly than a bald-eyed Lizard.

I am not one of those who believe that as it was in the beginning, it is now, and ever shall be. No, I believe in improving a bird where it can be improved, but to interfere with a bird's beauty, I consider to be "an improvement in the wrong direction."

The Bulldog-headed Lizard.

Although so long a time back I can well remember how, about 20 years ago (speaking in round numbers), a cry came from a neighbouring town to the effect that a certain fancier had got Lizards in the nests with heads like bulldogs, and Lancashires as big as Brahma chickens. So on the following Sunday morning, along with a fancier friend, I went to look at these wonderful birds. But I must say we were disappointed. The Lizards had heads no larger than that of an ordinary Lizard. They were simply over-capped, the caps coming close to the eye on both sides, and running down into the neck. As I left the room I can truly say I did not envy him his treasures. But the bulldog head idea appeared to take on with a large number of fanciers, as well as with some judges. Lizards, it was said, must have heads like bulldogs. So breeders began to pair broad capped birds together, regardless of eyelash; which is the chief cause of there being so many white, or bald-eyed birds to-day, for the white below the eye is simply an extension of the cap, and when once got hold of, is not so easily got rid of.

If you have a bird with a white eye, but with the other properties extra good, and you wish to keep it, it is best to pair it with a bird that is heavily eye-lashed, or with an old bird that breeds young that are heavily eye-lashed. A great change has come over the bird in regard to the eyelash. Twenty years ago 10 points were allowed for the eyelash, which many fanciers thought too small; now the Lancashire and Lizard F.A. only allow 5 points, so that the eyelash has almost gone out of consideration.

How Lizards were Exhibited.

When I first began to exhibit birds, and for many years afterwards, Lizards were shown in the open wire Lancashire show cage. At that time All-England shows were few and far between, and it was only when All-England shows became more plentiful that the Lizard was shown in the box cage.

I remember that the first time I saw one shown in a box cage was at an All-England show held, I believe, at Manchester, though I am not quite sure. I know there was much comment about it. Many fanciers were dead against it. I liked it, if only for the bird's sake; they travelled more comfortably, and were less liable to feel any possible draught in the show room. The birds are also much steadier in the box cage, and therefore better to judge. The Lizard is naturally an active bird, and when shown in the open wire cage, unless carefully trained, is always on the move, hopping from the top perch to the bottom one, and back again, clinging to the wires on the sides of the cage, and then to the top, placing itself in all positions except the right one. Yet, even to-day, there are a few people who say the Lizard ought to be shown in the open wire cage.

As the All-England shows became more popular, the box cage became more popular too, and to-day no one thinks of showing a Lizard in an open wire cage.

The Writer's Method of Breeding and Feeding.

I will now give a brief description of the way in which I breed my Lizards. As regards pairing the birds, I may say I have tried the different shades of colour, but I have had best results by pairing in the following way: A deep-coloured gold cock bird to a very light-coloured silver hen. By light-coloured, I do not mean cloudy; I mean that the light fringes on the feathers should be very white, or silvery. Or, I pair a light silver cock to a very dark gold hen. But in both cases the spangle should be as distinct, and as large, as possible.

During the winter months I give all my hens a few groats at least twice a week, to get them used to the food. About the beginning of February I begin to give egg food twice a week, and I also give the cocks a little hemp and inga seed, in addition to the egg food. At the beginning of March I increase the hemp and inga seed. I now give the hens also just a little hemp and inga if the birds appear to be going on all right. About the 3rd or 4th week in March, I place each hen in a separate cage containing a nest-box and building material. By adopting this plan, and by watching the hens, you will be able to see which hens are the most forward, and which to pair first. I may as well state here that I have always followed the plan of running one cock with two hens. If the birds appear to be in breeding condition, the last week in March or the beginning of April, I then pair up the the likeliest.

For building material I use what we call fog, which is a tough kind of dried grass that grows on old hedges and waste land. It is easy to tell by its white appearance. After the birds have built their nest with the fog, I place a thistle head in the wires of the cage. The birds pluck out the down and line their nest with it.

A Difference in Taste.

Formerly I used to take the first two eggs out of the nest as soon as they were laid, and I put them back when the hen laid her third egg; but the last three seasons I allowed all the eggs to remain in the nest for the first round, and I have had no cause to regret doing so. Occasionally, I have had hens that have laid their eggs and then refused to sit, and I thought that by allowing the eggs to stay in the nest it might induce the hen to take to the nest. When a hen has laid her eggs and begun to sit I never disturb her until she has been sitting eight days; then I make certain whether the eggs are fertile or not. Canaries, like human beings, differ in tastes, so that when the young appear I let the hen have a choice of food; besides the white seed in the hopper I put egg food in the egg drawer. I also put two tins under the door, one containing groats, the other hemp and summer rape. All my cages have sliding doors. I also give green food, and my favourite bird salad is dandelion. I have known many nests of young Canaries that have been almost entirely reared on groats, and have been as fat as butter in the nest. But birds reared on groats are generally pale in colour. I don't mind that, however, as long as they are strong and healthy; the colour can be remedied during the moult.

The Weaning Process.

Now, as to the weaning process. The first time I see the young ones on the nest box side, which generally takes place when the young are about three weeks and one or two days old, I take the nest box out of the cage and leave the young flying about the cage with the hen until the following morning, when I rise at the break of day and prepare the egg food. Having done so, I go into the bird room, place a chair in front of the window; then I put the weaning cage on the chair.

If you saw that weaning cage you would come to the conclusion that it had been made in pre-historic times, with its bent and broken wires and mouse-eaten boards. And yet I have a certain affection for that old cage; I have weaned hundreds upon hundreds of birds in it; in fact, have weaned all the birds I have bred for the last 30 years in it. Moreover, during the show season it does duty as a drying cage, and I have dried hundreds of birds therein. So you see that if the cage is not as handsome as its neighbours, it is quite as useful.

I place the cage on the chair in the best possible light; then I put a small saucer containing egg food on the cage bottom in the centre; I then scatter egg food on the cage bottom on each side the saucer, and put egg food in the ordinary egg drawer; so that in whatever part of the cage the birds may be, they can see the egg food. After this, no matter how good the birds may be, I can leave them without the least anxiety. I have not lost a single bird in the weaning process since I began treating them in this way.

When the young have been in the cage one day, I remove them to another clean one, also in a light place, and let them stay all together for about two days; then if any of them are likely to be fit for the show bench, I put them in separate cages. After the birds are weaned, besides the egg food, I give them crushed hemp seed and a milk sop once a week until they begin to eat Canary seed, when I discontinue the hemp and gradually reduce the egg food, until I feel satisfied the birds can do without it.

In regard to the moulting of the birds in the old days, we used to give them as much green food and marigold flowers as they would eat, with saffron water to drink, and anything we thought would improve the colour of the birds; and if the birds did not come up to expectations, most fanciers did not hesitate to dip the rag in the shilling bottle and apply it to the birds; but that was long before cayenne feeding became known. Things are different to-day. You can feed the bird better than you can paint it, and purchase the correct article ready for use. When cayenne feeding first became known, we used nothing but hot pepper, but now I use four ounces of hot pepper to one pound of tasteless, and I am very well satisfied with the result.

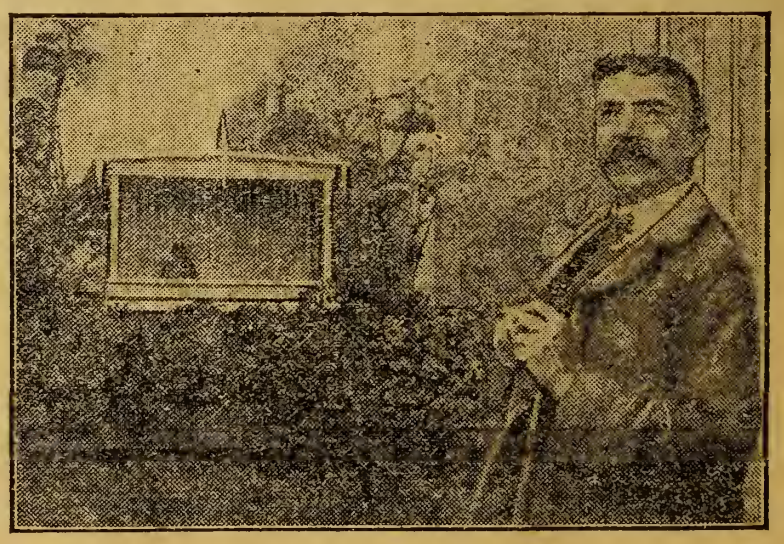
I believe it will recall pleasant memories to many of your readers if I mention the names of a few old Lizard breeders, many of whom were veterans in the Fancy when I first joined the ranks, while some of them joined us a few years later; and all of them I knew personally. There were Messrs. T. Hopkins, R. and J. Chadwick, A. Hamer, T. Smethurst, P. and J. Lord, W. Lowe, B. Bardsley, E. Fitton, E. Butterworth, A. Whitworth, B. Harrison, L. Shaw, W. Mutch, R. Barrass, N. France, E. Shaw, J. Fielding, B. Turner, J. Allen, G. Haworth, E. Crossley, J. Schofield, J. Tattersall, J. Taylor, J. Bentley, J. Shackleton, J. Sandiford, Jno. Ogden, J. Mills, J. Smith, J. Jackson, J. and T. Garner, J. Hardman, J. Collinge, R. Wood, J. Lord, J. Gledhill, C. Fish, Y. Ashworth, J. Barker, N. Firth, and others I do not think of at the present moment. A great many of the above-named have years ago "shuffled off this mortal coil," while many are still with us; and long may they remain.

How I House and Feed My Skylark.



By E. N. SMITH.

As a result of my letter in CAGE BIRDS of September 11th, I have had inquiries from Lark fanciers from all over England and Wales, so I decided to send you a photograph to answer one and all. Remember, fanciers, the Lark is a noble and handsome bird, so provide him with a handsome cage—one that will be an object of beauty in your home. There is nothing that displeases a wife so much as an unsightly cage. It disarranges her temper, so to speak, and you will have something to go on with until you remedy the evil thereof.

I have tried every known style of cage, and as none gave satisfaction I decided to design one myself. The photo of it I have enclosed. It is your duty to provide the Lark with a condition of life as near natural as possible. Leave nothing undone to attain that end. Let his comfort and wants occupy the foremost place in your thoughts, and let his cage be commodious and comfortable, so that he can expand his wings without breaking his feathers.

The particulars of my cage are as follows:—Back board, 15½ins. by 12ins.; top board, 18½ins. by 10½ins.; four corner supports, 11ins. by ¼in. square; top front rail, 14¾ins. by 1½ins. by ¼in.; top end rail, 8ins. by 1½ins. by ½in.; bottom front rail, 14¾ins. by 1in. by ¼in.; bottom end rail, 8ins. by 1½ins. by ¼in.; wires, 5.32; drillholes, ⅝in. apart.

Encase the frame in a fancy moulding, and use ornaments to your liking. Plane the top frame to give ¼in. fall from back to front, and to each end. Give three coats of white enamel inside and out, and also the wires. I had my wires electro-plated, however. Fit the door at each end 7½ins. square, with frame ½in. square. You will then have a clear wire front 14½ins. by 7½ins. Ends 7ins. by 6½ins. That will enable you to run the bird through into another cage while you thoroughly clean and wash its cage inside and out. There is nothing a Lark dislikes so much as being handled. It spoils his feathers, too, and puts him off song, and you might easily break a leg.

Mr. Smith, his Skylark, and the cage he favours for this bird and describes in his accompanying notes.

I would say that the food I like as a stock food is Trower's "Cecto" and Fox's "Insectivorous Food" in combination. These two, well mixed with some of Fox's "Egg and Biscuit," make my favourite food.

There are a thousand and one live insects you can get. A few "specials" I will name:- Earwigs, wire worms, and their grubs, spiders, small beetles, etc. Don't forget the smooth caterpillars; they are a wonderful tonic, and a preventative of inflammation of the vent, keeping the bowels regular, too.

I don't mind giving a great secret away. Give a good pinch of ground linseed in stock food once a week; it is a splendid pick-me-up, and gives a grand gloss to the feathers. Under these conditions, my bird lives and continues to sing every day. Teach him to know you love him, and he will repay you tenfold by his glorious song, and you will never regret the time, trouble, and small expense involved.

THE HAWFINCH. Our largest British Seed-eater.

FEMALE. MALE.

From the Field to the Show Bench.

Part 1: The Making of an Outdoor Birdroom.

—— By H. J. HAWES. ——

In the first of this series of articles is fully explained, for the purposes of Amateurs especially, the method by which an outdoor birdroom may be constructed to the best advantage and at a nominal cost.

IN introducing my subject to readers of CAGE BIRDS, I would ask the indulgence of the more advanced fanciers, for this article is intended chiefly for the benefit of the "raw recruit" to the Fancy and the show-bench.

As I have previously, in a lecture given before the Dulwich and Peckham O.S., and published in CAGE BIRDS recently, dealt with the catching of birds, I should like to take one through the next important item, viz., the housing of them, and to show how to do so in a way beneficial to the bird's health and well-being, and so as to show a slight return at the conclusion of the season with judicious management.

The Suitable Bird-house.

Knowing from experience that the ordinary bird fancier is not over blessed with wealth in the building and construction of this outdoor bird-room for Britishers (or for the matter of that Canaries, according to one's taste), I have sought to bring within the reach of the average working-man fancier a house which is in every way suitable.

The points aimed at are: First, that the building shall be substantial, and possess that great and important feature—light in abundance. I also pay attention to that vital point in hygiene, viz., ventilation. Further, I propose adding to the bird-room a heating device—an essential thing when the mercury falls to freezing point, and Nightingales, Long-tailed Tits, and other delicate birds are being kept. Many a grand bird has perished through either the absence of a little artificial heat or the presence of a cheap, smoky lamp. The latter is often hung up to keep out the frost, when one morning a terrible thing meets one's eyes (it met mine whilst visiting a friend's house a year or so back)—every bird is asphyxiated. About £6 worth of birds were lost through the presence of a shilling hanging lamp, in the case to which I refer.

The means by which the room will be heated will be easily followed in the accompanying drawings, and as the apparatus stands in my room I can safely say the total cost will not exceed 15s. This price covers the retail cost, but if you happen to have a friend "in the line," his business card will save you 33 per cent.

I shall also deal with the matter of having a fountain in the bird-room, driven by wind power. This is for the especial benefit of the fancier who takes a whole-hearted interest in his birds and rooms, and does not mind the extra trouble, the commercial and financial side of bird-keeping not having any influence upon him.

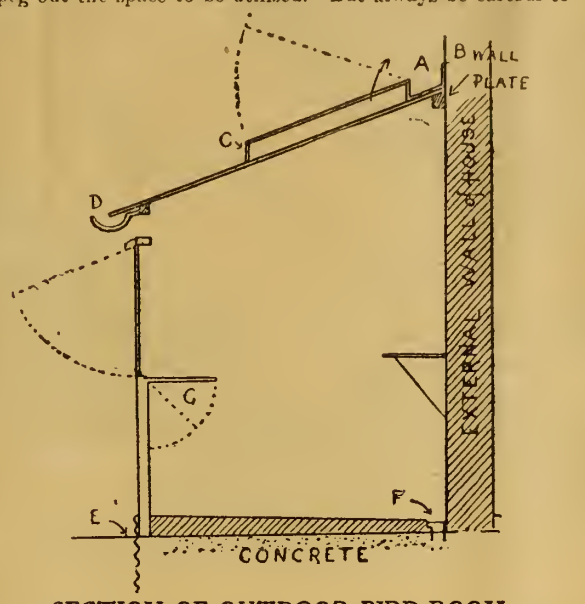
I shall, too, deal with the selection of some of the different species of birds in accordance with my own personal ideals. If my ideals clash with those of other fanciers, then I trust the few remarks I make will not tend to strain any good feeling that exists. To make myself quite clear, I may say here that there may be better methods of achieving the ends in view, but seeing that I have put most of the ideas mentioned to a practical test, and that they are working in every way satisfactorily, I claim that if carried out in the proper way they will work to the satisfaction of anyone who cares to follow my well-meant advice.

An Outdoor Room for £3.

Being a great believer in the keeping out of doors of British birds, both Hardbills and Softbills, I will take as my first subject an outdoor bird-room, cost not to exceed £3, including heating apparatus.

For this amount you can build a house measuring 9ft. in length, by 5ft. 6ins. wide, and varying from 8ft. 6ins. to 6ft. in height. This, of course, refers to a lean-to house, as this is the least expensive to build, one of the external walls of your living house acting as one of those to your bird-room. Such houses, too, are more generally in vogue than small detached houses. Again, the latter kind would cost twice as much as a lean-to house, and if made to the same dimensions, viz., 9ft. by 5ft. 6ins. by 6ft. to 8ft. 6ins., would not have the same holding capacity.

What is Required.



The first and most important thing is to know what one wants before starting to build. Draw up some rough plan if you can of the kind of house you would like, and measure up and find the cost of same. Then, if all things answer, go ahead with a good heart. Stick to your task until your house is finished. That is my advice, for I know from personal observation that if you start building a bird-room, cycle shed, or what not, immediately the interest is relaxed, if only for a single night, that shed is "muddled" at for many a week longer than it need be.

We will assume the size you wish to build your bird-room is 8ft. 6ins. long by 5ft. 6ins. wide by 6ft. to 8ft. high. Having measured our uprights, wall plates, door jambs, sills, match-boarding, etc., we find that we require: 120ft. of scantling 3ins. by 2ins., 140 square feet of match-boarding, 50 square feet of rough boards for roof, 60 feet of slate battening, three pairs of butt hinges, 15 square feet of glass, 8 feet of guttering, one outlet, one 6ins. set off, one length of 2in. rainwater pipe (3ft.), one "shoe" for same, two pairs of gutter brackets, two dozen screws, sash frames for windows, frame for skylight, felt, cement and sand for concrete, one sheet of corrugated iron, one piece of lead sheet 9ft. by 12ins., one piece of zinc, nails, hinges for door, one door fitted with perforated zinc in two top panels, one lock for same, one pair of T-hinges for folding shelf, three brackets for shelf, tar, putty, netting, staples, paint, casement fittings window fasteners, and materials for heating apparatus. Of course, such things as the skylight, window frames, and door can be obtained at a builder's yard second-hand.

Having roughly estimated the cost, and having procured all the necessary materials we think will be required, we are now on the way towards making a start, without having occasionally that vexing thought that the shops are shut up, and we cannot procure so and so "until to-morrow."

The Building Process.

We will now set about our pleasurable task of building and erecting. Procure a ball of string and some pegs and peg out the space to be utilised. But always be careful to ask the wife's opinion of the space required by her for drying room and walking space in the garden.

SECTION OF OUTDOOR BIRD-ROOM.

Sketch 1.—A: The position of the skylight. B: Lead or zinc "flashing" to keep out the rain. C: Copper "apron" to make skylight rain-proof. D: Rain-water gutter. E: Sheet of corrugated iron to keep out vermin. F: Shows the fall of the floor to drain outlet at back in a corner. G: Collapsible shelf under window.

The next thing to do is to go to the bundle of 3in. by 2in. scantling, and select from this three pieces—one piece to form the front base of building and the other two the end bases. These form the foundation frame, or plate which are put together by cutting half way through the 2in. measurement, and 3ins. down the timber, so that when they are put into one another they are of the uniform measurement, viz., 3ins. by 2ins.

The two end pieces I allowed to be 4ins. longer than my building was to be wide, so that, after cutting away a brick from the external wall (without giving notice to the landlord), my timber could be run into the wall 4ins., and after being wedged up it was made good with cement and sand. This gives one a good fixing (or hold), and makes a substantial job.

Now that our frame has been levelled up and bricks put under the two corners and one in the centre (and previously bedded on cement), we mark out by measurement the mortices which have to take the tenons of our corner uprights, which, in my case, I had already prepared by morticing an aperture measuring 1in. wide and 1½ins. long, as that is what my tenons measured after being cut through.

I also again halved the top of the upright 1in. by 3ins. to receive my top plate. Underneath this halving we have another mortice the same as previously mentioned. This is to receive the rail which is to carry our sashes, and on to which I shall screw my regulating ventilation shutters (an addition which I think is original, and very essential).

Having prepared all these aforementioned sections, one must proceed to put them in their respective positions. Having previously plugged the wall (with wooden plugs) and nailed my two uprights to the external wall, and planted my wall plate in position (fastening that to the wall as shown in drawing No. 1), I proceeded to get my carcass of building into something like ship-shape.

I get my plumb rule and level into action. The plumb rule is a piece of board usually 3½in. wide by 5ft. long, with an egg-shaped hole cut about 3ins. from the bottom, with a centre line struck down, and with three saw cuts made in the top of the board. A "plumb bob" of lead is attached to a line (string), which is slipped into the centre saw-cut, and then held in position by passing a cord through each of the other slots. When this rule is put against anything, if that thing be not upright, the lead bob will swing in the opposite direction to which your timber must be drawn to bring it into an upright position.

The Story of "Robert Orange."

By Mrs. Richardson-Griffiths.

A pleasantly written recital of the deeds of a favourite Norwich Plainhead, now, unhappily deceased.

He arrived from Norwich none the worse for his long journey, and as soon as I saw him I gave him the name of "Robert Orange." He was exactly the colour of a ripe blood orange, and was, I think, the first colour-fed bird I had seen. Dear little Robert! An ordinary Norwich Canary, costing a quite ordinary price, he possessed a strongly marked character and a heart of gold. I have sons and grandsons of his now, but there is not one (good birds though they are) for which I feel quite the same affection

His first wife was somewhat delicate, and my initial attempt at Canary breeding ended disastrously. Two little birds were hatched on St. Swithin's Day, and my joy and pride were almost equal to Robert's. But, alas for our hopes! when they were about three or four days old, to my great sorrow, she died. Robert seemed very disconsolate; he fed the babies, but they missed the warmth of their mother, and very soon they followed her.

A Battle and a Tragedy.

I possessed another Norwich cock which, from some fancied resemblance to that gallant officer, we named "Buller." Buller was of a very different disposition to Robert, being more lethargic in character. From the first they were rivals, and it was very amusing to see their jealousy. Buller's rightful mate, whose name was "Whiteley," fell deeply in love with the dashing Robert, and I allowed them to set up housekeeping together. After Whiteley (a beautiful little Norwich hen) began to sit, I thought it better to take Robert away. I put him into a large "Crystal Palace" cage where Buller was then living. Robert rushed up to Buller, and puffing out his "cheeks" and drooping his wings, proceeded to shriek a song of triumph in the ear of his foe. At last, from words they proceeded to blows, and finding poor Buller with blood on his waistcoat, I removed the fire-eating Robert to a smaller cage.

Meanwhile, his wife was attending to two fine children. And now a sad tragedy occurred. Whiteley and her little ones were at the top of the house in an attic. One Sunday afternoon when the babies were three days old, my evil star caused me to leave open the door of the cage. The window of the room was also open. Down below, in the garden, Robert was passionately singing. On hearing that beloved voice, poor Whiteley forgot her helpless little ones and flew to join her husband. When I discovered my loss, and we searched for the missing one, she was found lying dead on the grass just as she had flown down from the window.

It was about this time that I became possessed with an idea to try my hand at Mule breeding. I thought if I hand-reared some Linnets, they would grow up as tame and steady as Canaries. I obtained a nest of five Linnets whose tail feathers were beginning to sprout. They were, perhaps, a few days over the best age for hand-rearing, and I had great trouble with them. They were queer little dusty-looking objects, with black sparkling eyes. After I had fed them for a day, and forcibly opened the beaks of those who obstinately refused to feed, I began to feel years older!

Robert Tackles Young Linnets.

It was then that I thought perhaps Robert might help me in my hard task. With fear and trembling I introduced him to the five squeaking little objects, now all out of the nest, and swarming about the bottom of the large breeding cage which I had made their nursery. I had provided egg and sponge cake moistened with warm milk, and also soaked rape seed. I had been toilsomely feeding them with these on the end of a match every quarter of an hour or so! My good little Robert took in the situation very quickly. He eyed the little tumbling creatures with his head on one side, and then he rapidly began eating from the different dishes. I heaved a sigh of great relief when, in another moment, he began to feed them in a quick, business-like way, while they all clustered round him shrieking "More," "more."

From that moment my responsibility ended, and I trusted everything to the capable hands (or rather I should say "beak") of Robert. He seemed very pleased when I provided him with plenty of shepherd's purse and chickweed; he seemed to know that these, after being properly prepared in his crop, were the natural food of his nurslings.

He Turns and Rends them.

It was a long time before they began to "pick up" for themselves, and the indefatigable Robert seemed never to tire in his ministrations. When he found time for his own meals I really do not know, for there was always a Linnet which wanted to be fed, and whenever one was hungry all the others were also!

It was a curious sight to see Robert, surrounded by the five Linnets, now nearly as large as himself, all pushing and hustling—sometimes I have seen him turn tail and flee from them!

Then one day all was changed. Fiercely singing at the top of his voice, he charged down on the biggest one, which, though well able to feed itself, was shamelessly begging from him. "We've had quite enough of this!" he seemed to say; "get out into the world and look after yourselves—I've done my part!" And, fearing for the lives of the Linnets, I quickly removed their foster-father.

All the five Linnets were incurably wild. After Robert's rough weaning they seemed to develop a mad terror of me which I was never able to overcome. They were fine healthy birds, and the three cocks were beautiful singers, but their wildness was certainly "shocking to see."

After I had suffered from these "cage-dusters" for a year, I selected the best cock (which is still in my possession), and let the others go early one beautiful Spring morning. Away they went, like the wind, and never returned. The one I retained is now fairly steady, though still not really tame.

After seeing what an excellent "nurse" Robert was, I always after this allowed him to help to bring up his own sons and daughters. As a parent, he erred on the side of over-carefulness, and I have often seen him, when his wife was off the nest, sitting on the children himself in his fear lest they should take cold. He brought up several families of sons and daughters, and I think in his great anxiety for their well-being he wore out his little frame, for after I had had him a couple of years he succumbed to a severe attack of asthma.

ORNITHOLOGICAL ODDMENTS.

Author of "The World's Birds."

Roman Aviculture.

The keeping of cage birds is of unknown antiquity, but there is a record of the first aviary, for a Roman writer of about the beginning of the Christian era speaks of some fancier of the day who was the first to keep birds behind netting; I can't remember the name for the moment, and have not the author mentioned to refer to, for which I must apologise, for in the minds of many aviculturists, no doubt, "this was the noblest Roman of them all." I remember, however, that our Roman author makes no mention of the use of egg. Coming to a time much nearer our own, but still several centuries back, Bacon says in his essay on gardens that he did not like aviaries unless they were large enough to contain shrubs to allow the birds to nestle naturally, so that large garden aviaries are quite ancient as far as this country is concerned, and probably elsewhere. Undoubtedly birds give more pleasure when kept under such surroundings, but in our changeable climate the less picturesque indoor aviary is apt to be more reliable for results, as I fancy has been already pointed out by some one or other.

Cuckoos as Pets.

It is quite evident from what has recently appeared in the columns of CAGE BIRDS, that our Cuckoo may make a very satisfactory pet, in spite of his proverbial name for stupidity, and I found when in India that the Magpie-like Cuckoo, or "Crow-Pheasant" mentioned above, at the opposite extreme of the Cuckoo family, was eminently adapted for being made a pet of. Specimens procured only partly fledged in the barred plumage became tame in a day or two, and would come to one and climb to one's shoulder and head, while one I gave to a friend would leave its cage even by artificial light in the evening, and come and sit on the couch beside him like a petted dog or cat. I ought, however, to mention that there seem to be two forms of young in this bird, always occurring, apparently, in separate broods. Many young birds were not barred at all, but resembled the adults, not so exactly, however, as in the case of the museum specimen mentioned, because they were not so bright and pure in colour. These were not so easily tamed as the others, and were smaller and shorter on the leg; but whether the difference between the two types of young was due to sex, or represented different varieties, I never gained enough experience to make out. I always found Crow-Pheasants easy birds to rear, raw meat, snails and cockroaches being suitable food for this coarse, hardy bird, which, however, has been very rarely brought alive to England.

The Crow Pheasant.

Precocious Maturity.

Mr. G. E. Weston's note in the issue of CAGE BIRDS for October 2nd, on young cock Redstarts moulting out into full Spring, instead of Autumn, feathering, interested me very much, and it also reminded me of some cases I have met with myself, where there was a "skipping," as it were, of a stage of plumage. Thus, the small Cormorant of India (Phalacrocorax javanicus), which is jet-black when adult, is dark brown with whitish underparts when in first plumage, like our big Cormorant at the same stage; but most of the nestlings I saw in Bengal—and we had a breeding colony in the free state in the Calcutta Zoo—were already black like the old ones. Then there is a big non-parasitic Cuckoo in India, known as the "Crow-Pheasant" (Centropus sinensis), in form and habits more like a Magpie than a Cuckoo. This bird, when young, is coloured much like the young of our Cuckoo, having a barred Hawk-like dress. When adult, it is black with bright chestnut wings, and we had in the Indian Museum a skin of a nestling which had assumed this adult dress as its first feathering. Recently, also, someone recorded the breeding of some Pennant's Parrakeets, which had a first feathering very similar to that of full-plumaged birds, instead of the plain green dress in which, as a rule, the young Pennant makes its bow to the public; and probably this sort of thing is much commoner than is supposed, though I never saw a case of it myself till I went to India.

THE SENSATION OF THE PRESENT SHOW SEASON.

The young Clear Buff Greenfinch-Canary Mule exhibited at the Dulwich O.S. Show by Mr. A. C. Archer (Plaistow).

The Indian Rock Parrot.

Talking of India, reminds me that the question seems to have come up again as to what a Rock Parrot is. What we know by that name in India is the large Ringed Parrakeet, distinguished from the smaller and commoner kind, not only by its much larger size, but by having, in both sexes and at all ages, a red patch on the wing. There are several local races of this bird, which are classed in some books as species, differing chiefly in the tint of the green in the plumage, which is very mealy, for instance, in those from Northern India, and very pure and bright in the Andaman Islands race, the differences being much the same as are seen in our Greenfinch, but rather more pronounced and associated with certain localities.

Wild Bird Life.

The Last of the Swallows.

The Swallows and Martins are still with us; they are now gathered together in big flocks preparatory to leaving for other shores. They spend the shortening days in a different manner to what they did earlier in the Summer. In most cases their nesting duties are over, although the other day I saw what appeared to be old birds feeding young in the nest; and so late have they been known to breed that the instinct to migrate with their companions has seized the old birds when the young were still unfledged, and these unfortunates have been left to perish. These single birds and pairs are just now the exception. All the Martins in the neighbourhood are gathered into one or two big flocks, roaming the meadows and fields, wheeling and twisting in all directions; and so numerous are they that they rather give one the impression of a huge swarm of flies than a company of birds. A favourite resting-place is upon the telegraph wires Upon sunny mornings they love to bask upon the tiled roofs, spreading themselves out to the warm sunshine.

Martins and Swallows are among the last of our summer visitors to depart, and apparently it is the want of food alone that prevents their staying with us the year round. Within the last few years the Swallows have slightly increased in numbers. They are much more handsome than the Martin, and although little can be seen of their beauty of plumage while on the wing, a close inspection reveals a gracefully modelled bird with small beak and clear, bold eye, the body a perfect wedge, very short legs, and exceedingly long pointed wings—the whole adapted in every way for its life of aerial gambols. The colouring is pleasing and harmonious, the forehead and throat a rich rufous, the back a purplish black, with whitish underparts. A healthy bird has a peculiar glossy sheen, which greatly enhances the colouring, and makes the common Chimney Swallow a most attractive bird when seen at close quarters. The long-forked tail is one of the distinguishing points between this species and the House Martin. Few people are aware that the Swallow has a song, yet such is the case. It is a sweet, low warble, very pleasing to the ear, with nothing harsh or discordant about it; it is often indulged in during the early spring while the bird flies through the air or is perched at sundown upon a thatched cottage or moss-grown fruit tree.

The Wild Wood Pigeon.

It is said that it is impossible to domesticate the wild Wood Pigeon. Young ones hatched under tame Pigeons fly away to the wood directly they are liberated.

Hawfinches' Habits.

Although very shy birds, Hawfinches nest in colonies; that is to say, several pairs will build in the same plantation, but well removed from each other. The nest is large and somewhat flat.

The White Albatros.

A species of white Albatross breeds on an island in the Pacific Ocean. An American has leased the island for the purpose of collecting the guano, and in the breeding season thousands of eggs are sent to the market. Unless the birds find another nesting site, the species will soon be exterminated.

Starlings in the Rain.

Somehow the Starling always appears perfectly at home in the wet. So glossy and sleek are the birds, that the rain runs off them, and they never get that bedraggled appearance we see in the case of Thrushes and Blackbirds. Should the rain penetrate a little, a Starling will give himself a shake and look as sleek as ever. At such times food is plentiful, so he thoroughly enjoys himself.

Difference in Woodcocks.

Among the migrants visiting our shores in the autumn, the Woodcocks are eagerly looked for. So much do they vary in colour, markings, and size, that many think that there must be at least two varieties. But doubtless the climate and conditions under which they are bred and moulted are the causes of this variation. There is a great difference in certain districts in the colour of some of our quite common species.

Food of the Eider.

The beautiful Eider Duck feeds principally upon shell fish. Winkles and limpets may be found in the gizzard of a dissected bird, but in the crop is found a large razor shell. Sometimes there is only one side of the bivalve; in others both sides. The birds no doubt digest the contents of the shells and then eject them, as other birds do pellets. These shells are so large that it would be impossible for them to pass through the usual channels.

The Reminiscences of an Old Fancier.

By Samuel Honey.

My First Mules.

My first Mules I bred in the year 1870. I had a lot of hen Canaries, and I bought three Goldfinches, which I worked with six hen Canaries. Only one of the Finches bred. I had two nests of Mules, all dark ones. Of course, I wanted to breed light ones, and I saw advertised light Muling hens, "warranted to breed light Mules," at 10s. each. I sent for and had home two very ordinary-looking birds. I tried these hens, and they bred Mules, but all dark, not having a single light feather.

Forty Mules in One Season.

The next year I determined to try all my hens, as I had bought several cock Goldfinches. So after having one nest of Canaries I put twelve hens up with Finches, and I bred over forty Mules. Two of the hens had variegated Mules in each nest, all fairly well marked. I kept these two hens and I bought a very nice-looking bird, which I saw in a shop window. It was kept by an old Marine. He told me it was a cock, and came from a prize Norwich strain. The bird was pink-eyed and lightly marked—a very stout chubby one. I took him home, and the next season put him with one of the afore-mentioned hens, but they did not seem to agree, and one morning to my surprise I found two eggs in the nest, and so my "cock" bird turned out to be a hen.

I separated the birds and put a Finch with each of the hens, and in the next nest from "the Marine's cock-bird" (as I called her) I had four Mules, three of them light and one dark (one of these birds won first at a county open show); so I was very well pleased with the bird. I have since bred several good Mules from her and her daughters, but, strange to say, none so good as the first lot.

I find some fresh-caught Finches will breed with Canaries the first season. I have at present a cock Bullfinch with hen Canaries, a cock Goldfinch with hen Bullfinches, and four cock Goldfinches with hen Canaries—each lot flying together.

An Amusing Show Experience.

I once entered a cock Bullfinch at a show about twelve miles from here, and the judge was a well-known bird fancier and Mule breeder (not long since deceased). Two days before the show my Bullfinch died through catching his neck in the drinker hole. As I had no other bird fit to show, I was rather in a fix, but I had a trap cage out in my garden, and the very afternoon before the show I caught a beautiful cock Bullfinch. I made up my mind I would take him to the show. We had to drive there, so at six o'clock in the morning I put him in the show-cage and drove to the exhibition. We had to be there before nine o'clock.

When we arrived I opened the case and anxiously looked to see how Bully was, but notwithstanding the drive, he was as steady as possible, and was looking first-rate.

We were allowed to stage our birds, and then had to "go" whilst judging was proceeding. At two o'clock the show was open, and I quickly went in, and found that Bully had been awarded first prize. The judge came up to me and asked me if I knew whose bird it was, as he had never seen a finer or steadier one. I laughed and said it was mine, but I would see him later when the show was over, as we knew each other quite well.

So when I had packed my birds I saw him and asked him if he knew a fresh-caught bird when he saw it? Oh, yes, he said, he was too old a "bird" to be "taken in" in that way. Then I told him that that first prize Bullfinch was only caught the previous afternoon, and that I would not be surprised if it were dead before I got home. He could hardly credit it, and begged me to say nothing about it, as he would be heartily laughed at. Poor old chap! I have often joked him about it since.

All our readers should make certain of receiving with their copy of CAGE BIRDS this week a reproduction of the beautiful coloured plate of Hawfinches which Mr. Norman has painted specially to accompany it.

For our show on November 5th and 6th, writes Mr. J. W. Marsden, secretary, Blackburn and Dis. C.B.S., we have engaged a new showroom near the Infirmary—an ideal one, well lighted and free from draughts.

We are holding our show this year, writes Mr. A. J. Notley, hon. secretary of the Hetton-le-hole and Dis. C.B.S., under C.B.U. rules. Schedules will be sent out when ready, when we are hoping for a bumping entry.

I must say that the list of shows and dates that appeared in your last issue is very good and very useful to both secretary and exhibitor.—W. J. EDWARDS, hon. secretary of the Six Bells (Abertillery) and Dis. C.B.S.

Mr. Thos. Hill (of Messrs. Hill and Stewart, of Thornaby), has been appointed to judge the Canaries at our show on January 8th, 1910, write Messrs. Wilkinson and Danby, secretaries of the Yorm, Eaglescliffe, and Dis. C.B.S.

Some months ago a Bullfinch got out of a cage which was hanging at a house door in Falconer Place, and the owner was somewhat surprised when the bird returned to its old quarters on September 3rd last. She had no difficulty in identifying her lost pet.

Reading show on November 17th, writes Mr. W. H. Pike, the hon. secretary, is only for members this year, and Mr. J. Robson is judging and not Mr. J. Frostick as announced in CAGE BIRDS "Guide to the Show." But I think we shall get a good number of entries.

I have removed from Lorne Road, writes Mr. A. E. Pickett, jun., to 2, Dagmar Road, Victoria Park, Dorchester, Dorset. The breeding-season around Dorchester has been a bad one on the whole, bad feeders being the chief cry, and also the "going light" or "fever" trouble.

For the purpose of keeping up a friendly rivalry between the Leicester Hand-in-Hand C.B.S. and the Coventry O.S., writes Mr. Geo. Peters, the hon. secretary of the latter society, a challenge cup has been jointly subscribed for and purchased, the society making the most points at the two open shows to be the holders of the cup for the year.

I am removing to 25, Arch Street, Hartlepool, writes Mr. H. J. L. Williams. I have had to do this owing to my health, and to be near to my work, so that I can get every meal at home. I am pleased to say that I will have a grand birdroom; in fact, better than I have at present. Friends are invited to come and see me.

The Civil Service F.A. Manual for 1909-10, a copy of which was sent us by the secretary, Mr. A. Watson, 116, Maurice Avenue, Noel Park, Wood Green, London, N., contains the rules of the association, the names and addresses of the members, and the balance-sheet, showing a balance in hand of slightly over £5.

Our show will held under C.B.U. rules, writes Mr. W. J. Edwards, secretary, Six Bells (Abertillery) and Dis. C.B.S., and we have provided 30 classes. Mr. J. R. Leech, of Abertillery, is offering a silver cup for best bird in show, also silver cup for best 1909 bird unflighted (bred and shown by a member), to be won outright.

Kindly notify exhibitors that the Swansea and Dis. C.B.A. have secured the patronage for their annual open show on November 10th and 11th, of the S.N.P.C., S.Y.C.C., E. and W.B.F.C.C., W.C.B.C., and B.F.C.C., writes Mr. Alf. Hitchings, the secretary. The B.F.C.C. has granted us the medal and model as we intend giving 10 classes for them.

We have received a very complete and neat list of the show and other cages and of fanciers' requisites in general, from Messrs. W. Mullins and Co., of Balby Road, Doncaster. The workmanship of the goods supplied is guaranteed of a high-class character, and judging by the prices fanciers will do well to write for a copy of this price-list.

Will members of the Midland Counties' Yorkshire C.C. kindly note, writes Mr. W. H. Uzzell, the hon. secretary, that owing to ill health I am reluctantly compelled to give up the secretaryship. Mr. A. Paddock, of "Halstead," All Saints Road, King's Heath, Birmingham, has kindly consented to accept the office pro tem. All communications should be addressed to him. Through doctor's orders I am also compelled to dispose of my entire stock, but trust at some future date to be able to once again join the Fancy.

As many of the testimonials in my British bird advertisement this week are a cut above the ordinary, writes Mr. W. Gore, the well-known Birmingham dealer, some doubts may be expressed as to their genuineness. I have therefore taken the liberty of sending a parcel (including those mentioned above) for your inspection, and should esteem it a favour if you would just mention that you have seen them. (We have pleasure in stating that we have examined the large bundle of testimonials sent by Mr. Gore, and satisfied ourselves as to their unquestionable genuineness—EDITOR "C.B.")

At Cardiff Show, on December 1st and 2nd, I have guaranteed a class for "unflighted Yorkshire hens," writes Mr. E. J. Banks. It has occurred to me for some time that many young hens are left at home because of the small chance they have of competing against their more developed year-old sisters. I can only hope the idea of providing the extra class will be as successful as was the splitting up of the unflighted Yorks. class two years ago, when I guaranteed the buff class. I believe our worthy secretary closed his book with 38 yellows and 42 buffs, which proved the policy of giving at least two classes and dividing the yellows from buffs.

I am only a novice in Canary breeding, this being my first year, writes Mr. H. Ellerton (Northampton), but thanks to information I received from CAGE BIRDS, I have had nineteen young birds from two hens and one cock bird. These are all doing well now—not bad for a first trial?

We have had so many special prizes to allocate, write Messrs. Richardson and Greenwell, joint secretaries of the Wallsend and Mid. Tyne C.B.A. Show, November 12th and 13th, that we have been rather late in sending our schedule copy to the printers, but we hope to be able to send them out early next week, and I trust those who have written for one (I have applications every post for them) will excuse the delay. We have specials for best bird in each section, and our members' classes are well provided for. Our thanks are due to those members who have worked so hard in getting in these, and we also wish to thank those who have so kindly given donations and specials.

Norwich Plainhead Canary Club.

There will be a general meeting of the members of the Norwich Plainhead Club on October 30th, at the Manchester Show, at 4 o'clock.—JNO. HOPKINS.

The Yorkshire Union Record.

The secretary of City of Bradford O.S. Show, held October 16th, found on entering up the exhibits that the full entry was 671, and not 655 as given in the telegram published last week, which notified the breaking of all Y.U. records.

Recognition by Birds.

Birds evidently recognise human beings by the features, and are possibly assisted by general carriage. As a proof of this, the common birds of our garden take no heed of our change of costume, but the intrusion of a stranger, causes instant alarm. The same sign may be noticed among domesticated Canaries.

A Cage Bird Union Matter.

A deal of annoyance, disappointment, and unnecessary correspondence is caused by secretaries of societies not giving particular attention to our rules; they delay forwarding the required deposit and their application for show dates. See Rule 19. New secretaries will oblige by forwarding their names and addresses to the Union secretary as soon as possible, also the names of their delegate. See Rules 4, 8, and 9. Copies of the rules may be had from the delegate or from the Union secretary. J. RAYNES, 19, Richmond Road, Chorlton-cum-Hardy, Manchester.

The Blackbird's Objection.

The following very American notice appears in the "Philadelphia Record":—While walking in the suburban districts recently with a friend, Miss Nettie Williams, of Pittsburg, was the object of an unusual attack. She wore a hat with a bird of brilliant plumage as an ornament. Suddenly her head became encircled by half a dozen Blackbirds, which pecked at the bird in her hat, tearing out the bright-coloured feathers with their beaks. The Blackbirds even flew in her face and lacerated the skin with their bills. Tearing the hat from her head, Miss Williams threw it on the ground. Her escort was obliged to use his coat to beat the birds off.

Echoes from Glasgow City.

That there was a big crowd at the show; that David's buff pied hen lifted the cup; that this makes five cups this season; that we never heard the like before; that it had a narrow majority; that "Corkerhill" is close on; that the Southern Confined Show Cup is going to Corkerhill; that it's not there yet; that Partick is making room for it; that Dennistoun and Govan were pleased; why not?; that a Bonnybridge buff cock was shelved; why?; that this action caused a bit of a sensation; that the bird has won all seasons and looked well on Friday; that there were many surprises; that the above was one; that the show was a big success; that President Jardine and the secretaries are proud of it.—SCOTCH FANCY.

Protection in Derbyshire.

The existing order for the protection of wild birds had been considered by the General Purposes Committee of the Derbyshire County Council, who recommended that it should be varied by making the close time from February 3rd to August 11th inclusive (instead of from the last day of February to August 13th), excepting for Wild Duck, Snipe, and Plover, the close time in respect of these birds being, in accordance with the Act, from March 1st to August 1st. It was further proposed to prohibit the taking of wild birds on Sunday, Christmas Day, and Good Friday, during the whole year, and to make an entirely new order enabling specified individual birds to be protected instead of dealing with birds as a class. —The report was adopted.

"A Trio of 'Wee Gems.'"

I was greatly pleased to see portrayed on CAGE BIRDS frontispiece of October 9th, the green Border Fancy belonging to my friend, Mr. James Richards, writes Mr. H. Jenkins (Swansea), and on congratulating him upon that distinctive honour, he expressed the wish that I should thank CAGE BIRDS on his behalf, as he is not given to letter writing. This I accordingly do, and also ask your kind permission to add a brief note. The bird was bred by himself, and has won 1st and two medals at Swansea, 2nd at Welsh National, 2nd at Carmarthen, 1st at Llanelly, and 3rd at the Crystal Palace. His name will undoubtedly figure largely in the honours of the coming show season. He is a member of that go-ahead society, Swansea and District, which, by the way, has a fine silver cup for competition, which I hope he will lift. At the same time, I must tell him it is awfully heavy.

OUR SPECIAL NUMBER.

A Request to Readers.

While sensible of the many shortcomings of this, the first Double Number of the present show season, we feel that we can rely upon the generosity of our readers to look on them with a tolerant eye, seeing the huge amount of work which has necessarily to be crowded into a very short space of time at this busy period of the year. We would ask the many kind friends of CAGE BIRDS to take every opportunity of mentioning their hobby and their paper to all acquaintances; we would point out, further, that the production of a special issue such as this marks a particularly favourable opportunity for the friendly help of readers in this direction. Show this Double Number to all your friends, and get them interested in the keeping of birds; then you will be helping along the Hobby you love and assisting CAGE BIRDS at the same time.

ENGLISH AND WELSH BORDER F.C.

Result of Election.

The result of the recent voting for a secretary, a president, a committee-man, and two auditors is as follows:—For the office of secretary: Mr. S. Hadwin, 22 votes; Mr. A. J. L. Taylor, 1 vote. For the office of President: Mr. P. Robinson, 17 votes; Mr. J. Robson 2 votes; and Messrs. T. A. Bowes and J. W. Wagstaff, and Mrs. T. Harrison, 1 vote each. For the office of Auditors: Mr. J. S. Wilson, 16 votes; Mr. J. Robson, 13 votes; Mr. R. B[illegible]lic, 3 votes; Messrs. T. L. Hancocks and [illegible]er Bros., 2 votes each; Messrs. J. Smith, W. Middleton, J. Wagstaff, T. Harrison, A. Hay, and E. R. Roberts, 1 vote each. For the office of committee: Messrs. J. S. Clinch, R. Brownlie, W. Bayhe, and J. Wagstaff, 3 votes each; J. Robson, 2 votes; and Messrs. W. J. Jenkins, T. C. Woodman, J. A. E. Lowe, J. A. Lewthwaite, J. Ellwood, J. Smart, T. Harrison, and F. F. Hawkins, vote each.—F. CAEL, scrutineer.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY-EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Half-a-Dozen.

"Arts" (Forest Hill).—There is no reason why the room should not prove satisfactory. The window being due north is certainly not an ideal position, but it is not necessarily a bad one, and if the room is free from draughts and damp, and receives a tolerable amount of light, you have nothing to fear. (1) I do not quite understand what you mean by a false partition on the west wall. If you mean a support to hang cages on and bring them out away from the wall near middle of the room, I do not advise it. Put up a staging along wall about two feet from floor, and above this make a three-tier rack to hold cages. If the wall is not utilised all across by cages, limit the cages to the end near the window where there is most light. (2) It depends wholly upon the locality. If the window faces an open space with unobstructed light, a reflector should not be necessary, but if blocked in or overshadowed by other buildings, or trees, it would be a useful adjunct for increasing the light. (3) If the flue is unobstructed the fireplace and the perforated door will provide enough ventilation for ordinary purposes. During spells of fine, mild weather, however, and in the summer months, the room should be aired by opening the window. (4) Arranged as advised in No. 1, the west wall alone will accommodate 15 breeding cages, or 9 breeding cages and 3 flight cages comfortably. Three more flight cages might be arranged on the same principle on the middle of the east wall. (5) From the end of November to February would be the best time to buy. (6) Believe person named is very reliable, but cannot take responsibility of recommending any particular dealer for reason which must be obvious.

Variety for Profit.

Changing.—This is rather a ticklish question to advise upon, as so much depends upon what market one wishes to cater for, the kind of local demand, and also the breeder's knowledge and skill in rearing and getting birds fit for local sale or exhibition, as the case may be. The Border Fancy, which you say you prefer, would be one of the best varieties you could go in for anywhere about the Border counties to supply local demand, but in many places where some other variety is all the rage, you would find far less demand for it on the spot. This is a question which you must decide for yourself. As a hardy, free-breeding, and easy to manage variety, it is second to none. Of course, if there should be no local demand for this variety, you could doubtless always find a ready market elsewhere by advertising in our columns. The Norwich and Yorkshire are also hardy, and good breeders, and are rather more generally popular, so that there is usually a market for them at rather better prices than the Borders anywhere. The Rollers are also hardy, and as easy to breed and manage as Borders, and the prices for ordinary songsters would probably average about the same as the Borders. For really good singing birds, with no bad notes, you would get much more; but this would necessitate keeping two at least (you could not take the risk of depending solely upon one) thoroughly good schoolmasters. As a set-off to this, you would naturally get more than an average price for any good typical specimens of Borders, fit for exhibition, which you might breed; so you see there is really nothing to choose between these two varieties save that you would be best advised to go in for the one which finds the readiest sale in your locality.

Birds Dying.

A. Kerridge.—I cannot even guess, from the particulars you give, what is the cause. If you had said how they are fed and kept, whether in a heated or cold aviary, it would have helped me. From what you say about the one you dissected, I am inclined to think that congestion of the liver was the cause of death, and, in all probability, the diet is at the root of the mischief. Only a post-mortem, however, could determine with any degree of certainty what is wrong, and I would advise you to adopt this suggestion with the next that dies. In the meantime, do not introduce any fresh birds, keep aviary and everything connected with it scrupulously clean, boil all food and water vessels that will bear such treatment for a few minutes twice a week, and keep floor well strewn with clean, gritty sand. Feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple, and give a little bread and milk twice a week, on two other days a pinch of a mixture of hemp, inga, and gold of pleasure, and a fairly liberal allowance of green food daily. In the drinking water dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, ditto of sulphate of iron the size of a hemp seed, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid, in each two tablespoonfuls, and give every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days give six drops tincture of gentian and four of tincture of quinine in the same quantity of water. See your seeds are quite free from any contamination.

Two Ailing Norwich.

"Hope."—No 1. His age is much against his recovery, and I doubt whether you will be able to do much for him. I would advise you to remove him to a position further in the room. Am inclined to think he is pestered with red mites, so you should thoroughly examine cage and cradicate this pest at once, if found. A box cage would be best. Keep it in a fairly warm place, but where the air is pure, and the warmth regular and equable. Feed on a diet of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple. Every second day give a small pinch of maw seed, and on the alternate days half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion and four of port wine well mixed in. Once each week omit the oil and wine and add a slight dusting of a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur and one part chlorate of potash to soft food. Give a little green-food, plantain stalks, or banana, daily. In the water give six drops tincture of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and in the next week six drops tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. Continue this for a month, and report result, referring to this reply. No. 2. Put this bird on the same staple as above, and give every second day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake prepared as above, and on the alternate days a small piece of bread scalded in milk, pressed nearly dry, and sprinkled with soft sugar. Twice a week give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and gold of pleasure seeds. Give a little green-food or banana daily. In the drinking water give the rhubarb and salts, as advised for No. 1, daily for three days, and the gentian and acid every second day for remainder of week. After give twenty drops whiskey, six syrup of squills, and two eucalyptus oil, every second day for a fortnight. Shake well together. Drop soft food to twice a week as soon as the bird seems able to do without it.

Brevities.

Spots in Eye (Bermon).—Your bird is undoubtedly suffering from cataract, and nothing is likely to prove of any service. If kept in a moderate-sized cage with food and water vessels inside, it will get along very nicely, and, if a cock, may, after a time, sing all right. But it will never recover its sight.

Age for Breeding (Anxious).—It is quite likely July and August-hatched birds (this year) will mate early next spring if allowed. Whether it would be wise to allow them to do so is another matter, and depends upon the variety, and also your own ideas of "early spring." If either of the larger breeds, it would not be wise to mate them before May, and I should not advise mating any variety bred so late before April.

Seed Samples (L.P.).—It is impossible to give a definite opinion about the bulk by examining just a few grains. So far as can be judged from your samples the Canary is sweet, clean, and of good average quality, but very small; the rape is a good sample of summer rape; the hemp is also apparently a very nice sample, but as there are several damaged grains, and one or two rancid kernels, in the small pinch, it is not unlikely that the bulk may be of inferior quality. You had better examine its condition in this respect.

About a Bird-room (Expansion, Sheffield).—You have laid out the attic very well, and there is no alteration I would suggest. If you make the rack with the shelving for the lowest tier at a height of twenty inches from floor, and allow 17 ins. between each tier, which will give ample space for your cages, 16 ins. high, you will have just enough room to make the staging three tiers high—neither too high nor too low. I do not think you have anything to fear from draughts. But if you find this is not quite the case, you can secure them against draught by erecting a partition or suspending a curtain of baize, at end of rack nearest the stairs, and projecting at right angles with the front of the cages for two feet towards the middle of the room.

Birds Sneezing (Beginner, Newcastle-on-Tyne).—It is not uncommon for birds to sneeze a little at times when moulting. As your other birds are all well, I have no doubt these two are a trifle more susceptible to chills than the rest, and are perhaps vigorous bathers, which is sufficient to cause the sneezing. As a remedy only give them the bath on fine, mild days, and every second day for a fortnight give a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with gold of pleasure seed. On the alternate days give in the water twenty drops whisky, ten of oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together. Stop this after the first week if the birds seem alright, but continue the sponge cake and oil for the fortnight. Thanks for note. In all probability moistening with olive oil or pure vaseline would have had the same effect.

Crossing and Feeding (E.H.W.L.W.).—Where the choice exists I certainly prefer the method of mating given in my last reply, but you may use a yellow Lancashire hen with a Crest cock, and pair the young cocks from these to Crest hens the following season. Select a bird to begin with that carries a good dense headgear, and do not be too particular about typical Lancashire properties. If the bird is a trifle stiff-tailed and short, so much the better. The seed mixture would be improved by omitting the Canary (there is enough in the staple diet), and substituting an equal quantity of split groats, a small proportion of rolled oats, broken rice, gold of pleasure, and occasionally a few freshly-broken-up kernels of sunflower. Do not use a large proportion of inga, and limit quantity of linseed to a mere sprinkling.

A Pair (Rory O'More).—(1) Yes, providing the mark is reasonably small—say, about the size of a sixpence—the bird will be quite eligible for the "clears or ticked." (2) Yes, it is quite likely you may breed self cinnamons from the pair. The frequency of the occurrence will depend upon the amount of cinnamon blood in both birds, but especially upon the amount in the green variegated cock.

Eyo Destroyed (L. Evans).—You could certainly show the bird, but the loss of the eye would tell against it a good deal in strong competition. Being clearly a physical injury, and not the results of organic defect or disease, it should handicap the bird less in a class for stock pairs; but even here it would tell against it, more or less according to competition. I do not suppose it would be "disqualified," but it might be "passed."

Are Bilberries Poisonous? (Bilber).—I think the chances of your friend's bird being poisoned practically nil. In the first place, the symptoms should have commenced within an hour or two of the time it was eaten; whereas they did not set in until the second day after. Again the symptoms shown were not in any way significant of poisoning, but were what one might expect when a bird had been exposed to unaccustomed draughts, and developed pneumonia; and the result also is quite in keeping with this theory. I have no distinct recollection of giving these to Canaries, but I should not hesitate to do so if the occasion or opportunity arose, and, unless I am mistaken, a number of soft-billed Britishers are very fond of them, and eat them with impunity. Perhaps some of our readers will tell us whether or not bilberries produce any ill effect.

More Seed Samples ("Yorick").—I cannot profess to know where any given sample was grown by simply looking at it; therefore I do not presume to say whether yours are "genuine Spanish" or not. No. 1, Canary, is small, very thin, and not well ripened. It is sweet, but rather poor on the whole. No. 2, Canary, is very variable, and seems to be a mixture of various qualities. It is none too good in flavour, and seems to have been badly harvested. A decidedly poor sample, and not so good as No. 1. No. 3, rape, I think is probably a mixture, and although mild, I do not care about it at all. I note it is sprinkled with yellow mustard, linseed, and Canary, and I should not be surprised if you find on examination that the bulk is infested a little with mites.

Hens Wanting to Nest (D.W.T.).—You omit to mention several important points. How do you keep the birds? Are they in a heated room, or one with a normal temperature? And have they moulted this season? Your letter infers they have not yet begun to moult. Anyway, put them in a good-sized flight, out of sight and earshot of the males, and in a cool room for preference. Feed on a diet of plain Canary only for a week or two, and give a little green food or sweet fruit daily, and a small quantity of bread and milk twice a week. Limit diet to this for a time, and in the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half the quantity of bromido of potash, three times in a week on alternate days. The hen may very likely be plucked by one or more of the others. Cage her alone until after the moult, or the absent feathers are reproduced. Anoint bare places where the feathers should grow, once or twice with a little olive oil or carbolised vaseline.

Diet for Roller (A.B.).—This has been given several times lately. Elaborate seed mixtures are not to be advised for regular use as staple food. They are well suited for occasional use. A mixture of two parts Canary to one part summer rape is the best. In addition, give separately twice a week either a small teaspoonful of either of the mixtures, or a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, gold of pleasure, and maw, with a slight sprinkling of linseed. Once a week give a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, or egg-food, or an equivalent quantity of bread and milk, sprinkled with a little soft sugar. Give green-food daily in summer, three times a week in winter, when obtainable quite free from frost. In frosty weather substitute a little sweet fruit. A liberal use of hemp is undoubtedly bad for closely confined birds. Used as recommended above it is not injurious.

Making a Start (R.C.W.).—(1) You will find the standards in the ANNUAL. If you want to learn how to breed you cannot do better than get "Yorkshire Canaries," by Mr. Battye, post free 1s. from our manager. (2) To start in a small way, get one cock and two hens and run the former with each hen alternately. Get a YeHow cock and two Buff hens—not all clears; leave the choice of markings to the breeder, simply saying what you would like to breed in the way of markings. (3) You may get a very fair trio of stock birds for the amount, but not the highest class, and they will give you a very fair start. If you go to a good breeder who runs a fairly large stock, ask him for unrelated birds suitable for your object. This will be better than mixing the strain at the start. (4) Leave the selection to the judgment of the person you go to; he knows the birds, and what they are likely to breed. Towards the end of November or December is a good time to buy, but it would be just as well to put a reserve on them at once.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

Norwich with Cough (E.E.M., Wimbledon).—Your bird is troubled with a cough, which may be the result of a cold caught on the journey, or of keeping him where he is exposed to draughts, or variations of heat. You must attend to these points and keep bird out of reach of draughts, and where the temperature is fairly equable. Also see the cage is not infested with red mites, and do not allow it to hang above the level of burning gas or lamps. Give a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops cod liver oil emulsion and four of sherry, well mixed in it every second day for a week, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water twenty drops whiskey, ten oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together. Should this not remove trouble, write again.

Hen Ailing (G.E.).—It is undoubtedly suffering from the effects of over-feeding on unsuitable seeds. The mixture is not suitable for prolonged use as a staple diet. Put her at once on a diet of plain Canary only as a staple, and give separately twice a week half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and on two other days a piece of bread about the size of a hazel nut soaked in milk, pressed nearly dry, and lightly sprinkled with soft sugar. Every day give a good sized spray of green-food, and keep cage nicely strewn with clean, gritty sand. Continue for a month. See the bird is not exposed to draughts, and that the cage is free from red-mites. In the drinking water give six drops syrup of rhubarb, four of lemon juice, and a pinch of Epsom salts, every second day for a week, and, after this, six drops tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for another week or so. If the bird is fairly well at the end of the fortnight, stop all the medicines, but adhere to plain dietary for at least a month.

High Aspirations (G.W.).—(1) The bird belongs to the variegated class. If not less than about one-half of its body plumage is light, with light tail, and light, or mostly light, wings, it will be a lightly variegated; otherwise, a heavily variegated. Both these, however, usually have to compete together in one class. (2) Nothing like aspiring high, but your ideas are (I am sorry to disillusion you) too unreasonable. If you pair your yellow German hen with the Norwich cock, you will produce a better-looking bird than the pure German, which may run the Norwich pretty close in "good looks," and prove a very nice bird for singing purposes. But a "good show bird" is rather too much to expect.

A Question on Mating (Westcott).—Am afraid you misunderstood my suggestion. I did not suggest pairing up the self cinnamon, No. 8 (yellow), with a self green yellow, but that you should replace the self cinnamon in question with a yellow green self, bred from greens. I meant that you should discard the self cinnamon, and use a yellow green self to mate with the bird No. 7, which you had already allotted to this self cinnamon, and which was, I believe, a buff self green. I have not your previous query by me, so you must be tolerant if my memory plays me false in this rather complicated query. Similarly with the next pair I said a replacement, and meant that you should discard the buff green, No. 9, and use a self buff cinnamon, bred from cinnamons, in its place, to mate with No. 10, which, I believe, was a self cinnamon yellow. Hope this makes the matter quite clear, but, if not, send me the particulars again, and I will do my best to clear up any difficulty.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

A "Fat" Hen Bullie.

Spivinix.—What a weird nom-de-plume. Feed the hen on this mixture: Canary and teazle, two parts each, charlock one part. A little greenstuff, or ripe apple or orange daily. Get some syrup of buckthorn from a chemist, and stir six drops into a table-spoonful of drinking water for one day. For two or three days afterwards stir three drops in, but watch its effects upon the bowels. This should stimulate her internal organs to proper action, and bring her into much better condition. Many hen Bullies are apt to get into this over-fat, sluggish state, which is dangerous at all times, but especially during the breeding season, for egg-binding has then to be feared. You must cage her separately, and let the cage be as large as possible (for a time, at any rate). Don't give the syrup of buckthorn so strong, or so often, as to make her bowels very loose. Use your discretion; let it move her perceptibly, of course. Glad to know my other "tip" proved a "winner."

A Quartette.

British.—1: The improvements I would suggest are one part each summer rape and one part charlock with two parts of sunflower seed. You could reduce the hemp and sunflower to 1 part each during the height of summer (if we ever get any again). 2: You can certainly keep a pair of Bullfinches in the place. I have never found hemp harm Britishers kept in an outdoor aviary; I think it a very necessary seed, in fact. 3: "What is the largest number of birds I could keep so as to breed?" is an impossible question. I might recommend only one pair, and even then they might not breed! Breeding results are always speculative, and never easy to attain. It follows, of course, that the best policy is to reasonably restrict the number of pairs of birds. I do not consider eight couples too many for your place (presumably that is all you had in it). Better luck next time. 4: This is not a wild seed I have ever used as a food for British birds.

Pairing Items.

Laurence.—1: As you ask me straight out whether I think you will have any success from the mating of cock Chaffinch to hen Greenfinch, I must answer that I can only hold out very slender hopes. We have not yet seen a young Chaffinch-Greenfinch Hybrid. I would not wish to discourage you from trying, however. If you should succeed in rearing an example, then you will have achieved fame. I believe in trying to produce hitherto unknown Hybrids. I had some interesting experiences myself this last season, while after Bramblefinch-Bullfinch and Hawfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids. I hope to live to try again. 2: The hen Greenfinch will often sit upon and hatch out her eggs; also feed the young. But one can never be quite sure of any hen Britisher. 3: My own hen Greenfinch, hen Siskin, and hen Bullies all ate soft food freely during last breeding season, and I should give it them to feed the young upon, though relying mainly upon the seeding wild-foods (shepherd's purse, chickwood, etc.), which they utilise freely.

A Grasshopper Warbler.

Sparrow.—Your account of the Grasshopper Warbler interested me greatly, and I am sorry all is not going well with the bird. The trouble is that they are fragile, delicate little things, and one can do hardly anything to help them once they go wrong. Instead of dodging the bird about from hot to cold rooms and pulling out its tail, I think you would have been well advised to let things alone, and not worry over its failure to moult. It seems characteristic of Grasshopper Warblers to get over-fat when in captivity. I was talking not long ago to a friend who has several of these birds, and he experienced the same trouble—excess of fat. You might drop the mealworms (give one or two occasionally, only), and substitute very small dell scoured (this is important) gentles, putting a stout pin through their heads before offering them to the bird. Give a daily dose or two of fluid magnesia (a small teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water), allowing a reasonable interval between each. I have found it a very excellent thing to let small softbills have fruit juices (treat an orange in a lemon squeezer) to drink now and then in place of water. Sweeten it by stirring in a little honey (or brown sugar will answer).

Moulting a Linnet.

D. W. T.—If a bird is having a bad moult (or what fanciers term "stuck in the moult") that will certainly cause it to "pant" and look generally miserable, also to develop bald places. A change from a warm atmosphere to a cold one will usually start the feathers falling; failing this, one of the best things I know is a hand-wash with water considerably hotter than is usual. Keep the bird in a warm room and sheeted down (to avoid risk of a cold) for some time afterwards. This wash seldom fails; but, of course, it has an element of danger in it for any ailing bird. When "stuck in the moult," however, it is generally a case of "kill or cure." In ensuring a good moult, the method of feeding is important. I can advise you, for your Linnets, to go to a good seed shop and get the following mixture (by measure); Canary and teazle, two pints each; summer rape, charlock, and linseed, half a pint each. Give this as a stock food, and vary it with a good feed of maw and hemp now and again, given in a separate dish; also a little packet Finch mixture and wild seed mixture, and a few cracked or shelled sunflower seeds. Give plenty of seeding shepherd's purse and chickweed (these are important), and groundsel tops in season, but strip off old, stringy leaves, giving the young and juicy ones only. If you can get any smothered with green-fly (blight), let them have a feast of the latter. You can, of course, also give hard-heads, plantain, thistles, and the like, while there are many other suitable wild plants (if you know them), such as mouse-ear and knot grass.

Feeding a Jackdaw.

A. S. Ponton.—The "different varieties" of food for a Jackdaw have usually to consist of whatever happens to be on the family board for the day. You ought to have no difficulty in keeping a Jackdaw; they are very hardy, given the right kind of food. Any good brand of dog meal (such as Spratt's, or Clarke's "Melox") makes an excellent stock food for such birds as Jays, Jackdaws, Magpies, etc. It should be soaked with hot water, and then reduced to a crumbly consistency by the addition of a little packet of Thrush or Lark food. Also, of course, give the table scraps (including meat and greens), dead mice, Sparrows, etc.; a raw egg now and again is a great treat. These members of the Crow family must have flesh food if they are going to live and really thrive in captivity—for instance, mice, Sparrows, and other small birds, beetles, pieces of rabbit, the "innards" of fowls, etc., scraps of raw beef or mutton, etc. I have two Magpies at present and they thrive excellently, and look a "perfect picture," on the above stock-food, with one or other of the above tasty additions daily.

A Hand-reared Greenfinch.

F. Atkinson.—As the every-day house cage you cannot beat the accepted type known as the "finch stock cage"; it is sold by all up-to-date cage-makers. Size 16ins. long (18 is better, if space permits), by 9ins. wide by 11ins. high. It has a high front rail, on which the two perches rest, and the seed drawer runs from front to back of cage through an opening cut out of this rail. For the food of an adult Greenfinch the really important item is a daily feed of good, sound (full kernelled) sunflower (or half sunflower, half safflower) seed. This can either be offered in a separate dish, or placed among the stock mixture. The latter should be made up as follows: Canary and teazle, two pints each, summer rape, charlock, and linseed half a pint each. To this about a mixed pint of sunflower and safflower could be added. Wild seed mixture, and some good maker's special packet Finch mixture, can be occasionally offered for a change, with a little hemp as a special treat, while sunflower heads (gathered from the garden full of seed), thistle, and hardheads, seeding chickweed, groundsel, dandelion and shepherd's purse, should be freely given as in season. Your Greenfinch should flourish if fed in this way. Don't forget the bath.

British Bird Queriists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hard-bills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Brevities.

Wild Seeds (Another who Knows Something).—I am always open to try a good thing; also to learn. Why not send along a sample of your special "reviver"? I think I can trace your writing.

A Correction (E. E.).—A printer's error occurred in my reply to you last week. I intended to say that my Mule breeding cages were 36ins. to 40ins. long, by 11 wide, and 16 high—not "width 9ins., length 16ins.," as it appeared.

Two Lark Foods (T. Oates).—No. 1 appears to be barley, or other similar meal, and crushed seeds, while the basis of No. 2 is "German paste" (pea-meal treated with oil), and whole red and white millet seeds. I should think a combination of equal parts of each would be the best.

A Bare Place (M.H.C.).—Try the effect of gently anointing the bare place twice daily for a week or so with just a little sulphur ointment. Mix amongst the soft food over the same period as much flowers of sulphur as you can take up on a six-pence.

A "Paffing Out" of the Throat (W. C. H.).—The peculiarity you describe is, as you say, certainly a little perplexing. If there is any throat trouble you can try, for a few days, tinging the drinking water a light red by adding to it a few drops of Condy's Fluid; use only a glass or earthenware drinker. This is quite likely to do good; anyway, it can do no harm. Personally, I doubt whether there is any cause for worry.

Mixed Seed in an Aviary (X. Y. Z.).—The reply given "British" this week partly answers you. In a decent sized outdoor aviary I have not found the "fat-forming seeds" at all harmful; they can be more moderately given during hot weather, even left out for a day now and then. I should not, however, advise the use of one seed only. Glad you found my previous advice so useful; to know this recompenses me for the midnight oil I have to burn to supply these answers.

Two Matters (E. E. M., Wimbledon).—1: Let the Goldfinch bathe right through the winter, except on very unsuitable days (raw, damp ones). 2: Sometimes it is nervousness. Try putting the bath inside the cage and giving the water very shallow at first. It often happens, curiously enough, that cage-bred British Finches (Goldies, Linnets, etc.), are wilder and more unsteady than caught birds. Pleased to hear of the success of my previous advice.

Show Cage for Cornish Chough (R. C.).—There is no standard size; a box pattern cage (wired, that is, at front only), 30 ins. long, 12ins. wide, and 18 ins. high, would answer admirably. If sloped at the top (front to back) it tends to prevent heavy packages being placed upon it, while en route to shows (presuming no travelling box or basket is used, but only a let-down shutter at the front). There should be two stout perches, placed about 9ins. from the floor, and a sufficient distance from the sides to allow a clearance for the bird's tail. Colour, a rich, fairly light, blue, is best for inside and wires.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

Introducing New Blood.

Smithy Vanscoopendyke.—Introducing new blood means the procuring of either males or females from some other stock, preferably wild imported ones if they are of rich colour and well feathered, and pairing these up with your own birds. Or you can sell or exchange the bulk of the males one year, and simply turn in a number of others, leaving them to pair up as they choose, and if you changed some of your hens in similar fashion, the next year, you would keep up healthy, well-feathered and richly-coloured stock. Cockatiels and Rosella Parrakeets agree with Budgerigars, and neither takes any harm from the others' food (see reply to another correspondent in this issue). Of course, I am assuming that you are keeping the birds in an aviary. The three species would not agree permanently together in a cage.

Songs of Spice Bird & Silverbill.

H. B. R.—Unless you are of acute hearing, I judge the song is that of Silverbill; many of the Mannikins, though apparently making prodigious effort, and though as a rule appearing well satisfied with each other's efforts and very satisfied with themselves, make efforts all but inaudible to human ears. Such as it is, it may be described as a very feeble humming murmur, winding up with three feebly squeaky notes, the latter being all that is audible to many bird-keepers. They have crossed on more than one occasion with the Silverbill, and also the Bengalese. It is almost ludicrous at times to watch a row of these birds; one will start his efforts at song, the others sit solemnly still and listen. When the first performer gets tired another begins his almost inaudible warble, apparently to his own and fellow listeners' great satisfaction, usually winding up with a visit of the whole tribe to the food tins.

Foreign Bird Queriists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Brevities.

Breeding Budgerigars (W. J. A.).—You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1 post free from CAGE BIRDS, very helpful. Start with three pairs and see you get unrelated stock, if possible procuring each pair from a different source. Hang up a dozen husks in various positions, some of them outside with a protecting shelf over them. Cockatiels and Budgerigars agree well together, and I have never known Rosellas to do any harm to the Budgerigar. Canary and white millet, with a few oats, little hemp and sunflower seeds, green food, ripe fruit and cuttlefish, will about meet their simple requirements. A few pieces of plain biscuit (dry) thrown in occasionally are a wholesome change. Your aviary will accommodate about 40 young and adults.

Breeding Indian Green Parrakeets (Squeak).—These will be better out-of-doors than in. I do not think they will breed this season now, it is so late. Your nesting arrangements are wrong. They do not require any nesting material whatever. Give either a log or a nest box with concave bottom. You might put in a few soft chips of wood and leave birds to turn them out or leave there as they choose. There is every probability they will nest next season and successfully rear young. However, do not interfere; leave the eggs there. You must not treat species as you would Canaries. I should not add to their number at all. When attempting to breed Parrakeets, the sexes must be equal, and only one pair of each species in the same aviary.

About Blue Grosbeaks (White).—I replied to this, but it appears to have gone astray. I cannot call to memory the whole of your query, but I think the following will meet the case. It is a native of South America. It is not rare, neither is it common. It is a handsome species, and has been bred this year in a Devonshire aviary for the first time in the British Isles. It should have access to seed (see mixture advised to "Cardinal"), ripe fruit, a few insects, and soft food. The adult male is bright bloom, the female a rich brown. The birds of the year don the adult colouring at the autumn moult, though it lacks the full lustre till after next moult. If I have failed to meet your need, repeat query and give me full details again. Hope you'll have luck.

Diet for Cardinal (Cardinal).—These live largely on seed. The mixture should consist of two parts each each Canary and white millet, and one part each oats, hemp, paddy rice and sunflower seeds; they should also have three or four mealworms per bird daily, together with any stray beetles, caterpillars, etc., you can capture. Ripe fruit should also be given, such as pear, apple, banana, etc. They do not favour soft food much, but if you keep this in hand for other species, a little occasionally for them to pick over is wholesome, as also is a small tin of ants' eggs (cocoons) and dried flies, given as bought. In the summer, flowering grass (seeding grass) and other weeds will further help to vary dietary. Fresh and tender lettuce is about the best and most convenient green food for winter months.

Parrot with Displaced Beak (M. K.).—It is a very exceptional case, and it is difficult for me to give you any practical help; unless under very exceptional conditions it would need a violent wrench to so displace the beak. I presume there have been no growths round the base of beak. I have known isolated cases to occur thus, but if this had been so, I presume you would have mentioned it. If it is merely a displacement as the result of accidental violence, I do not anticipate it will get worse. The best way is to get the opinion of a vet. upon it; he would be able to tell you if it is possible to put it right, and also what course developments may take.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (Miss Parkyn).—Chronic disease of liver, then feverishness or "chill."

Canary (A. W. Odell).—Liver in softened and anæmic condition, death coming by rupture of blood vessel of that organ. Give more vegetable food, such as watercress or sweet apple.

Yorkshire Canary (Suspect).—Chronic enlargement of liver, then acute inflammation, in which the lungs became involved. This latter condition may have been hastened by the journey to and from the show, together with the excitement during the show, but it would have taken place, anyhow.

PARK AND LAKE AVICULTURE.

Feeding a Sea-Gull.

G. N.—These birds will eat any sort of scraps, like a Jackdaw, but when first procured it is best to give raw fish and meat, and continue giving some of this whenever convenient. I do not know that they eat grit or green food (except seaweed at times), but it could do no harm to give these things. Such birds are usually kept loose in gardens, where they can pick up what they like, such as worms, etc., which are natural food. They will also catch mice and sparrows.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

An Address (J. H., Leeds).—The address is Mr. J. Trengove, 7, High-st., Rishton, Blackburn.

Making Cage Fronts (One Willing to Learn).—We will look into this matter and deal with it next week.

Washing Birds for Show (Amateur).—You will find a fully illustrated article dealing with the washing of birds in "Cage Birds Annual," for 1907, post free 9d. (only one or two copies left).

Illustrated Ideas (D. W. Tatten).—The matter is in our artist's hands. These things have to take their turn. (W. H. Tansey).—We have given this before. (S. Thorpe).—Already been used. (F. A. Phillips).—Both those you send have appeared previously.

A "Railway" Cage (W. Alderson).—We cannot tell you ourselves, but we know that cages with food and water vessels arranged for the birds to pull them up can be bought for two shillings or so from any large cage maker. Shall we publish your letter and see if one or other of our readers can help you?

Enclosing a copy of the Cinnamon Marked Yorkshire Canary Club's handbook of rules and list of members (which is very tastefully got up and nicely printed), Messrs. Garnett and Towers, the hon secs., write: "The present year is in every respect a record one, our membership now standing at nearly 270. This proves the popularity of our favourite variety, and it now only remains for our members to give every support to the shows which have been granted our patronage. Every effort has been made to make the handbook as complete and as correct as possible, but should any errors or omission have been made we can only apologise, and promise to rectify same as early as possible. A copy of the book has been forwarded to every member, but should any have gone astray we shall be pleased to forward another on application. The following new members have been registered:—F. Slater (Sandyiane), B. Buckle (Allerton), Tom Moss and G. Bray (Huddersfield), and E. Shepherd (Bolton Woods). Additional contributions to our specials' fund have been promised by Messrs. A. Hirst (Accrington) (2s. 6d.), and T. Bentley (Cleckheaton) (2s. 6d.). May we point out to the secretaries of Yorkshire Union shows having our patronage that the novice classes for Cinnamon marks should not appear in the schedule along with the novice classes in connection with the Yorkshire Union. We note they are included in the Sandy Lane schedule, and this is likely to give a wrong impression The Union novice classes are limited to £5 5s., and are confined to members of the Union. The C.M.Y. classes are open to anyone who has not won a first prize previous to the current season, and are unlimited in price. Furthermore, the points gained in C.M.Y. novice classes do not count for the Union medals. We suggest that these classes should be printed to follow the open C.M.Y. classes, so as to avoid confusion. We shall be pleased to send full particulars of the club to any intending new members, and are hoping to reach the 300 mark before the end of the year." The address of the hon. secs. is 8, Colne Road, Glusburn, Crosshills, nr. Keighley.

Southern Norwich P.C. and Clapham Show.

SIR,—Owing to the wrong classification at Clapham show (according to Rule 10), and the society not being able to alter same, after the pointing out of the error by me, members of the S.N.P.C. are notified that we shall have to withdraw our patronage from this show. At the same time I trust Norwich fanciers will still support them.

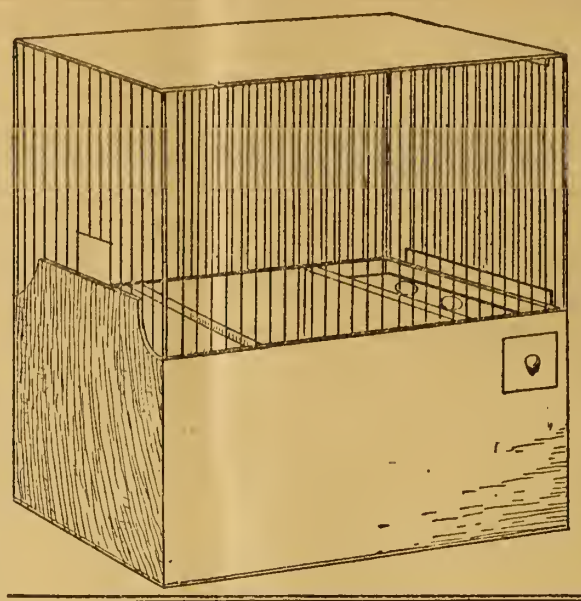
The C. Barwell Benefit Fund.

SIR,—Kindly allow me to thank those of your readers who subscribed towards my benefit to enable me to get out in the country to live. I have been here at Grendon, near Northampton, a month, and I am feeling a lot better for being in the fresh air. I am spending a lot of time amongst my old friends, the Britishers, in their wild state instead of having them in cages ready for the show bench, which hobby I had to give up on account of my long illness. I can catch Bullfinches and other birds outside the garden, and so can earn a few shillings. I am in nowise able to follow my employment.

C. BARWELL.

The Return of a Chaffinch.



SIR,—I have seen a great many little incidents of our cage birds from time to time which are very interesting, and which prove that it is not cruel to keep them in confinement. If it were, they would not return to their cages when once at large. On October 6th I was feeding my birds in the aviary when one of the Chaffinches slipped out and rested in the creeper on the house side, looking round for a little while. Then he went into a bush where he found some Sparrows, and amused himself hopping after them until they bolted. The Chaffinch went after them in quick pursuit, until I lost sight of him. In five minutes he returned to the bush, and then, getting on the aviary to have a look at his companions, stayed for a few minutes, after which he went off. Knowsley Park being within 100 yards of my house, I never thought I should see the Chaffinch again, so I made my way back satisfied that I had lost him. Next morning I went into the yard at eight o'clock, and the first bird I saw was the Chaffinch trying to get into the aviary. Not daring to open the aviary, I fetched his cage out, and he made his way straight into it whilst I was only a yard away. I have moulted the Finch in a cage, but gave him a week or two in the aviary to get the use of his wings.

A. WELLINGS.

Some Tame Specimens of the Wild and Wary Redshank.

SIR,—Perhaps your readers may be interested in the following:—I live in Kilrush, a town on the Shannon estuary. Our house has a small garden divided by a low stone wall only from the road, on which there is a constant traffic. Last year during the winter the following birds came to food thrown only a few yards away from the dining-room window—Common Gull, Kittiwake and Blackheaded Gull, Rooks, Starlings and Larks, besides Rock and Meadow Pipits and Redshanks. It is the Redshanks' coming which I consider curious, for we all know that this bird is a particularly wild and wary one. Yet (and not in very hard weather either), a pair of these birds constantly frequented the garden searching for worms and grubs, and have often remained there when I was walking in full view along a path not ten yards away from them. I wish to know if any of your readers have had a like experience? The Gulls were delightfully tame, and made a beautiful picture—ten or twelve of the lovely birds, the tiny Kittiwake, the red-billed Blackhead, and the large and handsome Herring Gull all hovering in the air at once. Kilrush is rich in bird life. I have noticed the Lesser Black-backed Gull, the Oyster-catcher, Cormorant, Hooded and Carrion Crows, Curlew, Wild Duck, Redshank, Dunlin, Guillimot, Heron, Sparrow Hawk, Kestrel, Kingfisher, Lapwing, Barn and Tawny Owls, Ringed Plover, Puffin, Common Sandpiper, Common Skua (rather a rare bird), Snipe and Widgeon; besides Wheatears, Stonechats, Whinchats, Wagtails (Grey, Pied and Yellow), Redstart, Rock, Meadow and Wood Pipits, all the Finches (including Linnets, Greenfinch, Chaffinch, Brambling, Lesser Redpoll, Goldfinch, Bullfinch), Spotted Flycatcher, Turtle and Ring Doves, Cuckoo, Blackbird, Thrush, Redwing, Fieldfare, Missel Thrush, Starlings (in thousands), Lesser Whitethroat, Wren, Goldcrest, Chiff Chaff, Willow Warbler, Sedge Warbler, Blue, Great, Cole and Marsh Tits, Swallows, House and Sand Martins and Swifts, Tree Creepers, Corn Yellow and Reed Buntings, Jay, Magpie, Jackdaw, and, of course, Robins and Sparrows—in all, about 71 species, a very respectable list, I think, for one place. I have seen and identified all I have named, though there may be others that I have yet to discover, as I have been only a year here.

The Contest Cage of Northern Fanciers.

SIR,—We note that Mr. Barnard says he would be pleased to see the class of cage we Northern fanciers use. We have therefore much pleasure in sending you a sketch of a Linnet contest cage, which all Northern fanciers use at the contests, especially in Leeds, Hull, York, etc. We were glad to have the cages of the south-country Linnet men put before us in CAGE BIRDS, as it is this exchange of views which helps along the hobby we all love, and brings about a good understanding.

DEARLOVE AND ALLEN.

My Experiences in Foreign Bird Keeping.

SIR,—For the last twelve years, the keeping of foreign birds has been my particular hobby, although nearly all my life I have kept both British birds and Canaries. Even at the early age of eight years I went out with a friend a few years older than myself and caught Greenfinches and Redpolls by means of a call bird and bird lime. During the last few years the keeping of foreign birds has been taken up largely by very many bird-lovers, and would be more so if some of them knew that foreign birds are practically easy to keep, given, of course, healthy specimens to start with, and a suitable place to keep them in, although many are kept in an ordinary living-room, and do fairly well. Not being blessed with a superfluous amount of cash to be able to build an aviary out of doors, and wanting to have a separate place all to myself, or, rather, the birds to themselves, I looked round for the next place, and that was a spare room. My wife, always willing to help me in any matter that she thinks will end alright, very kindly cleaned a spare bedroom on the south side of the house, which, fortunately, was at the back of the building, and then I set about preparing it for my feathered friends. I made two large wire flights at one end, and erected a row of "Quaker Oats" boxes each side, made into cages, and piled on the top of each other, three high, with a two-inch space between them, to keep down red mite, dust, etc. One advantage the bedroom has over outdoor places is that one is hardly, if ever, troubled with mice. The birds I have kept at different times include the following:—Rose-breasted Cockatoos, Indian Ringnecked Parrakeets, Green Budgerigars, Cockatiels, White and Green-headed Lovebirds, Java Sparrows, Waxbills, Avadavats, Mannikins, Bulbuls, Saffron Finches, Pekin Robins, and one or two others. The keeping is inexpensive if one is careful how he manages his stock, as many fanciers waste more seeds than the birds eat by allowing them to spill it on the floor of the cages or aviaries; and no birds will eat seeds off the floor if there are any in the seed vessels. Rose-breasted Cockatoos I have found to be about the most hardy of all the larger birds, and about the easiest to keep, providing the bird is a healthy one when it leaves the dealer's hands. They are fairly plain talkers if properly taken in hand when young, and also become exceedingly tame. The one I have at the present time comes out on my hand, and rests on my shoulder every time I go to feed it. It is an excellent talker for a bird of this species, and it can say several things quite as plainly as any Grey or Amazon Parrots I have heard. It whistles the dog, and says: "Come here, 'Ramper.'" "What are you doing?" "Hello," "Nellie," etc. About the only thing these birds cannot stand is wind and rain. They can stand any amount of cold. I usually put mine out of doors in the morning, and there it stays until evening. One fault these birds have, if fault it can be called, is their ear-piercing shrieking. It fairly frightens the neighbour's children. The best food to keep them in health is small maize, oats, wheat, and sunflower, with a bit of hemp now and again. The best green food is chickweed, and almost all kinds of ripe fruit will be eagerly eaten, especially bananas, plums, apples, and pears. Colours: Head, white; breast, rose-pink; back, dove colour. Indian Ringnecked Parrakeets are easy birds to keep, although they cannot stand the cold nearly so well as a Rose-breasted Cockatoo. Neither, in my opinion, are they as good mimics or talkers, though some people would rather have a Green Indian Parrot. They become fairly tame in time, but it takes longer to tame them than it does a Cockatoo, on account of their shy nature. One specimen I had for three years, and I could never go near his cage but what he would mount to the top and shriek like mad, making vicious attempts to peck at my hand. The best food for this bird is Canary, hemp, dary, wheat, and oats. Green food they do not seem to take kindly to, the best being a little lettuce. Budgerigars are both handsome and easy to keep; at the same time, they are fairly cheap to buy and easy to breed. If two or three pairs are kept together in a large space and provided with cocoanut husks, it is best to supply a few more husks than one has pairs of birds, as they otherwise sometimes take a liking to a husk that another pair has chosen; then there is a squabble. The food of these birds consists of Canary and white millet, and an occasional spray millet. When the birds have young ones about, the only thing they require in addition to their ordinary diet is a piece of household bread dipped in water or milk, and squeezed nearly dry. The only difference, practically speaking, in the sex is the cere; in the male it is blue, the cere of the hen being pale green. Cockatiels are almost as commonly kept among aviculturists as any foreign birds now upon the market. Not over expensive, and easy to keep, they are ideal birds for a beginner to try his hand with. They pair up and breed, too, fairly well in an aviary, laying every other day. But the one disappointment I have often experienced with these is that they have a tendency to desert their eggs, or hatch them out and then desert the young when they are about two days old. As regards food, Canary, white and spray millet supply nearly all their wants, with a bit of green food and an occasional tit-bit in the shape of an apple or banana. In colour the male is more gaudy than the female, having orange-coloured cheeks to his mate's dull brick-coloured one, the other parts of the body being ashen grey, with barred tails and white flights in wings. Many fanciers would not keep Lovebirds and Java Sparrows together, but I have experienced no difficulty in doing so. Of the two, the Javas seem the more quarrelsome, the Lovebirds mostly sitting in pairs on opposite ends of the perches. Neither of these is very fond of breeding in aviaries or large cages, although they have been bred in captivity. The Grey Javas have also been crossed with the white ones. I have never personally had either of the species show any inclination to breed, although they all like to keep in their separate pairs. They are capital birds to keep for one with limited means, being hardy, long-lived and inexpensive. The Grey Java, in my opinion, is an interesting and pretty bird in an aviary, his white cheeks showing a grand contrast to his black head, pink bill, and slate-coloured body. Waxbills, Avadavats and Mannikins are all similar in their habits, and do well together in an aviary, if not too thickly populated; although they do not even then very often show any signs of pugnacity towards each other. Their food chiefly consists of Canary and white millet, with chickweed as a green food. Of the three kinds, the Mannikins, especially the Black-headed ones, are a hardy and long-lived species, and I have at the present time three in my aviary (two hens and one cock, another hen having died a couple of years ago), which I have had for the past eight years, and they were adult birds when they came into my possession. My experience with Bulbuls is only limited. I have only had one, and that only lived five weeks after I got it. In my opinion, they require something more than Canary seed, millet, and mealworms, and that something wants finding, although specimens have been kept for quite a length of time by some aviculturists. Saffron Finches give a gay colour to any aviary, especially if it contains mixed birds, their bright mixed yellow and black coats giving them a very attractive appearance. They are hardy birds, and very ready to go to nest if given suitable quarters; in fact, they have been crossed with Canaries by some fanciers, though it has never been my lot to see a Hybrid from these two species. Canary seed seems to be their staple diet, and although they will eat millet, those I have kept have shown a decided preference for the former seed. Pekin Robins, or Nightingales as they are sometimes called by fanciers, are rather delicate, and one is lucky to get one good, healthy specimen out of a dozen, the birds seldom seeming to get over the journey to this country. If one is fortunate in getting a healthy specimen, and one that will sing, it will well repay him for all the trouble he has had to get it to live, as the birds are pretty to look at, and their song, though peculiar, is a nice melody, especially to the ears of a foreign-bird lover. For food, they require a good insectivorous mixture, and plenty of mealworms, spiders, dried flies, and any living insects that can be got for them. I hope these remarks may be of service to the many CAGE BIRDS readers who may peruse them.

Dulwich O.S. Show.

An Appeal.

SIR,—Many thanks for your splendid report of our show. All exhibits were packed and sent off by rail and the hall cleared of staging and everything by 10.45 p.m. second day of show. Clean prize cards will be sent to the winners shortly. We regret to inform you that we have another financial loss to face. We attribute this to our early date, many fanciers writing to say their birds were not ready, and regretting not being able to send. However, we appeal to members and friends who sympathise with our misfortunes to help us to reduce this deficit by subscribing to the show fund which is still open and we hope we shall not appeal in vain, or the D.O.S. must go under. Accepting an invitation from the society about 500 scholars, boys and girls from the various L.C.C. schools in Dulwich, and also from St. John's Schools, visited the show with their teachers for an "ornithological lesson." They appeared surprised and delighted with the various exhibits, some of them seeing some of our own British birds for the first time in their lives. They expressed great pleasure at their visit which we trust will have beneficial results to our hobby.

WOOLHOUSE AND ROGERS.

United Kingdom Belgian Canary Association.

A Cup Matter,

SIR,—As Hon. Secretary of the U.K.B.C.A. I feel it incumbent upon me to answer "Enquirer's" letter which appeared in your issue of last week, much as I resent taking notice of anonymous writers. Judging from his familiarity with our rules, I might presume he would know the Secretary's address, and the first step towards getting the desired information would have been to approach him—unless he has some ulterior motive in rushing into print. When I appealed to members two years ago for specials, Mr. Reddihough kindly offered to provide a cup for the member who won same twice (not necessarily in succession), and as the Association's medals are presented only when won, I presume that Mr. Reddihough considered it would be time enough then. However, I think every member of the U.K.B.C.A. can only bear witness that Mr. Reddihough's support of the Association has been real and tangible and not imaginative as "Enquirer" would infer. I can scarcely follow "Enquirer" when he says he interviewed the winner of 1909 and 1910, seeing that the City of Glasgow is the first of this season's series. As I am at present in Scotland I hope to be at the Glasgow show, and will be pleased to convene a meeting of our members for Saturday afternoon, and if "Enquirer" is desirous of any further information, I shall be pleased to meet him there. Our membership is open, and this is the first step towards fostering and elevating the Belgian Canary to its one-time proud position as "the king of the Fancy."

WM. B. COBB, Hon. Secretary.

A Remedy Wanted for a Fatal Disease.

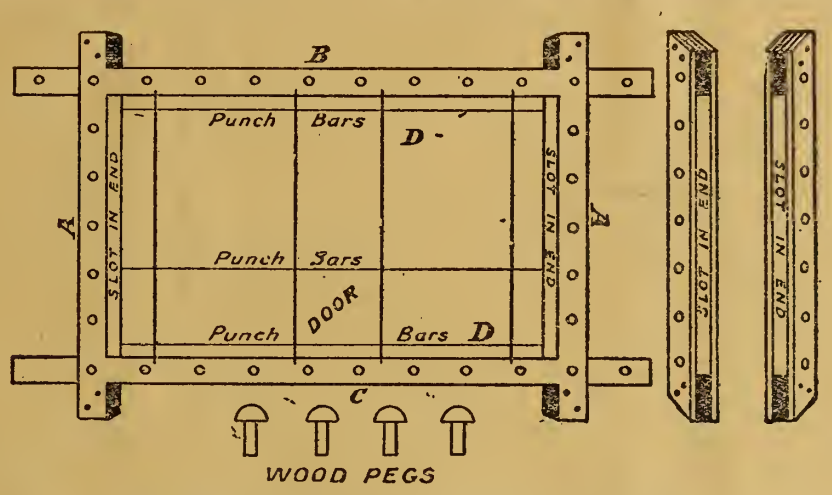
SIR,—I am no bird fancier or doctor, but knowing some Linnet and Chaffinch fanciers up North I get to hear of a thing or two. Now R. Davis and "A Novice" want to know a remedy for the fatal disease and diarrhœa. I have just cured a lady's Canary (and it was very loose) with a simple remedy, that is, cold tea (not too strong) instead of water for a few days. I have tried it on fresh caught Linnets when they have been soft, and have found it alright.

J. COLE.

SIR,—In answer to Mr. Davies, either the citrate or tincture of iron and quinine will do, both being the same thing, one being in the crystal and the other in the liquid form. One tablespoonful of the citrate should be mixed with 8ozs. of water, in which it soon dissolves. Then give one teaspoonful to each bird in their drinking water when they show the first symptoms. I have one bird in particular that had the disease—one that I have bred with for two years. He was paired to two hens this year, and both died. At the time I got the above recipe he had started the same way; so also had three others. I turned them all loose at the same time. The bird mentioned is quite through the moult, and is now as healthy as ever he was. In fact, the birds I have left seem to have benefited through being let loose, moulting out quicker, and seeming healthier and livelier. I was not in a position to try the caustic soda I had recommended to me, so cannot say personally what the effect would be. I have had all my cages scrubbed out with hot water and carbolic soap. When they were dry, I did them all out with a solution of pure carbolic acid and water. Then I closed the attic up and burnt a lot of rock sulphur. Next, I got some lime and slacked it, and did all my cages out with it; I did the attic, too. Also I had the floor well scrubbed with a good disinfectant. All that was not valuable I burnt. I am letting the windows remain open for a week; then I shall put my birds back after being away about ten weeks. If I have not "got shut" of the disease after all I have done I shall feel inclined to give it up as a bad job. I advise "Novice" to go through the same process if he has any birds left. Get them away, for it is nearly a certainty that if they are left in the same room you will lose them all. What I have recommended I have well proved, and so have other fanciers. Hoping anyone in the same predicament will get the same benefit,

ROBT. ODDY.

SIR,—The letter of Mr. Robert Oddy concludes with a sentence which is of the most fallacious and mischievous description, and as the fallacy is an exceedingly popular one in some quarters, and undoubtedly put forward in ignorance and good faith, the writer will probably read my remarks in the same friendly spirit in which they are written. After mentioning the good effects his birds derived from a course of quinine, he goes on to inform us it is much used on the Gold Coast for fevers in the human race—fevers, by the way, which are probably totally different in their nature and origin to the fever we have to deal with in birds—and concludes, "if it is a good medicine for fanciers, why is it not so for his birds?" The suggestion clearly is that what is good for the bird is equally good for mankind. Now, although this is the spirit in which nearly all bird ailments are now treated, it is a most erroneous one. If birds were constituted similarly to man, one might expect to find them influenced in much the same way by drugs, foods, or other substances. But the striking difference in their whole anatomy, and the modification which fits each family for filling its own particular place in the scheme of Nature, is such that even the food, which is the daily sustenance of one species, would promptly prove fatal to another. To take an extreme example, how long should we be able to keep a Canary alive on a diet of filthy carrion, such as a Vulture or Carrion Crow would flourish and grow fat upon? Or how long would it survive upon the less disgusting pabulum of snails, slugs, and earthworms, such as would keep a Thrush in the pink of health and condition? Yet this is but comparing common foods of some birds with others. To come nearer the point, how long would one expect a man to preserve his health upon a diet of decaying potatoes such as are discarded and left upon the surface of the ground in the fields when the crop is lifted? The rejected tubers lie upon the ground, and after being exposed to a few night frosts, will be found to be a mass of soft, squelchy pap, upon which the House Sparrow, I know for a certainty, and probably many other birds, feast with gusto. Now, as with food, so with drugs and similar articles, and experiments will go to prove that such a surmise is correct. It is a fact that drugs do not affect all forms of life in the same manner. Even poisonous fruits and plants are not equally harmful to all forms of life. Many so-called poisonous fruits and berries are eaten by birds as food, whilst to come to drugs, pure and simple, the common barn-door fowl is said to be scarcely influenced by an amount of opium which would invariably prove fatal to a man. How far this is really correct I will not say, not having made the experiment, but it is given on good authority. Yet this would be no more remarkable than the result of some experiments conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture. In examining the contents of wild birds' stomachs it was found that the stomach of the Cat-bird contained the fruits of sumach and poison-ivy in season, whilst the Blue-bird contained sumach and the poke-berry, all poisonous fruits. Again, from one pound weight of pellet dirt collected from under the roosting place of the Common Crow, and examined, were extracted no fewer than 1041 seeds of poison ivy, and 341 seeds of the poison sumach; and a Crow which was kept caged for experiment was said to devour the berries with greater relish than any other fruit obtainable, and on one occasion swallowed 80 of the berries in a few moments. Such facts cannot fail to convince any thinking person of the utter fallacy of the theory that what is good for mankind is equally good for his birds in the same capacity, or even that it is of any service to them in any capacity. They should also serve to show the mischief that may be wrought by arguing from man to bird, and endeavouring to treat them for the same ailments and with the same drugs. Who can say that birds have not their own peculiar disease, of which we, as yet, know little or nothing, or to what particular class of drugs they may be peculiarly susceptible? One thing is certain, that in these matters our knowledge is yet in quite an embryonic stage. To hark back to the letter which has prompted these remarks, your readers must not by any means interpret them as a denial of the efficacy of the tonic medicine mentioned by the correspondent. Quite the contrary. The main purpose is to show proof of the mischievous theory referred to. Quinine combined with the citrate of iron is one of the very best tonics that can be employed, and it is quite within the bounds of probability that it would prove useful in the case in question by increasing the resisting powers of the birds, and thereby enabling them to survive the attack and throw off its effects. But, as a "cure," it will be futile to look to this medicine. General hygiene, cleanliness, and rigid isolation and disinfection, with the breeding-ground, so to speak, of the bacilli cut off, must always be held to religiously. The method of disinfecting the cages given by this writer has, by the way, much to recommend it, but every particle about the room, and all cage appliances, must undergo the same thorough treatment to be sure of making it quite effectual. The most objectionable point about it is its rather risky and destructive effect, but this only needs care and caution on the part of the operator to render it of little moment.



A LOOKER-ON.

The Payment of Prize Money at Scottish Shows.

Is a Cage Bird Union Possible?

SIR,—As advice to secretaries and exhibitors may not be out of place now that the show season is on us, I think it my duty to draw the attention of secretaries to a matter respecting the payment of prize money. As the early shows have a great advantage over the late ones, the secretaries of the former should consider the later ones by paying out prize money by the Monday following their shows. By so doing they will assist other shows to get entries, as most of us exhibitors are working men, and depend on our weekly wages, and times are so very dull this year that they will not be able to make entries at the late shows until they get whatever return they may have from the earlier shows. The later shows have a lot of disadvantages to contend against, such as the refusal to enter by unsuccessful exhibitors who pay railway porterage and entry money, and yet get no return (they get disheartened and commence to keep their birds at home). And what becomes of the late shows? The result is short entries and only half prize money, or the first prize withheld, and then the successful exhibitors begin to grumble and think it's not worth their while to send their birds out and pay railway porterage. For although they do win they have very little credit or honour due to their birds as the railway company get hold of all the returns of the exhibitors in porterage and travelling expenses. Now, if secretaries would be more punctual in paying prize money to the successful exhibitors at their shows they would be doing their duty towards other show secretaries besides giving their assistance in helping them out of their difficulties. Now a word to the unsuccessful exhibitors; they should not get disheartened with the decision of the first or second judge, for even then one's bird may not be ready, and the third time one shows it it may be successful even under the same judge. Birds are not always looking in the same condition, and, as I have often heard Judge Pettigrew say, he never judges a bird for what it has done or for what it is likely to turn out to be; he judges them for what they are when he meets them. And he is right in doing so. I wish there were more of his kind engaged to officiate at our Scottish shows. It would be good for our shows. Now for a way out of the heavy railway porterage. Let us unite ourselves together and form a Union of cage bird men, and then we may find out some means of getting the railway porterage reduced. Let me suggest that we form a specialist club in each of our counties in Scotland of the different varieties of Canaries and one for British and foreign birds and Mules; then let each of these clubs form a county branch of the Union—this would bring fanciers more into touch with each other. Then, too, let each of the counties appoint from among themselves a delegate or delegates according to their membership, the delegates to be instructed by the members of their branch what policy it would be most advisable to adopt for the governing body or federation, this governing body or federation to be made up from the county delegates. The delegates should represent exhibitors, secretaries, and judges throughout the respective counties, and the federation should hold their meetings in Glasgow or in Edinburgh. Each county branch should pay so much for each member, and each member should be registered through the county branch into the Scottish Union or Federation. A lot of things could be made right if we had a good Union, and the Union could have rules and laws whereby they could try any sort of case, and either suspend the exhibitors for a stated time or expel them according to the nature of the case. I would like to see some more able pen than mine take up the Union question.

HOPEFUL UNIONIST.

The Feeding of Softbills Abroad.

SIR,—Will Mr. Nelson kindly tell us if the Chinese dried flies can be obtained in this country and if they are anything like the dried flies which are sold for bird food, and which, I believe, come from America?

Alleged Mutilation of Exhibition Birds.

SIR,—Seeing in your issue of October 15th a letter anent the ill-treatment of birds at Peterborough show, I think it only fair to the officials to say that my birds (small Softbills) arrived home in perfect feather and condition, showing that they must have received every care and attention.

A. JACKSON.

SIR,—I notice in last week's issue a letter from Mr. Geo. Hall re his Buff Norwich hen at Peterborough show. The insinuations contained are both unfair and ridiculous, and can only originate from one whose mind runs that way. I would ask Mr. Hall why any fancier should risk all that exposure would mean to mutilate a bird that had not got in the cards, especially as it would be utterly impossible for any person to have plucked a feather from any bird in that class without being seen by someone? I sympathise with Mr. Hall, but must ask him to withdraw the imputations, and not try to damage a society which, for care of birds entrusted to them, stands absolutely second to none in the country. I have just heard from the judge, stating that the bird was alright at judging time; which emphasises my reply. Did Mr. Hall notice it when unpacking; also did he look inside the case for any feathers?

SYDNEY L. COCKS.

Should Goldfinches be Colour-fed for Exhibition?

SIR,—It is not often that I feel like replying to letters, although I very often enjoy a quiet smile at some of them; and it was a good smile when I read Mr. A. Williams' letter re the colour-fed Goldfinches at Longton show. I may say that my Goldfinch that stood second has not even seen colour food, nor do I think any of the Goldfinches at Longton show had. Goldfinches that you want to moult out for showing must never be colour-fed, or you are sure to spoil them, as you can only colour-feed the wings; it is impossible to colour-feed the blaze. I have seen lots of real good Goldfinches spoilt by giving them colour food, but never one improved by it. I find that early moulted Goldfinches, and Goldfinches that carry the best colour, are the birds that are carried out into the country (by catchers, as a rule), and given, along with fresh air, plenty of wild seeds, thistle, dandelion, shepherd's purse, and any others they will eat. Linnets treated the same way nearly always come out a good colour. I think if Mr. A. Williams will give the above a trial he will have his own Goldfinch "colour-fed" next year.

How to Make Movable Frames and Wire Cage Fronts.

SIR,—I am sending you a sketch of a shifting frame for making punch bar fronts (any size). It only requires six lengths of wood—four pieces 30ins. long, 2ins. wide, and ½in. thick and two pieces 36ins long. See A and B in sketch. Then cut four pieces of wood 3ins. long, 2ins. wide, ½in. thick, and place these between (as shown in right of sketch), and glue them. Put two screw nails in to bind. This forms a slot for B to shift to any size Put ½in. holes right through frame one inch apart, mark them off even distance, so that when you shift it it will always keep your wire fronts right. Then you put four ½in. wood pegs in each corner (see sketch). I will now show how to make a wire front. Take your bradawl and put four holes in frame (See B) ⅝in. deep, then put four holes in piece C. ½in. deep to correspond with Fig. B. Place four wires in Fig. B, then put your punch bars on from the bottom, three in number (see sketch), and then draw down your wires in ½in. holes (See C). Now put your top punch bar ½in. from frame (See D); solder each one, and then put your bottom punch bar ½in. off frame. Solder each one, and put your middle punch bar 5ins. from the bottom. Solder each one. This forms correct height for door. You can slide each wire up through the middle punch bar, and draw them down in position flush with the top and bottom punch bar. Then solder them. When all are soldered you can take the front out of frame finished.

A Canary with One Wing.

SIR,—I have had a cock Canary hatched this year with only one wing. I would like to know whether any other readers of CAGE BIRDS have had such a freak? He is now in full song, and seems just as able to get about as if he had both wings.

Some Questions for Bird-catchers.

SIR,—Can any of your readers tell me if it is possible to catch Goldfinches or Bullfinches with bird-lime by using only a bracod hen bird pegged down near thistles or docks, as the case may be, without needing to have call birds as well in cages? Also, what are the best sorts of twigs to put birdlime on? And are the twigs any good after being once used? Can birds be caught in winter by pegging a hen Finch down on a heap of screenings where they have been thrashing? If so, would it be best to use bird-lime or a pair of clap nets?

AN AMATEUR.

The Modern Norwich Plainhead.

SIR,—I was much surprised to read the remarks of Charles Key re the Norwich Plainheads at Longton show, and turned immediately to the report of same to see what class of exhibitors was represented there; also the reporter's comments. I was not present at Longton, nor had I any special interest in the show, but I feel sure the writer of the letter must be somewhat prejudiced. I am a fancier of nearly thirty years' standing. Norwich Plainheads were my first venture. Then and for some considerable time subsequently such specimens as described by Charles Key could win if they had colour in their favour, as no less than forty points out of the hundred were allowed for colour and condition. Although I have been out of the Fancy for a few years, so far as exhibiting is concerned, I have always taken a keen interest in Norwich Plainheads, making a special study of type, and have watched with intense satisfaction the improvement of late years in this direction; and I venture to assert that the Norwich Plainheads of to-day are vastly superior in type to anything ever seen before. Again, I am very doubtful if such types of Norwich as these described by Charles Key could find a habitation in the rooms of the successful exhibitors at Longton, and with an up-to-date judge placing the cards the idea of their winning appears to me simply absurd. Of all varieties of exhibition Canaries I consider the ideal Norwich Plainhead the most difficult to produce on paper. I enclose you my idea of what an ideal Norwich Plainhead should be. Ideal it is in the fullest sense, for I don't expect to ever see it excelled by a living specimen. And this is what ideals should be. Directly the ideals are attained they remain ideals no longer, and the standard of excellence must be raised, or in other words, an advanced ideal is required. I am aware that some of my remarks smatter of the egotist, but if my ideal could be reproduced in your valuable paper, I should have little censure from Norwich Plainhead fanciers especially sticklers for type.

W. WATSON.

A Beginner in Search of Canaries.

SIR,—Reading CAGE BIRDS lately I was much struck by the very apt piece of philosophy contained in the reply to "Silo," re amateurs, and their evident modesty (?) in owning up to failures. Being one myself, I can vouch for the truth of this, judging by my own particular case. However, as "open confession is good for the soul," by your permission I'll relate my experiences these last two seasons. Two years ago my knowledge of the genus "Canariensis" was almost nil. In the autumn of 1907 I got a present of a yellow green Norwich cock Canary from a friend, a breeder in a small way, who smilingly said: "Get a hen now, as soon as you can, and start breeding on your 'own hook.'" The bird turning out a grand singer, my brother suggested the following spring that I buy a good hen and try my luck at breeding. Accordingly I sent to a dealer in Dublin and purchased a big Norwich hen for the sum of 4s. 6d. Of course, I had to procure a cage (beg, borrow or steal). To avoid any risks I took the alternative—to make one myself. It was an all-wire, 20in. by 16in. by 11in., enamelled terra-cotta colour, both inside and out. Everything seemed lovely until I popped the hen in upon the cock without warning, and without the usual "making up" taking place. Then the battle began in deadly earnest—scarcely a rest, even for food, on either side. At length—in spite of the larger bulk of the hen—the cock gained the mastery, but at great cost. He was badly lamed by the furious onslaughts of the other, she darting out of the nest and bowling him clean off the perch by sheer weight a dozen times a day. I began to have grave forebodings as to the ultimate result of the union, when lo, and behold! to my great surprise, the hen went to nest there and then, laying four nice big eggs right off the reel! She commenced to sit, and eventually hatched out two (the others being clear). As the cock did not assist his spouse (I had taken him away for peace' sake), she went slack in feeding, the chicks dying about a week later. On the second round things seemed a bit rosier looking, but "all things are not what they seem." There were four young out of four eggs, and doing grand. I let the cock remain for a bit, but getting another hen from Sheffield (a small, variegated buff, the size of a Siskin), I transferred him to the latter. The cock took matters very coolly, and got "chummy" with his new partner inside of a week. The little hen laid one egg, and immediately started (before I was aware of it), to sit out her time. At length she hatched out a specimen, the size of a "bumble bee." Feeding it only about three days, the microbe came to an end. About this time I had been making fearful efforts to prepare proper egg-food, resulting in the most nasty messes imaginable. Next I tried my hand with a compound said to last about a century, and keep fresh all the time. Luckily the birds were too wise to partake of it, and thereby saved their lives. Turning round to find a good substitute, I sent to London for a tin of Special Canary Food put up by a well-known firm. During this time the big hen had been busy, and the four young were almost ready to take the perches. Soon they were briskly hopping thereon, and picking up the above food, when alas! alack! the unnatural mother commenced to pluck them with the most cold-blooded assiduity. Ere a week elapsed I had lost three, the survivor (a big cock bird) saving his life by fighting for it "tooth and nail." Result, one bird for my first season as a fancier. Starting with high hopes, and the most sanguine expectations, this present year I put up two pairs (the fifth of April last). The second pair were the young cock aforementioned, paired with the lilliputian hen got from the "City of Blades." Like every other novice, I was eager for the fray, determined to break all records. But I had reckoned without consulting the Clerk of the Weather. Starting tolerably fair, especially during February, it turned to arctic conditions from April up to the end of June. The young pair got into swing first, but the cock was too young (at this time being little over nine months old). After the little hen had laid four eggs, and the fourteenth day had come, there was no result. Upon the sixteenth evening I took the eggs, and, breaking them, found all were clear, except one, which had been fertilised, but hadn't developed the germ. Summing up, the first two rounds of each pair were a total failure, with the solitary exception of one bird. The big hen hatched out two (from four eggs) the second round. Upon the fourth day I found one lying on the platform beside the nest almost dead. I put it back but found it dead the following day. Three days later—going to look and see how things were—I saw the remaining one lying on the cage-bottom. Taking it out, and seeing it move, I breathed on it three or four times, then placed it back in the nest. Two days later it was as big again, and seemed nothing the worse for its mishap. When three weeks old it left the nest, and was a very nice bird (pure white in plumage).

The Feeding and Keeping of Linnets in Health.

SIR,—On page 97 of August 21st, Mr. A. Wilkinson asks how best to keep Linnets alive. About a month ago a dealer told me to pour boiling water on to German rape seed and let the seed soak for 12 hours, afterwards feeding with same. I am trying same, and the result is satisfactory up to date.

J. KAY.

SIR,—Seeing in CAGE BIRDS a note from "Novice" and J. E. Walker about moulting Linnets, I may say I sent my Larks in to moult this year, and they have come out beautifully clean, and are coming on song nicely. I only gave a 1s. each for them last year. I have also moulted Linnets the same way: thus, one pennyworth of syrup of buckthorn; just colour the water every other day and the feathers will soon begin to drop. Keep the birds out of draught. I wish there was a Lark club somewhere in London.

SIR,—Having arranged with a friend at Broseley to take our birds to Dawley Show, I had to stay the night before in Broseley, which I did at a public-house, whose landlady has a pet, a beautiful Goldfinch-Canary Mule. This took my attention a bit. Then I called upon my friend, and we packed up our birds in travelling cases. Off we go. We cross the beautiful River Severn at Ironbridge, over the bridge from which the little town takes its name, it having been one of the first iron bridges, if not the first, erected over water. We pay our toll, and are not long before we are crossing fields and pit molds made by a past generation. We notice some Linnets and a covey of Partridges. The day is rather warm, and our cases hang a bit heavy, but being unable to get a train we struggle on. At last, however, we are getting nearer to Dawley, for we pass Dosegay Church and its churchyard, within which are buried the mortal remains of Big Billy Ball, the Shropshire Giant, of Horsehay, whose height was 5ft. 9½in., and whose weight was 40 stone. A little further and we arrive at Dawley. Here we meet that well-known Shropshire exhibitor, Mr. Brotherhood. We soon stage our birds, and then have a walk in Dawley. The town must be full of cage bird fanciers, for, feeling a little "rough," I made tracks for a barber's shop, where some little songsters were hung up in their cages. I also noticed a case containing the prize cards of a successful exhibitor, artistically arranged with plates of various birds. Afterwards I went into another shop for some picture postcards to send away to friends, and what should be on the counter but a pretty Canary in its trim cage. Later, my friend and I go inside a shop for a "snack," when what should we hear but the chatter of a parrot! After the judging at the show is over, we visit the exhibition. Here on the ground is the very boat that the late Captain Webb used to test the Channel currents with. Captain Webb was born at Dawley, and he is held in high esteem by all Salopians, and should be by all Britons, for he had the courage to fight against great odds. What a lesson we exhibitors and fanciers can take from him! After a success, if we fail, let us try again; better to fail than not try at all. The Cage Bird Section at Dawley Show seemed to be taking nearly all the attention of both ladies and gentlemen, and some very good birds were staged. Three Waxwings were staged, and sometimes you never see one at a large show. In the local Bullfinch class, standing first was a splendid bird, which reflects great credit on its young owner, who told me he had moulted it himself. A nice Skylark I saw was also one of the winners. I offered a mealworm, but it refused it; as a gentleman remarked at the time, perhaps he did not know what it was. Another exhibit that took one's eye was a nearly Albino Mule standing at the head of its class, and it looked so pretty within its green-painted cage with the pink-coloured prize card attached. As I wanted to move my birds before time in order to catch the last train home, my friend and I got the kind permission of the obliging secretary, Mr. Urban Callear, and we soon had our birds packed up and away, leaving Dawley, which, to me, is still a pleasant memory.

WILLIAM P. BELL.

A Successful Season and no Red-mites.

SIR,—Reading CAGE BIRDS weekly, I notice that breeders mention how many young ones they have got, but seldom say how many pairs they put up. Well, I beg to give the pairs first. I had eight pairs and four odd hens, using 12 cages. I started on March 21st. No. 1 pair has laid 24 eggs—5, 5, 7, 3, and 4 in each nest; 15 hatched out and 14 are living. No. 2 pair had 16 eggs and hatched 11—8 are living. No. 3 pair had 14 eggs and hatched 6—4 living. No. 4 pair had 15 eggs and hatched 10—9 living. No. 5 pair had 17 eggs and hatched 7—6 living. No. 6 pair had 5 eggs and hatched them all, and when they were a week old, although the hen was in good health, she appeared to have died in a fit and so I lost the five young ones, not having anywhere to put them. Now I use one of the odd hens with the cock bird. This pair had 7 eggs and hatched 6—1 living, and the hen died. No. 7 pair had 11 eggs and hatched 5, all living. No. 8 pair had 10 eggs and hatched 9, all living. No. 9 pair had 14 eggs and hatched 14—all living. No. 10 pair had 12 eggs and hatched 2—both living; this hen was a good sitter and a good feeder, but the eggs were nearly all clear. No. 11 pair, the hen was a good sitter and laid 4 eggs; she hatched 3 of them, fed them for a week, and then sat on them until they died. In the second nest she hatched 3, fed them 11 days, and then sat on them until two died. I saved one youngster by taking it away and putting it in another nest. I put the hen with another cock and she laid 4 eggs, hatched them all off and fed well. She reared them all and they are nice birds. She laid 3 more eggs and hatched them on August 9th, and they are flying about looking well. No. 12 pair had 13 eggs and hatched 9, all living. I lost one cock bird during the season. Now I have 87 young ones, which are looking fairly well. My egg food is made as follows: One egg boiled hard, a thick slice of old bread all put through a sieve, and about a wineglassful of hemp put through a coffee mill is added. Then I well mix with it some green food (chickweed mostly, or lettuce). Clean water I give daily. The seed is best Canary, gold of pleasure, niger, a small quantity of summer rape, linseed. No colour feed for me either. I always use sand for the bottom of cages, red or white. I have been breeding for about 22 years, and have never seen a red mite till 1908, when they came quickly and put me rather in a fright. But having two or three cages not in use, I shifted the birds (three pairs at a time) into these, and I painted the outsides of the infested cages with paraffin oil. I did the insides with lime and let them stand two or three days. Then I put them up again. Later in the season I went through them again and then again in the Spring of 1909 and have not seen one this year. I stand the cages on little pieces of wood (dipped in oil) to keep them apart; I take them down two or three times during the season and wipe them over with an oily rag.

NORWICH CANARIES.

HOW TO BREED, MANAGE AND EXHIBIT.

By C. A. HOUSE.

Price 1/1 (post free).

The young fancier is told all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor.

This work, written in a plain, practical manner, contains much of untold value to lovers of the Norwich Plainhead Canary. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

The Borrowing of Birds for Exhibition Purposes.

SIR,—At a recent bird show in Nottingham I know for certain that more than one person borrowed Canaries to show in their own names. I am informed there is a great deal of this kind of thing going on in other places besides Nottingham. I condemn the practice as dishonest, unmanly, dishonourable, and the height of meanness; and the men who lend birds to others to show in their own names are equally as bad as those who exhibit them. They are, without doubt, blacklegs, and should be stamped out. What chances have honest exhibitors? I have won about 500 money prizes and specials, and have never borrowed a bird to show in my life. I beg to ask every exhibitor to be manly, and to show his own birds, and his own birds only.

ROBERT HOLMES.

"Going Light": Can it be Cured?

SIR,—In reply to our brother fancier, Nimrod, would he try my noted pill remedy, by which I have saved many a Pigeon from dying and "going light"?—a packet of Thorley's food, a pennyworth of honey, and mix these in a paste and roll into pills, and dry, giving two morning and night by opening the beaks of the birds and putting them down their throats. I might say I got a Canary off a friend of mine who was going to kill it because it was "going light," and this bird is now in full song. I got a little of the soft paste (about a quarter teaspoonful) and put into the finger drawer, as I would the egg food, and took away the seed until the bird ate it; then I placed the seed box back with a little Demerara sugar in his drinking water with success. T. W. BROWN.

SIR,—As I am in the habit of keeping a great many Goldfinches, and have won a great many prizes with these lovely birds, I think I may say without a doubt that Fellowes' Syrup of Hypophosphates is one of the finest remedies I have as yet discovered to do any good for Goldfinches "going light." I had one handsome young cock bird a fortnight ago attacked with this disease. I at once removed him from the other birds, and gave him 12 drops of the syrup in about a wineglassful of water at night. He looked like a ball of feathers in the bottom of the cage, but next night he was on the perch, and now I am pleased to say he is healthy and singing, and the finest bird I have got. Rain water is best for the syrup. I hope other fanciers will try this remedy, and prevent a large number of these valuable birds from dying.

J. HENNERY LEWIS.

The Breeding and Keeping of Mealworms.

SIR,—Like many another question, this seems to crop up with commendable regularity, to show it is one of unfailing interest. When only a small supply is required it is scarcely worth the trouble of producing them one's self, in my opinion, as small users can almost always procure sufficient for their needs. Still, "A Learner" seems to hold a different opinion, and so, perhaps, do others, so here is a method of attaining their object in a small way. A rather shallow wooden box is the first essential—a box in which packets of starch or dry soap are packed is just the thing, and may be procured at any grocer's for a penny or twopence. Some will advise a tin or an earthenware jar—don't use either. They undoubtedly help to prevent the escape of worms by creeping up the side, but they are also very apt to become damp inside, and cause unhealthy condition. Choose a good, sound box, free from cracks, open joints, and bad workmanship. Put in a few more nails to prevent warping. A tiny stream of hot glue run all round the joints inside will further increase its stability, and if a sheet of tin is cut to fit the inside of box closely, and put in on supporting strips of wood nailed on the end of box inside, so as to keep it about half an inch below lid, very few, if any, worms will escape. The centre of the sheet of tin must be well supplied with pin-holes to provide free access of air. They may be made by tapping the head of a sharp brad with a hammer whilst holding the point on the tin, the tin sheet being, of course, placed on a piece of wood meanwhile. Do not make big holes, or some of the young worms, which are very minute indeed, will get through, and turn up at all times in places where they are not wanted. A mere "pin-hole" is the limit of safety in this respect. Next see that the lid is well-hinged, close-fitting, and put two wire hasps and staples on the front to hold it tightly closed. The box is now ready for use. Take out the tin cover, spread a handful or two of oat husks and bits of crumpled paper over the bottom of box, then a layer of bran about half an inch deep, and next a few handfuls of ground oats. A handful of rotten wood may be mixed with it, but is not essential. Cover with a layer of scraps of old woollen, flannel, knitted goods, and bits of paper to a depth of two or three inches, but not more than half full in all. Pour in the worms, put on the tin cover, close box, and keep it in a warm place. Open it once a week, and take out a week's supply. At this season the worms are very rapidly turning into the pupal stage, to become beetles in a month or six weeks afterwards, so that a small user who turns six hundred large worms into the box will probably find the supply exhausted by the time he has used half that number, the remainder being by that time either pupæ or beetles. These must not be used nor destroyed, as the beetles will in due course lay the eggs destined to provide the future colony. A fresh supply of worms must, therefore, be put in to supply one's needs, and this must be repeated until the young brood are large enough to be drawn upon, which will probably not be less than twelve months hence. Once the supply of "natives" commences, such a box will provide a fairly liberal supply of worms for an indefinite period. The food supply of the worms and beetles must, however, be attended to. The lower regions of the colony should be examined about every six months to see if the food supply is sufficient, and a further supply of bran and ground oats put in when necessary. Beyond this do not disturb the lower realms, but collect the weekly requirements from the layer of woollens placed on the top. Do not put in animal substances at any time, or the box will soon be in bad odour in more than one sense, and do not put in wet cloths, or the colony will soon be wiped out by the unhealthy conditions in which they will be forced to live. To raise a productive colony is a terribly slow business, and it is undoubtedly the length of time that must elapse before a box can be drawn upon which deters many fanciers starting one, but once a box does become productive it is a great boon to the small fancier of Softbills, and a very profitable one, too. The question as to how many a day should be given to the birds is really a choice bit of vagueness. As well might one ask "how long is a piece of string?" Off-hand one might reply one or one hundred with equal correctness. Of course, the correct reply depends upon the species of bird catered for, its condition of health, and the quality of its staple diet. With a good, properly compounded insectivorous food as a staple, one or two a day, or three in two days, would suffice for a Skylark, whilst a dozen would be none too many for a Robin or a Nightingale under similar conditions, and the larger and more exclusively insectivorous the bird the greater the number of mealworms it will stow away in the absence of other living insect food as substitutes.

HOBBYIST.

The Song of the Thrush.

SIR,—The song of the Thrush is remarkable for its rich mellow intonations, and for the great variety of its notes, and is preferred by many to that of all other woodland singers. Whether he is the best singer or not, he occupies, and deservedly so, a very high rank in the bird-singing profession. This would appear to be so from the fact that a very large number of these birds may be heard singing out their mellow songs. As I stand and listen the songs seem to be to me the following:—"Knee deep, knee deep, knee deep; cherry due, cherry due, cherry due, cherry due; white hat, white hat, white hat, white hat; pretty Joey, pretty Joey, pretty Joey, Joey, Joey."

FIDDLER, DEWSBURY.

Missing Water Tins.

SIR,—Having noticed in your last issue the letter on the above subject, written by Mr. W. P. Bell, I should say someone was having a good haul of water tins at Longton show (perhaps making a collection of them). I received my birds alright, but no water tins at all. Now I hope the officials will not think I am blaming them. No; I blame those thoughtless exhibitors who send their exhibits without water tins, the consequence being that the tins are robbed from those birds that have them to relieve the others, but are not put back. If it were not that the birds would have to suffer, it would serve those careless exhibitors right if the birds were found dead on arriving home. Anyhow, I trust this correspondence will be the means of bringing the thoughtless exhibitor to his senses, and that show committees will see that water tins are returned to the more thoughtful exhibitors.

J. T., BRIMINGTON.

SIR,—Noticing a letter from Mr. W. P. Bell re missing water tins, may I be allowed to say that nine times out of ten it is not the show officials' fault that exhibits are returned without these. As a proof of the absent-mindedness of some exhibitors, I might mention that we had to buy three dozen water tins for exhibits which arrived without them for Dulwich show. I trust those gentlemen who are in fault, and have received bright spanking new water tins back from Dulwich, will remember we are not running a charitable institution, although the cost of the tins is nothing to the comfort of the birds which we endeavoured to study.

fear of its catching a chill or knocking itself about, when closed up. The sliding shutter slides down in front of sliding wire door, making the box almost dark, and in consequence the bird will keep perfectly still. The perch is put through 2ins. from the front and 1¼ins. from the bottom of the box. The hole in the top is for ventilation. The sketch, I think, will explain the rest.—JAMES YOUNG.

A Useful Seed-hopper.

Sent by Mr. H. Moon, The Woodlands, Kingswood, Bristol.

Here is a small sketch of a very simple but usefui seed hopper, for use in an aviary. It consists of a block of wood (A) with a groove in it. The block is about 10ins. long and 2½ins. by 1¼ins., with a groove made in the centre. Of course, the wood is to be planed up if it is to look nice. B is the groove in which the seed is put. C is a thin piece of wood with three (more if desired) holes in it. This is the same size as A. A screw is then put in both pieces of wood as shown in sketch, a screw being used to enable the piece of wood C to move round. The holes D enable the birds to take the seed from the groove. If a fancier wishes to hang this seed hopper in the aviary, a small perch can be easily fixed to the piece of wood A.—H. MOON.

THE SHOWS.

Fourth annual show of the Battersea C.B.A. held on October 20th and 21st in the Battersea Town Hall, which makes a capital venue for a cage bird show. The management of the show was in the hands of Messrs. Easterling and Allen, the hon. secs., who are deserving of every praise for the excellent arrangements made, both for the comfort and well-being of the exhibits and the satisfaction of the exhibitors and the visitors. Their efforts were admirably seconded by Mr. W. Honeysett (the chairman), Mr. T. Goymer, the vice-chairman, and the committee, Messrs. Luff, Holloway, Whiteman, Law, Mist, Twiddy, Fonnd, Gooch, Whithome, Dewhurst and Slade. The judges were Messrs. A. Pattrick and J. Robson, and they had a very heavy task, one at least of these gentlemen being, as events turned out, too heavily taxed to do either himself or the birds justice. The entries were much beyond expectation, and it was six o'clock before the class judging was finished. The Yorkshire classes were exceedingly heavy, and took a good deal of sorting, while the quality was well above the average of London shows, some grand birds being staged, but we failed to find a single green or cinnamon bird among the many "slim ones" on show. The beauty of the green and the cinnamon marks should commend themselves to the Yorkshire fanciers of the south. What a chance for someone! The hall was well patronised by visitors. This fixture has now become quite a known annual event, and if much more progress is made a larger hall will soon be required. All classes appeared to fill well, excepting the Borders; these could only muster nine entries. Lovers of these birds must support the clubs that cater for them. The Norwich Plainheads made a magnificent display, the numbers and quality alike being grand, and there was stiff competition between many noted exhibitors.

The British classes were fine, and it must have been very gratifying to the officials of the Society to find the extended classification met with the support it deserved. The small insectivorous class, always one of the most interesting in the section, contained some charming exhibits. Mr. Frostick's Jenny Wren (the substitute for the Dartford Warbler which had been entered), in its ivy-clad cage, and Mr. Vale's red-backed Shrike, a bird seldom seen on the show bench in perfect plumage, being specially worthy of notice, as was a gem of the rarely-staged Grasshopper Warbler. The lesser-spotted Woodpecker had quite a large circle of interested admirers. The Bramble and Chaffinch class was a very hot one; in fact, half the class were fit to win in first-class competition. This class might well be split up into two next year. The Foreign bird classes, although somewhat weak in point of numbers, were not lacking in quality, Mr. Maxwell heading the list with his noted Bird of Paradise.

FOLKESTONE.

Held October 20th and 21st in the Town Hall. The show room is lofty, well lighted, and cosy, and the birds were staged on the platform, which made them easier to view than is frequently the case at mixed shows. The secretary, Mr. Gambrill, is an experienced and able show manager, taking everything in the most businesslike, and at the same time pleasant and courteous manner. His committee are fanciers of the most enthusiastic type, and the cage bird department was stewarded by Mr. A. E. Coleman in a most efficient manner. The quality was excellent, although the entry was not over large. Yorkshires were nice classes, and the quality excelleut, while there were some good Borders. British came up grandly. Special for best in show went to a golden-crested Wren. The insectivorous class contained, besides the Wren, some charming specimens of other Softbills. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged.

SPEN VALLEY C.B.S.

A well-attended meeting and table show took place at the Commercial Hotel, Cleckheaton, on Oct. 18th; judge, Mr. S. Grayshon, Heckmondwike. Owing to a clerical error, Mr. F. Allen was stated to be judge in last week's CAGE BIRDS, but he judges a table show and judging competition on November 15. Messrs. G. Grayshon, S. Grayshon, and T. Smith will give money specials for 1st, 2nd, and 3rd bird in each class. Entries for the show, October 18, came up well, and the judge gave every satisfaction.

BUFF CK.: 1, 3, Wood; 2, 4, Fielding; vhc and c, Smith; hc Rothery. HEN: 1, hc, Fielding; 2, c, Rothery; 3, Smith; 4, vhc, Wood.—J. LEWIS, hon. secretary.

EASTBOURNE.

With a reduced classification, and an increased entry the show of the Eastbourne Fur and Feather Society was this year a big success. The Floral Hall, in which the show is held, is a capital building for a show, being well lighted and very cosy. Not only was the entry an improvement, but the quality also was better than last year. The exhibits were nicely arranged, and their needs well looked after by the following band of stewards, who were most assiduous in the discharge of their duties—Messrs. Newman, Cole, Hobden, Tugwell, Hedges, and French. Messrs. Daly and Gibbons, the secretaries, were most diligent and courteous, and in them the society have two most efficient officers. Mr. C. A. House judged.

BOLTON.

The Bolton and Dis. O.S. held their annual show on October 15th and 16th. The Co-operative Hall, in which the exhibits were staged, is large, nicely lighted, free from draughts, and well ventilated. The entries totalled 550, making a fine display. The C.B.U. rules were in evidence. Staging was of a very neat order, and specimens could be seen in comfort. Those responsible for this arrangement are therefore to be complimented. The President is Mr. J. Smith, the Vice-President Mr. J. Hopkins, and the Treasurer Mr. R. Hollis, all of whom rendered capital assistance. The committee are a band of most willing helpers, who know the correct workings. The stewards were Messrs. T. H. Cooper, J. Gostling, J. Smith, R. Hollis, H. Bullough (Southport), and T. W. Burgess; each and all did all in their power to help things on. Mr. H. Parkinson, the worthy Sec., is the right man in the right place; he is quick, courteous, and obliging, having every item at his finger-tips. Mr. T. H. Cooper makes a capable assistant. The Norwich took pride of place as regards merit, and were a magnificent collection. Yorkshires made a nice display, and contained a good few exceedingly smart exhibits. The Crest shown by Mr. W. Radley was voted a romper, and looked in fine trim at judging time, but shortly after it went amiss and looked as though its "time" had come. We hope the bird has got all right by this. Mules and British were good, and Foreign added to the attraction of the show. The Novice classes filled splendidly, and contained many that could have run well in the higher circles. Specials went as follows: Ramsden's medal, Mr. T. H. Dent; Kremmer cup, Messrs. J. and J. Hopkins, who also took Seyfried's medal; Gostling's gold medal, Mr. J. Gerrard, and also silver medal; Sandiford's medal, Mr. T. Denkin; Hyde's, Mr. J. Gerrard. The judges were Messrs. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield), and J. Walsh (Blackburn, the former taking all the Canaries, and the latter the British, Foreign, Mules, and Selling. Their awards were well received. A contest between the N.P.C. and the Southern N.P.C. had been arranged to take place at this exhibition. The Southerners failed to respond, only one exhibitor entering (four birds), and these were not on view.

LEAMINGTON SPA.

The Royal Leamington Spa Society held their sixth annual show on October 14th, in the Drill Hall, the part set apart for cage birds being very suitable. Unfortunately the show was not under C.B.U. rules. We were informed that Cannock objected to their having a licence on this date. No doubt the Leamington fanciers had to suffer in regard to the number of entries. However, they made the best of a bad deal. Mr. F. T. Pritchard made a most obliging secretary, and one of whom the Society should feel quite proud. The following looked after the cage birds in a very attentive manner: Messrs. G. Hall, C. Bull, A. Hull, A. J. Soden. Mr. J. H. Rice judged. NOR. CL., ETC. YELL.: Cancelled. BUFF (7): 1, 2, two spls., Hall, 2nd bird wins Hyde's spl., 1st tkd. on head, good type, nice thick-set, fine head and neck, followed by a cl. of grand quality and lovely col.; 3, Bellamy, fine col., nice type; res., c, Bull; vhc, Adkins; hc, Packer and Bott. MORPETH.

Morpeth and Dis. C.B.S. held their second annual open show in the Town Hall, October 16th, and it was a decided success. The number of entries was beyond expectations, numbering about 500, an advance upon last year's. The Norwich section was quite a show in itself—170 in nine classes—and some grand exhibits were shown. There was a good collection of Borders in the three classes. The entries totalled 65, an average of 22 per class. Cinnamons were a disappointment, only 32 birds being staged in the four classes. Now, you cinnamon fanciers, this is a poor way of showing your appreciation of such splendid classification. But some grand specimens were staged here. Mr. Cowling, the sec., assisted hy Mr. Willis, was responsible for the management; both were hard-working, courteous, and obliging, and, with the assistance of such practical fanciers as Messrs. Summers, Clark, Stoker, Graham, H. Seely, G. Seely, Rowell, Dixon, Douglas, Lackey, Griffiths, Davis, and Mayland, everything went off well. The birds were all nicely staged. The cards were on the hirds at the opening of the show, and the hall was soon packed from end to end. The special for most points in open Norwich was won by Mr. A. Grey, with Mr. Cowling close up for second place, five points away. Special for best Border was won by Bennet, and best members' hy Mr. Griffiths. Winner of Sandiford's cup, Mr. Cowling. The show closed at six, the birds were packed for their return journey, and the hall was cleared by 7.30, which is a great advantage to the exhibitors. Mr. W. P. Barnes, of Grantham, judged the open classes, Mr. Brown the open Borders, British, Foreign, and members'. Their awards appeared to give every satisfaction.

BARNSTAPLE.

Barnstaple and District fanciers held their 29th enlarged show at the Horse Repository, Braunton Road, on October 16th. This is an ideal place, the room being light and free from draughts. The exhibits were of a high order. Mr. Turner staged a splendid team of Plainheads, winning silver cup, silver spoon, point special, also Sandiford's special for best-fed bird, which was simply a blaze of colour. Mr. Dart was runner-up for cup with a Belgian. Mr. Collins, as usual, staged a nice team of Hybrids. In the novice section some good birds were staged. Mr. Priscott makes an ideal secretary. Mr. Loosemore judged.

CREST OR C.B.: 1, 2, 3, Hamment and Sons. 1st fine Crest, 2nd and 3rd both nice C.B.'s. NOR.: 1st spl cup and spoon, 2, 3, Turner, buff, extra good quality, beautiful head and chest, good size, real clinker 2nd and 3rd real good birds, similar to 1st. A.O.V.: 1, 2, 3, Dart, 1st nice buff Belg.; res. for cup, 2, 3, good Scotch Fancies, nice size and reach. NOVICE: 1st, silver medal, Jones, Nor.; 2, Newcombe, Nor.; 3, Dart, Border, all nice birds. MULE OR HYB.: 1, 2, 3, Collins, 1st noted Linnet-Bullie, not quite ready yet 2nd and 3rd two noted Goldfinch-Redpolls, beautiful exhibits. PAIRS (matched for breeding): 1, Turner, Nor. P.H., grand pair, nicely balanced, extra good quality; 2, Dart, Scotch Fancies, fine pair, hen extra good quality; 3, Lemon, Nor., another good pair, well matched; extra 3, Turner, good yell. cock, winner Sandiford's spl.

Glasgow Holds a Great Show.

The annual open event of the City of Glasgow O.A. attracts an increased entry, and is visited by great crowds of bird-lovers, the officials scoring an undoubted triumph.

City of Glasgow O.A. held their annual show on October 15th and 16th. It proved a great success, entries being well forward in all sections. Scotch Fancies, as usual, figured prominently, and the entry was a good one, being 25 in advance of last year's. The quality was of the best, all the cracks being present. The noted buff piebald hen of Mr. Black's again secured the coveted award of silver cup for best young bird. The spl. for best in hall was secured by Mr. McClure. We noticed in the buff cocks a good one left out (Muirhead): it must have been overlooked. The Scotch Fancy judges were Messrs. Findlay, Caldwell, Allardice, McFarlane, Thornton and Watson. Belgians were a nice collection, some good birds being on view; and were carefully handled by Mr. J. Kean. Norwich were a marvellous collection, all the classes being keenly contested. The non-fed and novice classes were the feature here, some clinkers being out. The unflighted birds were hot ones, and two sets of winners could easily have been found. Messrs. Malcolmson and Davidson judged. Crests and Crestbreds were a nice collection. Here the winner of the McLean challenge cup was found in a rattling Crestbred shown by Mr. T. J. King. Mr. Nobis ably judged these classes. Yorkshires were a hot lot, some real toppers being staged, some of them all the way from Ireland. Mr. Paterson succeeded in capturing two spls. Mr. Hislop judged, and his awards were well received.

Where Were the East-side Cracks?

The Borders as usual, were forward in good numbers, the medal winner being an even marked buff shown by Mr. Shearer. On looking over the various Border classes, a notable feature was the absence of the East Coast crack team, the only exhibits present being a team of Mr. Gilchrist's, two of Mr. Young's, and three of Mr. Walker's. The reason we were told is that East Coast breeders consider the West judges do not handle the birds enough. It is to be hoped next year we shall see the usual competition. Taken all over, the judges' decisions were well received. The judges were Messrs. Hislop, and Hamilton. The Mule classes were a grand lot. Dr. Galloway headed both classes with his well-known team. A protest was lodged against the winning Linnet Mule in the Darks, on account of its lovely colour, but Mr. Brown, the well-known judge, failed to take any colouring matter off. Hybrids were an interesting show, and some nice crosses were to be seen. British, taken on the whole, were scarcely up to those of former years; entries were good, but many were behind in colour. The Softbills and Foreigners were good, and contained some extra nice ones. Messrs. Brown and Livingstone judged. Their awards were well received. The show was held as usual in the Drill Hall, Taylor-street, a very suitable place for a show. The management was under the eye of Messrs. Young and McDonald, the excellent secretaries. Everything passed off without a hitch. The show was well patronised. Sales were good; the winning foul buff Scotch Fancy hen was claimed for £7 7s., and the 4th prize Bramble for £4 4s. The only unfortunate incident of the show was the loss of Mr. Bishop's Norwich hen, a well-known winner, which was either lost or stolen.

A Good Muster.

There was a good muster in the Belgian section, the number being in excess of last year's and the quality of a high standard. The most prominent breeders were represented. The classes were under the patronage of the U.K.B.C.A. The following specials were competed for: The Belgian Memorial trophy and gold medal, given by the late Mr. H. C. Graeme, a handsome silver shield mounted, the Reddihough challenge cup, a gold medal, and numerous other gold and silver medals. Last year's holder of both trophies was Mr. J. Fairley (Coatbridge), who was again in front this year, with most points, winning 12 cards. Mr. Greig (Aberdeen) was second with 7 cards. It is to be regretted that first crosses are allowed to compete in this section. The judges, who, in their opinion, find first crosses in Belgian classes, should we think look over such and thus ensure these classes being what they are intended for, viz., Belgians, and not first crosses and Belglans.

With three classes for Yorkshires, there was a very select lot of this variety staged. Mr. Patterson, a well-known Ayrshire exhibitor, carried off the spl. for best in section. In the A.O.V. class, Mr. King, of Cheltenham, secured first honours with a very taking Cinnamon Crest. The Borders came up fairly well, although we have seen this variety much more forward in numbers at this show. Quality was about the usual standard, and a few of extra good merit could be picked out. Mr. Gardener secured the B.F.C. novice medal.

Some Notable Birds.

Mr. Black's cup-winning young Scotch Fancy hen was greatly admired by all the breeders present. She is very typical, and good in all properties, the only thing that could be urged against her being a trifling lack of size. Her win was a popular one. Mr. T. J. King's Crest-bred, winner of the McLean cup, also pleased the connoisseurs. It has substance and a rare good head, with a marvellous cushion and entrance, and a wealth of leafy feather. It should do well this season.

The absence of the noted Border Fancy teams from the East-side was much commented upon. We heard it said that the breeders there think the West-side judges keep the birds too much on the staging, and do not handle them sufficiently. It is a pity there should be any reason for withholding entries (if this be the case), for fanciers of Borders look to Glasgow as providing a contest of international quality.

The winning dark Linnet Mule was an eye-opener for all in size and quality combined with truly marvellous colour; in fact, as mentioned earlier on, this drew upon the bird the doubts of some, but it came through its ordeal with all colours standing, so to speak. The Foreign Goldfinch which won looked a perfect picture, and the Mule breeders especially looked upon it with eyes of longing. The awards in the class for couples for Hybrid breeding were interesting, as from the five leading pairs very few young have ever been bred. Take the Yellowhammer-Reed Bunting pair as an instance. What possibilities!

How pleased everyone was with the grand display, and how well the birdy-men turned out to appreciate it. The officials must have been highly gratified. Glasgow City scored an undoubted triumph.

SOUTHALL.

A very nice little affair was the first venture of the Southall Cage Bird Society, which took place in the St. John's Hall on October 14th. The entry doubtless would have been larger hut for the presence in the schedule of a rule which said unless twelve entries in a class prize money would he on the sliding scale. Exhibitors do not care for these restrictions, and they militate greatly against good entries. The birds were very nicely arranged in a manner which admitted of their being seen to the best advantage, and a goodly lot they were. So far as quality was concerned, the palm was readily yielded to the Norwich, which were indeed a magnificent lot, hirds of most excellent type, with abundance of quality and colour, being well to the front. The Yorkshires also were good, and the competition very keen. Mr. Hodder's Buff Norwich won the section special, and also took that for the best bird in the show, whilst that for the best Yorkshire was taken by Messrs. Hawes' marked Buff. The whole of the arrangements were most excellently carried out by the following committee:—Messrs. A. E. Argyle (chairman), W. H. Phipps, J. R. Morgan, C. Huxley, J. Kinns, W. Smith, L. A. Neal, C. M. Kidd, and J. Timberlake, whilst Messrs. H. J. Ireson, the treasurer, and T. G. Jeffrey, the hon. secretary, are two of the hest officials a society could possibly have, and to their efforts much of the success which the society has achieved is due. Mr. C. A. House judged.

The Critique.

YORKS., YELL. (11): 1, spl second best Yorks., Harris, long, straight, smart hird, capital head, well braced wings and tail rare feather and style; 2, Gamhle, magnificent quality, very stylish, neat wings and tail; 3, Green, very shapely and capital feather, nice position, not tightened up yet; 4, Cox, another shapely stylish bird, not ready; vhc, Alford; hc, Mole; c, Marling; absent, Smart (2). BUFF (9): 1, Hawes Bros., magnificent head, shoulders, back, wings and tail, a real good Yorkie in every way, but just a shade stronger than we like, still, his wonderful quality and style pulled him through; 2, Harris, very shapely and fine in feather, but has not yet learned how to carry himself in a show cage, when steadied will take some beating; 3, Phipps, a rattling good hird full of style and rare shape not shown to the best advantage; 4, Easterling, very neat and stylish, not quite so much length; vhc, Mole; hc, Green; c, Parish. TKD. YELL. (3): 1, Green, very slim, finely drawn Cinn.-mark., as tight as wax, and as upright as a dart, a lovely bird; 2, Harris, heautifully moulded, lovely head, back and wings, rare style, not quite so fine in feather; 3, Hawes, magnificent body, lovely feather and style, a trifle stouter; 4, Gamble, very sleek and stylish, not ready; vhc, Easterling; hc, Phipps; c, Parish. BUFF (5): 1, spl best York., and res. best in show, Hawes Bros., a real gem of a wing-tkd., not a feather out of place, full of nerve and heautifully moulded, stands like a soldier; 2, Harris, very smart and shapely, lovely quality, not tightened up yet; 3, Burton, very stylish, nice bodied, Cinnamon tkd.; 4, Jeffrey, a rare bird for shape, length, and quality of feather, but he wanted starching and ironing in front; vhc, Green. HEN (10): 1, 3, Hawes Bros., two wonderfully fine hens, buff and a yellow, full of nerve, rare position and magnificent feather, winner the slimmest and most erect; 2, Parish, very long buff, splendid shape, wonderful quality, hardly so smart in position; 4, Harris, very sweet little hen, full of style and quality, beaten in length; vhc, c, Jeffrey; hc, Harris; absent, Smart. GRANTHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Fourth members' show held at headquarters, Black Dog, Watergate. There was a splendid entry, the exhibits being nicely staged. The room was tastefully decorated with flowers, kindly arranged and given by Mr. Bond, sen., for which the committee return their best thanks. Mr. W. E. Allen won special for hest bird in show with a grand Yorkshire hen, Mr. W. Ratcliff special for hest Norwich, Mr. Clarke, special for most points in novice section, Mr. E. Kirkby special for hest British. Winners of medals for most points gained the last three shows: W. Ratcliff, champion section; E. Boud, novice section; and E. Kirkby, British section. Mr. Allen, the Secretary, had everything in good order. Mr. F. Lockton made the awards, not a grumble being heard.

OLDHAM.

Annual show of the Oldham and Dis. C.B.A. was held on October 16th, in George-street School. The room was well adapted for the purpose. The entries were not very large, no doubt because the show was held so early; there were only 120 entries in 30 classes. The judge, Mr. Bowyer, of Lock, gave his awards with acceptance. Messrs. Steepie (the energetic Sec.) and Sherrington (steward, with a few willing workers in Messrs. Eckersley, Nelson, Hampshire, Ackroyd, etc., worked hard and had all the awards placed and catalogues for sale almost as soon as the show was opened. Messrs. Young, Eckersley, and Hampshire tied for the newly-purchased cup with 27 points each, Mr. Young taking the trophy through his having the advantage in keener competition and consequently more prize money to draw. The runners-up were awarded extra specials, along with Messrs. Harrison and Addison. Mr. Sherrington won Sandiford's medal, and Mr. Steepie had a special alloted as runner-up.

Plymouth's Notable Jubilee Exhibition.

These West-country fanciers celebrated their Jubilee in right royal fashion by attracting a fine entry and giving of their best in the matter of management.

For fifty years the Western Counties O.S. has held its annual shows, and to it belongs the honour of being the first cage bird society in the kingdom to colebrate its Jubilee, which it did in right royal fashion in the Corn Exchange, Plymouth, on Oct. 19th and 20th. The writer has many pleasing recollections of the society. Twenty-seven years ago he won a special at Plymouth for best Belgian, the late Edward Bemrose being the judge. At that time Belgians were very strong in the West, and the Plymouth schedule used to open with three or four classes for the King of the Fancy. Crests also were a great feature, as were the Norwich and Cinnamons. Another section which provided considerable competition and a great deal of interest, was that for English. Belgians have long since been deposed from their proud position and the English are quite a thing of the past, whilst the Devon and Cornwall breeders of Cinnamons are now very few in numbers. Plymouth was strong in the Fancy in those days, and it is still strong, for year by year at its shows we see some of the best Crests and Norwich that are produced. In Norwich Plainheads to-day, even as it was 30 years ago, it is to Plymouth we look for some of the sensations of the season.

Modern, but Popular.

At this show the schedule opened with Yorkshires, which are comparatively a modern variety, so far as Plymouth is concerned. Yet to-day they have no less than 14 classes. A wonderful lot the exhibits were for quality. The 14 classes contained 168 entries. The Non-flighted class proved a regular teazer for the judge, but he found a brace of good ones in Mr. Elsmore's smart and shapely exhibits. The hens made a couple of fine classes, and the winners of Messrs. Rennie and Pattrick were very typical, stylish birds. The two classes for Devon and Cornwall exhibitors did not meet with the support they deserved, only a dozen entries being made. The members' Yorkshires were a very nice lot.

Norwich, ever the section to arouse keenest interest amongst Western breeders, were a magnificent collection, totalling 226 in the seventeen classes provided. And what a lot they were: Such shape, such colour, such feather, such frosty coats on the buffs, and staged in that wonderful bloom and condition which has ever characterised the Norwich Plainheads of Plymouth, and which caused the late W. A. Blakston to pen pæans of praise in their honour. The local breeders held their own well with those from a distance, the Western Counties accounting for all the first prizes except the two taken by Messrs. Hodder and Rennie. In the clear buffs a peculiar coincidence arose; Messrs. Gill and Pethick won 2nd with the bird which last year the same judge selected for the same position, and then discovered it was short of two tail feathers, and put it out of competition. In the Ticked classes Mr. Spillman once again showed how hard a nut he is to crack in Yellow Ticks. The Non-flighted Buffs were a grand lot, and Mr. Dart, the popular chairman, was most heartily congratulated upon winning the Members' Challenge Cup with his exhibit. The Hen classes were also wonderfully strong.

The Costly Crests.

Crests, although not creating the same interest as they used to do, are still a strong feature. Mr. Heath had a good morning's work amongst the 151 exhibits which faced him in the fifteen classes. In the variegateds several were hardly fit, and Mr. Heath going strongly for condition they had to stand back. We much admired Mr. Davey's winner in the hens. But the class of the section was that for the 1909 birds, and here the Western breeders showed that they have not lost the art of producing birds of the highest quality. The Crest-breds seemed to be suffering more generally from the lateness of the season than the Crests. In the members' section Mr. Ryder had a very strong team out, and secured the members' challenge cup with a very smart heavily marked bird, with capital front and droop.

Cinnamons were superior in quality to what we have seen at Plymouth in recent years, and we were much pleased to see that old breeder of the variety, Mr. Nason, of Northampton, in the front place. The members' challenge cup fell to a very smart yellow shown by Mr. Yates. Borders were scheduled at Plymouth for the first time, and Mr. Dart had the pleasure of scoring top notch with a very shapely, stylish little buff. Belgians were a most excellent class, the Barnstaple breeders scoring well with birds of good substance and carriage. In the A.O.V. Mr. Tom King won with one of the best cinnamon Crests we have ever seen staged. In the class for groups Mr. Spillman staged two of the best-matched quartettes of Norwich we have seen. His team of buffs looked as if they had all come from one mould, so even in colour and so similar in shape were they.

Mules made an interesting display, but the majority of the winners were old faces. British came up much better than usual, and some grand birds were shown, but few of them were in full bloom. The Foreign classes contained a very choice lot of exhibits, and they afforded much interest to visitors.

Living Up to their Reputation.

The show was opened by His Worship the Mayor of Plymouth (A. Edmund Spencer, Esq.), who expressed the great pleasure it gave him to assist in furthering the interests of the working-men of Plymouth in such an enjoyable and refining hobby as bird breeding. He hoped the Jubilee show would be the success which the enterprise of the members deserved. Mr. C. A. House proposed a vote of thanks to the Mayor, which was seconded by Mr. W. G. French.

One feature of the W.C.O.S. shows is the management. Tested and proved by the experience of half a century, its traditions are well maintained, and no show in the kingdom is better arranged, and at none is more care and attention bestowed upon the exhibits. This is only what one may expect, seeing that some of the present officials have grown grey in the service of the society, and have spent over a quarter of a century in promoting its welfare. Messrs. C. Dart (chairman), W. French (vice-chairman), W. Spillman, C. Reed, A. E. Cheney, C. Hoar, C. Garland, J. Ryder, F. G. Snell, W. H. Tottle, C. Jewell, J. E. Rowe, L. S. B. Clark, G. Pridham, G. Haskell, J. White and W. Deeble were those responsible for the arrangements of the Jubilee show, and they rose nobly to the occasion, and vied with each other in promoting its success, whilst Messrs. T. Pope and W. A. Dyer, the hon. secs., brought to the work of the secretariat well-seasoned experience, coupled with an energy and affability that were much appreciated, and ensured that smooth and easy working which alone follows in the wake of tact, and attention to detail. Guided by such a splendid body, the Jubilee show was what it deserved to be, a monster success, and its memory will live long with those who had the privilege of visiting it. The judges were Messrs. T. Heath, C. A. House and J. Robson.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

CITY OF BRADFORD.

All Y.U. Records Broken.

The City of Bradford O.S. held their annual open show on October 16th, in the Feversham-street Council School, Leeds-road, under the rules of the Yorkshire Union and the patronage of the Y.C.C., C.M.Y.C.C., O.N.P.C.C., N.U.M.Y.C.C., and the leading gentry of the district. As usual at this fixture, a very liberal classification was provided, no less than 33 classes being schedulcd, all for Canaries, and the very gratifying entry of 671 was obtained, an average of over 20 per class. The room is a good one for a show, being very lofty, well lighted, and free from draught, but for a show of the dimensions of this, one would be better a little larger, as it was taxed to its utmost limit during the afternoon, a very great number of visitors attending the function. The Secretary (Mr. F. Rhodes) and his assistant (Mr. F. Pncker) had charge of affairs, and were ably assisted by Messrs. Ploughright, West, Denison, Gill, show stewards, and Messrs. Bateman (President), Horsfield, Simonett, Fortnam, Ludbrook, as general stewards, and Mr. F. Hammond as sales clerk. Everything being in such experienced hands, passed off as smoothly as possible. All the birds were packed up and in the hands of the railway companies in good time. During the afternoon, teas were provided for visitors, the catering being in the hands of the members' wives and daughters, and right well they did their duty, a great many fanciers availing themselves of the opportunity of a feed on the premises. A members' gift class was provided as an innovation to assist the finances of the show. It drew an entry of 16 birds, all of which were put up for auction and realised a respectable figure, the first prize being a gold medal (presented by Sir G. Scott Robertson, K.C.S.I., M.P. for Central Bradford) for most points in the class, 2nd prize 15/-, 3rd 10/-, 4th 5/- cash, given by the Society. Mr. A. Hirst, of Accrington, was the official judge of the Yorkshire Union, he taking all open classes and the Norwich novice, Mr. C. Whiting being selected as assistant to take the Yorkshire novice and selling classes, the Gift class being officiated upon by both in a joint capacity. The awards of both gentlemen met with general satisfaction, and they had the pleasure of attracting an entry which broke the Yorkshire Union record.

COVENTRY (Godiva).

The Coventry Godiva C.B.S. held their Third Annual Show in the Chequers' Hotel, Little Park-street, on October 16th. The show was held under the C.H.U. Rules. The room was a comfortable place for the birds. Entries came in well, and by far exceeded those of previous years, both in numbers and quality. The exhibition was well attended, and from every point of view looked like a success. Mr. J. Robson judged. The following gentlemen well carried out the necessary duties: Messrs. J. Busby (President), A. Wright (chairman), J. Symonds (vice-chairman), H. Ward, A. Symonds, J. A. Cooke, J. Ingram, J. Blackshaw, H. Saunders, and A. J. Lucas (show stewards). The hon. secretary, Mr. W. H. Bray, makes as good a secretary as will be found anywhere, and he is to be heartily congratulated on his successful management.

JOHNSTONE (Near Glasgow).

Johnstone annual show held October 16th, in the Town Hall, open to all. There was a very large entry, in excess of last year's. The staging was well carried out, and reflected the greatest credit on secretary Laird and his able committee. The judge for the cage bird section was Mr. J. Smith (Howwood), who had a difficult task, but gave general satisfaction. Visitors turned out in large numbers. The quality of the exhibits was of a high standard, some very promising youngsters being staged. Officers: President, Mr. J. Taylor; vice-president, Mr. D. P. Ritchie; secretary, Mr. A. Laird. The town hall is well suited for show purposes, with capital light. The show was a big success, and speaks volumes for greater support next year.

CHIRNSIDE.

Held in Small Hall, October 16th. The Society is managed by Mr. Thos. Fortune (President), Mrs. Jas. Patterson (Vice-President), Messrs. Patterson and Shiell, Secretaries, who had everything well in hand. The Society is in a very flourishing state, both financially and otherwise. The exhibits were of a very high order, especially in Borders (the district being a hot-bed for this variety), and gave the judge (Mr. John Watson, Selkirk) some trouble to separate. His awards all over were well received.

DARLINGTON.

The Darlington C. and B.B.A. fourth annual show was held in the Corn Exchange, on October 16th. More classes were provided, especially in the British bird section, and the response was liberal. The Yorkshire classes were well filled and competition was keen. Norwich were not so good as we generally see at shows in this district, many birds not being yet ready. British were good indeed, both in quantity and quality. The Hon. Sec. (Mr. Black) carried out his duties in a most courteous and efficient manner, and was supported by a capable and hard-working committee. All birds from a distance were sent off in good time so as to arrive home that night. Mr. J. Wilcock judged and seemed to give general satisfaction. Messrs. Wildsmith and Hawkins won the bowl for best bird shown by a member.

LONDON FEDERATION OF C.B. SOCIETIES.

A meeting of the Council of the London Federation was held on October 8th at "The Feathers," Westminster. Those present were: Mr. R. L. Crisp (vice-chairman) in the chair, Messrs. J. Dewhurst, F. W. Thorpe, W. H. Mugford, A. C. Burn, A. W. Curtis, F. Boxall, H. W. Cook, E. S. Lugg, W. R. Angear, T. Miller, H. Churchard, R. P. Harper, W. Penton, C. R. Carr, H. Smith, J. Carson, J. Wyatt, J. C. Birch, W. Clark, W. J. Honeysett, F. W. Hamer, F. E. Stockwell, R. Cunningham, H. W. Tomsett and P. Adamthwaite, the hon. sec.

The Cage Bird and Yorkshire Unions.

The first business of the Council was the consideration of communications from the Cage Bird and Yorkshire Unions. Mr. Raynes, secretary of the C.B.U., had replied to the Council's letter in the following terms: "At a meeting of the Executive Council of the C.B.U., held just recently, I read your letter respecting the suggestions made by you to uphold any disqualifications, etc., that the Federation may make, and to assist in approaching the railway companies with a view of getting a reduction of fares to fanciers visiting shows, etc. I was instructed to inform you that the Union will fall in with your suggestions and do what they can for the good of the Fancy. I might add that the Union has tried to do something with the railway companies, but up to now nothing has come of it." The secretary of the Federation was instructed to write thanking the Union for their reply. A letter was also read from the Yorkshire Union with reference to the railway companies' question, and at a later stage in the meeting the chairman's suggestion that the Yorkshire Union be asked to formulate a scheme by which reduced fares could be obtained, and send it down to the Federation for consideration, was carried unanimously, on the proposition of Mr. Houcysett, seconded by Mr. Curtis. The Council's excuse for not taking the initiative in this matter, it was pointed out, was that just at this juncture they had a great deal of business on hand which occupied all the time they had at their disposal. It was decided to write to the Cage Bird Union to the same effect.

The "Defaulting Member" Question.

What might be regarded as the Council's "burning question of the hour" was next dealt with—we refer to the question of the defaulting member of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S.; in fact, Mr. Burn's eagerness to dispose of it was, it is to be presumed, his excuse for moving most of the resolutions connected therewith, though in justice to him it should be stated that he apologised to the Council for moving so many of them.

Several of the defaulting members had replied to the Council's communications, and each of these was read and the cases were dealt with on their individual merits. In regard to one of these, a resolution to the effect that the rules be enforced, and that the fancier in question be debarred from showing at the affiliated society's shows until he fulfils his financial obligations to the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. was carried, an amendment that he be suspended twelve months having been lost. Cases in which financial trouble or lengthy illness was known to be the determining factor in the non-payment of subscriptions and levies, were referred back to the Society for consideration.

The Chairman here pointed out, in reply to a question raised by Mr. Dewhurst, that he presumed a copy of the resolution would be sent to the C.B.U., and to the Yorkshire Union, in which case he said, the gentlemen in question would probably be debarred from showing almost everywhere; but it was decided not to refer the cases to either Unions at this stage.

Mr. Curtis said there seemed to be a stumbling block to many in the fact that the matter respecting the levying of the Dulwich and Peckham Society's members, on account of certain liabilities, had been settled wholly in committee, and that the general membership had not been consulted. If it were only the levies that the members objected to, asked Mr. Cunningham, one of the Society's delegates, why do they not pay up their subscriptions? Mr. Burn suggested that the Council pass a resolution to the effect that they would not enforce their rules in regard to any Society until a general meeting of the members had been called and the objects and rules of the Federation had been considered. Perhaps, he added, the Council should have considered that matter before.

The cases of several defaulting members who had replied having been disposed of, the Council proceeded to deal en bloc with the remaining 21 names on the list. All these, but one, it was decided, are to be debarred from showing at the London (affiliated societies) shows until their financial obligations have been met. The exception was that of Mr. F. Easterling, who was present to defend his attitude to the D. and P. C.B.S., which he did to the satisfaction of the delegates, but on the suggestion of the Secretary, who said that it would look nicer, be in no wise lowering to Mr Easterling's dignity, and be also a great help to him (the secretary) personally, Mr. Easterling generously offered to there and then sink his scruples and "pay up," which elicited the loud applause of the meeting.

The Insurance Scheme.

The Council were informed that in reply to the secretary's communication asking the officials at Somerset House if their case could be met by having a sheet printed with the conditions of the insurance set out on the top and perforated certificates of insurance following (this to be franked with a penny stamp), a letter had been received, which stated that in the proposed sheets of certificates the liability of each certificate to duty as a policy remained unaltered.

The Secretary suggested that a letter be sent to the affiliated societies asking them to take a poll as to whether the members would be prepared to pay threepence instead of twopence per certificate. The penny stamp duty must be got over somehow, he said, and the question was, were the members themselves prepared to pay the duty?

The Chairman said he thought the Council quite capable of dealing with the question without needing to refer it to the individual societies. The Secretary added that the more he thought over the scheme the more simple it appeared—if the members would pay threepence per the certificates; and the members should not lose sight of the fact that they would even then have many advantages over and above what the railway companies would give.

Mr. Easterling suggested that a scheme might be formulated similar to that of the C.B.U., whereby members could insure their birds for a certain amount, say £10, for a whole year, and upon one payment. The Secretary wondered if the Council would "go halves" in the stamp duty, and charge each member 1s. 3d. per book of certificates instead of 1s. 6d.? and Mr. Birch said he thought they might have a certificate to cover the three risks—the outward and homeward railway journeys and while their birds were at a show.

Other suggestions were made, but having gone thoroughly into the matter, the Council decided, on the motion of Mr. Honeysett, seconded by Mr. Dewhurst, that the matter be referred back for the sub-committee to consider the advisability of providing three separate kinds of slips to cover the three risks—to, at and from shows. It was decided to issue a separate policy for fire insurance—one shilling for twelve pounds.

Mr. Curtis gave notice of motion, "that this Council recommends that where levies are to be made in a Society, this shall only be done by the consent of the majority at an extraordinary meeting of that Society."

The Secretary's Appeal.

The Secretary then read a letter which he proposed sending to the London Societies not already affiliated to the London Federation, and it was decided to ask the Fancy Press to publish same. The letter is couched in the following terms:—"I am instructed by the Council of the Federation to ascertain if your Society has yet seen its way to become affiliated to the London Federation of C.B. Societies? In view of the extensive reports appearing from time to time in the Fancy Press, it is hardly necessary for me to reiterate the good work undertaken, and still being undertaken, by the Federation; but the Council feels very strongly that the best endeavours to bring about a perfect understanding for mutual goodwill among London societies can only be obtained by the wholehearted and generous support of every society in London. The work of the Council during the coming autumn and winter is of exceptional importance, embodying as it does such matters as the approaching of the various railways in the United Kingdom for reduction of fares to fanciers visiting shows, reduction in charges for the carriage of exhibits, the completion of the scheme of insurance, and other equally vital matters affecting seriously the welfare not only of London but the whole of the Fancy. In this respect I am happy to inform you that the Cage Bird Union and the Yorkshire Union are each working in conjunction with the Federation, and the Council, in this combined effort, is very hopeful of ultimate success. I do not think any doubt can be entertained of the sincerity of the Federation in its endeavour to bring all societies in London and district into closer fellowship for mutual goodwill, and extending a helping hand to overcome the many difficult matters that arise from time to time, even in the best of regulated societies. The zealous and business like manner in which the delegates have met the many obstacles in the way of placing the Federation upon a sound footing, and the enthusiastic but sincere deliberations of delegates in meeting, have led the officers to believe that the movement has fulfilled even the wishes of the most pessimistic of the Federation's supporters. Good work is being done, and greater work can be accomplished if only the support of those societies still outside the Federation is ultimately obtained. The Council, therefore, hopes your Society will see its way to join the Federation, and I need scarcely say you may be assured of a warm welcome. For your information I enclose a copy of the rules and regulations.—P. Adamthwaite."

A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE CENTRE.

Owing to lack of interest in this good movement, the end of the above-named federation has been decided on. A meeting of the representatives was held at the Oldham Show on Saturday, October 16th, and the sale of the cup to the Oldham C.B.S. was agreed upon.—A. ACKROYD.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual meeting held October 16th, in the Fawcett-street Cafe. Mr. J. Farrar presided. Several letters were placed before members. It was unanimously decided that Mr. A Walker be appointed assistant secretary in place of Mr. Maddison. Mr. J. Kinlayside kindly presented the members with a gold medal for competition at the annual show. A good deal of show business was got through, and several important details settled. It was decided that Mr. Heath take Norwich, Crest, Cinnamon, and Yorkshire classes, and Mr. Stanger the remainder. Will members kindly look out for specials and subscriptions, and also push forward the sale of tickets as far as possible?—W. REID, Hon. Sec.

LEYTON AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

A washing competition was held at headquarters, the Constitutional Club, on October 4th. The Chairman said he was pleased to see so many present, there being between 60 and 70. The Secretary (Mr. B. F. Forse) having asked if any present would like to give a special for the forthcoming annual show, Mr. Wilson immediately said he would be pleased to give a cup value £2, to be competed for at the annual show only (to be won three times in succession before becoming the property of an exhibitor) for best bird in show. Mr. Wilson's kind offer was accepted, and a hearty vote of thanks given to the donor. Many others promised specials, including Messrs. Rhodes, Wallace, Williamson, Forse and Son, Carr, Ovenden, J. S. Clarke, Hellene, and Bartlett. The champions, Messrs. F. Williamson and A. B. Forse, were soon looking very businesslike among the soap suds, each doing his best to win the silver medal. Their birds having been put through the ordeal and made "comfy" to dry, the novices were asked to step up, and Messrs. Burbidge, Roberts, and Wood faced the judge, each one intent upon winning the other silver medal. While the birds were drying, Mr. J. S. Clarke, who officiated as judge, gave some of his experiences of washing, and also answered a number of questions. When the birds were put on the table, Mr. Clarke said he had one of the hardest tasks ever set him, it being one of the tightest contests he had ever witnessed. Mr. A. B. Forse had certainly handled his bird better than Mr. Williamson, but his bird had got some soap left in its neck, and also had a frill on the chest, whereas Mr. Williamson's bird was free from these faults; and taking all things into consideration he decided to pronounce Mr. Williamson the winner, which gave general satisfaction. In coming to the novices, Mr. Clarke said that the best washer of the evening had lost his chance through stage fright, for without a doubt Mr. Wood was the best washer, but he had not rinsed his bird; it therefore came out a sorry sight, all its feathers being matted together with soap. Messrs. Burbidge and Roberts had put up a real good fight for the medal, and it was hard to separate them, but he thought Mr. Burbidge was entitled to the medal, if for nothing else, for the way he had thoroughly rinsed the soap out. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Clarke for his kindness in coming to act as judge was given.

JARROW, HEBBURN & DIS. C.B.S.

Meeting held in Lockhart's Cafe, on Oct. 12th. Mr. R. Hutler in the chair. This was one of the largest meetings we have had this year, and a fair amount of business was gone through. Mr. Hutler read the balance sheet in connection with the social held in September. After paying all expenses, we have a balance of £3 14s., so Jarrow are on the right side again. It was proposed that we hold meetings fortnightly till after the show, and that all members have their subscriptions paid by next meeting. Five new members were enrolled. It was also decided to add a Subscribers' Class to our schedule. Our judge is Mr. R. S. Bewick.—R. BLORE.

YORKSHIRE C.B.S. OF IRELAND.

Committee meeting held October 14, Mr. Fry presiding. Present: Messrs. Rooney, McDonnell, Dowling, Callaghan, Lynch, Holly, Birse and Lea. A letter was received from the hon. secretary of Larne C.B.A., enclosing a "special" for our show, which was greatly appreciated. It was decided that the society apply for the patronage of Y.C.C. of Ireland. The society has also been granted the patronage of the N.P.C. of Ireland. The society has purchased a cup for most points in champion classes at our show, which makes a total of five cups (presented by the society) this year. Members will receive schedules at end of present week.—D. CARROLL, hon. secretary.

CASTLE DOUGLAS F.A.

A lecture on "The Birds of our Countryside," was delivered in Ashley Hall on Oct. 4th, before a good turnout of members and friends, by Mr. S. W. Birchley. The chair was taken by J. R. Saunders, Esq. Mr. Birchley, in his opening remarks, strongly advocated a careful study of Nature's ways as a most interesting and instructive recreation, and an antidote to the modern craze for excitement. In illustration of his remarks, there was depicted a series of limelight pictures of bird-life, by means of photographs obtained by Mr. Birchley. All were distinctly beautiful. The lecture and pictures combined to make a most enjoyable and instructive evening.—JOHN C. BURNIE, Sec.

DERBY C.B.C.

Special meeting held October 13th, to make arrangements for members' show. We had decided to have old bird classes for Norwich without the stock class, the Crests same as young classes, and A.O.V. Can. Mule or Hyb.; British, Goldfinch or Bullfinch; British, A.O.V. (smaller than a Thrush), two Nor. classes for novices who have never shown before, one for old birds, and one for young birds. Entrance fee, 6d.; all classes to stand on their own, with 1st prize to take half, 2nd to take two-thirds of what was left, and 3rd the remaining one-third. At a previous meeting it was carried that the points in members' show be counted from the lowest bird with a card, beginning with one. We trust there will be a good gathering of members and others at the washing exhibition and lecture by Mr. W. Eley on October 30th, 7.30.—W. STEVENS, Hon. Sec.

LANCASHIRE C.A.

At our meeting held at Rochdale, a fair number of members were present; Mr. Nadin (President) in the chair. It was decided that the Secretary write the L. and P.O.S. as regards Lancs. classes at the Crystal Palace show, which are to be dropped to two only this time; this we consider an injustice to the birds. The resignation of the Secretary was next considered. As he has not the time available his resignation was accepted with regret, and Mr. C. Whitehead was to be approached in regard to taking the office; he has since accepted the office, subject to confirmation at our meeting at the Rochdale Town Hall show on Oct. 23rd, at 5.30 p.m. I hope members will give him as much support as possible. I should also like to point out to non-members, as the idea seems to be abroad that if some of them join us they will want to have 4 cages of the Society's pattern, that this is not so; they only really want their nominated birds in such cages, and 1 or 2 would suit them well to begin with; then if success followed with their other birds they do not mark, extra cages could be bought. —WM. ADAMS, Hon. Sec.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting held at the Duke of Edinburgh Hotel, Oldham, on Oct. 16th, a good number of members being present. The chief item of interest was the definition of a novice in regard to cup competition. A very keen and interesting debate ensued, and on the motion of Mr. Martin it was decided that a novice must win three first prizes, either in open or open novice classes, but shall be entitled to compete in open classes for the novice medal and other specials for the remainder of the season in which he wins his full number of prizes. In regard to Ramsden's cruet, it was decided that each win count one point, most points at the end of season to win the special. To enable the novice to have a better chance, and also for the convenience of shows, it was decided that each member nominate two birds only at each show, such bird to be marked R.P. at end of the two entries. Will all members kindly make a point, when entering, to mark each entry L. and L.F.A., as, unless such be printed in catalogue, and marked on entry form, they will not count for cups, etc. Next meeting will be held at Rochdale on Nov. 7th, same day as Rochdale Good Intent Show.—JOHN RUKIN, Hon. Sec.

OITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting at headquarters, Sept. 27th, with Mr. A. W. Curtis in the chair. Letters were read from Mr. C. Prior and Mr. H. Hawes, apologising to Mr. Prior through the medium of the Association for attacking him in the columns of the Press. The draw for the shield took place, the result being Border Fancy, with A.O.V. of Canary as runner-up. Mr. A. W. Curtis then rose to say that he had further considered the case of his resignation as delegate to the Federation, and he would consent to stand till the end of the year. It was then proposed that Mr. Curtis retain office, and carried with enthusiasm. Mr. Curtis then interested the meeting by a short account of his holiday in Norwich, during which he paid a pleasant visit to our Vice-President, Mr. Jacob Mackley. He mentioned that Jacob (as he is wont to be called) looked very well and hearty, but not having the chest of the Plainhead as formerly. Mr. Mackley was doing well with his business; in fact, was just despatching a large order to Australia. A judging competition in Norwich Plainheads then took place, consisting of two classes, viz., 9 yellows and 21 buffs, with three champions, four amateurs, and seventeen novices taking part. Of such high quality, and so level were they, that Mr. G. E. Weston found he had a more difficult task than he anticipated. After detailing the various points which led him to his decisions, and answering questions, Mr. Weston complimented the members upon the splendid show. The Chairman presented Mr. W. Knight with ½-peck of Canary seed for making the most entries. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Weston for his services. A vote of thanks to the Chairman closed a pleasant meeting.—V. WYNN, Hon. Sec.

GUISBORO' & DIS. "PRIORY" O.B.S.

At our last meeting we had the pleasure of listening to a very interesting lecture on "Moulting and Colour-feeding," and other items in connection with the exhibiting of cage birds. It was given in splendid style by Mr. A. Wake (Middlesbrough). At the close a hearty vote of thanks was proposed by our chairman, Mr. J. G. Cook, and carried.—J. T. WILSON, Hon. Sec.

EDINBURGH NORTHERN O.S.

Monthly meeting, held Gows Rooms, Rose Street, Oct. 4th. The Vice-President, Mr. Stenhouse, intimated that he had received a silver cup, to be competed for by Norwich or Borders, whichever the members decide on. The following committee was then appointed to assist at the show on 6th November:—Messrs. Adams, Stenhouse, Collie, and Robertson. Auditors:—Messrs. Dandie and Alex. Robertson. It was decided that we hold our next meeting on Oct. 25th, for booking of young birds for show.—THOMAS PURDIE, Sec.

DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held Oct. 16th, in Church Hall, Mr. Geo. Barkas in the chair. We appointed Mr. J. Maddison to judge the Mules, British, and Foreign birds, at our open show on Oct. 30th. I hope fanciers will give him a good lot to do. We have a special of 2/6 for almost each class now. Mr. W. Rickaby has given a special of 10s. to the novice member who has never won a first prize. I have sent over 300 schedules out; if any have not received one, will they send for one, when it will be sent to them. Entries close on Oct. 25th.—J. BROWN, Sec.

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF IRELAND.

Committee meeting, held October 15, Mr. O'Reilly in the chair. Present: Messrs. Dowling, Duigeman, McDonnell, Bray, V.P., and Hyland, hon. secretary pro tem. Mr. Bray informed the meeting it was his intention to change the conditions for his special prize, which now read: "Special prize, value £2 5s., presented by Mr. Grattan Bray, V.P., for most points gained by Canaries in all classes excepting gift, classes containing less than six exhibits points only to count 4, 2, and 1, for 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prizes." The secretary has now over 30 special prizes for competition, including 3 silver watches. This year's prizes are far more valuable than last year's. It is the intention of the committee to have the schedule printed by November 1, and it will be deemed a favour if intending donors of specials will notify the hon. secretary at once. An application from Mr. Carroll, asking for the patronage of Y.C.C. of Ireland, on condition that we ask for his club's patronage, was marked "read." This concluded the business, and the meeting adjourned.—J. R. HYLAND, hon. secretary, pro tem.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*Tame Chaffinches.

I have two Chaffinches. They are called Richard and Peter. They are both very tame, and will fly about the house and return to their cage when tired. But I can't let them both out at the same time, or there is sure to be a fight. One day when I was sitting with Richard on my shoulder, Peter came out of his cage in some way and went in to Richard's. Richard darted for his cage, and chased Peter out, and then sat up on the spar and commenced to sing. Another thing about Richard is that I can stand about two yards away and throw hemp seeds to him and he will catch them.—Sent by William Vine (age 15), 73, Crossburn Street, Glasgow.

What is That ?

A tiny bird said to her mate,
"What do you think I've found?
A little thing, not big like us,
That crawls upon the ground.
We want some breakfast, yes, my sweet,
I wonder if it's good to eat?"

Her mate then wisely shook his head,
"I don't know what to say.
This funny thing may not taste good,
And yet, perhaps, it may.
Suppose we wait while we count two
And see what this queer thing will do."

But that small thing had six good legs,
Besides a pair of wings.
It said: "Why, I can fly as well
As any bird that sings;
So catch me first, you greedy pair."
Then off he flew and left them there.

Sent by Rebecca Osborne (age 11), Outram Street, Sutton-in-Ashfield, Notts.

*A Thrush and a Worm.

One day, the year before last, my brother took a young cock Thrush from a nest. It was about eleven o'clock in the morning. In the evening when we arrived home from a drive, we tried to feed the bird, but not a bit would it swallow. So we put it in a cage. Next morning we were more than surprised to see the mother bird on top of the cage with a worm in its mouth. Seeing it could not get near the young bird, we fixed a small shelf on the outside of the cage. As soon as we were away the bird flew from a tree on to the shelf and succeeded in giving the worm to its offspring. This performance happened every morning until the bird could feed itself.—Sent by H. B. Leavers (age 15), 51, Market Street, Watford, Herts.

In the Courts.

AN ABERDEEN AVIARY RIFLED.

Sixteen Birds Missing.

Before Sheriff Begg, in the Aberdeen Sheriff Court, some short time ago, James Milne, iron moulder, 13, Merkland Road East, Aberdeen, was charged with breaking into an aviary in Seaforth Road, occupied by George Beattie, fish vendor, and stealing 16 Canaries, between August 7th and 8th. Accused pleaded not guilty, and was represented by Mr. G. M. Aitken, solicitor.—A "production" in the case was a cage of six Norwich Canaries, which kept the court lively with their chirping.

George Beattie said he had a wooden house in which he kept the Canaries. He was amongst the birds all the afternoon on Saturday, August 6th, up to about 6 o'clock. He had altogether 49 Canaries. On leaving, he locked the door, and, on going back early on Sunday morning, found that the door had been broken open by the lock being forced. On entering the aviary he found the birds loose and flying about, and on counting them found sixteen were missing. The value of those sixteen birds was about £6. Several of them were prize-winners. He shortly afterwards heard about some Canaries being for sale in Milne's house, and went to see them, when he identified six of the birds as those which belonged to him. Witness said he had no difficulty in recognising the birds. He communicated with the police, who took possession of the Canaries. The six birds recovered were about £3 in value. He got no trace of the other ten birds.

By Mr. Aitken: There were special markings on the Canaries. He never saw one with the same markings as one of the birds. He identified the bird on account of its shape and size, and also the markings. He knew the Canary as one would know a dog. It had won a second prize.

William Ellison identified three of the Canaries—he had not the slightest doubt that they were Beattie's birds. He had known one of the birds for three years, and had handled every one of them in Beattie's aviary. He identified the three-year-old by its "cap" and its "make." It was what was known as a "dry feather" Norwich Canary.—Andrew Anderson gave corroborative evidence.

Detective Donald Mathieson said the house had been entered by false keys. When witness called at accused's house, Mrs. Milne said she knew nothing about the Canaries, except that her husband brought them home. Witness took possession of the birds, and saw the accused afterwards, who said he bought them on Saturday, the 8th, from a man near the football grounds, and paid £1 for them. He said he asked the man to take the Canaries to his (accused's) kennels, and paid him there. Accused also said he never saw the man before. At the Police Office he said it was Sunday, August 1st, he met the man on the Links, when he bought the birds for £1, and paid 2s. as an instalment, asking the man to bring the birds to his house on the following Saturday, when he would be paid for the balance. It was an entirely different story altogether. When charged with the theft, accused replied, "Well, I am very sorry, and will have to face my position."—Detective Gordon corroborated.

Accused, in the witness-box, said on Sunday morning, August 1st, he was out on the Links, and met a man, who said: "Is't Milne they ca' you?" and accused replied that it was. He then said: "I believe you keep birds," and accused replied, "I used to; but it is dogs now." The man was carrying a cage wrapped in a muffler, and said he had a few birds he could sell cheap. Accused asked him to take the birds to the kennels to "get a sicht o' them." At the kennels the man asked, "Are they dear at £1?" and accused said, "No, I will give you £1 for them." Accused asked him to keep the birds for a week, as he had no space for them, and he would take them next Saturday. Accused asked why he was selling them, and the man replied, "Oh, I am tired of them." The birds were decent-looking, and a fairly good bargain, and he (accused) did not want to lose the deal. The man was middle-aged, and wore a reddish muffler. He had a heavy dark brown moustache. He (the accused) got a cage from a Miss Christie for the Canaries.

Several witnesses gave evidence in accused's defence, including Mrs. Milne, who said the man called on the Saturday night with the birds, and the cage was ready for them. She objected to the birds being kept, and the birds were offered for sale. Her husband had not been out of the house on the night of August 7th, the night of the theft.

The Sheriff said there seemed to be no doubt that the theft had been committed on the night of August 7th, between 6 p.m. and 6.15 on the following morning. Where the accused was at that time, depended entirely upon the evidence of his wife, but there was no proof that he was actually out of the house. The Sheriff attached considerable importance to the evidence of the two detectives. He did not think, however, that there was any evidence that accused himself had committed the theft, but it was quite clear that he had got the birds into his possession, knowing them to be stolen. The accused knew the birds were worth about £2 10s.; and a man he knew absolutely nothing about came and offered them under most suspicious circumstances. That was just the usual case of a person resetting goods. For £1 accused got property which was worth two or three times as much. He (the Sheriff) accordingly found him guilty of reset, and imposed a penalty of £3 of a fine, with the option of 20 days in prison.

Constable Alleged to have Tortured a Bird.

A case taken up by the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals came before Mr. R. B. Bagnall-Wild at the Nottingham Shire Hall recently.

James Shelton, a labourer, living in the Hunger Hill Gardens, was summoned for cruelty to a captive Linnet at Lambley on August 24th, when, according to Police-Constable Clarke, he was using the bird as a decoy for catching others. It had a brace round its neck, causing a lacerated wound.—"I suppose I shall have to go to the Hall for this," said Shelton to the constable. "I would rather give you a sovereign than go."—The officer added that he watched the defendant for half an hour, during which time the man continually jerked the captive bird on a wire.

The defendant denied that he had been guilty of any cruelty, and alleged that the constable tortured the bird before killing it. He had the bird for two years, and got his living by it.—Shelton was fined 15s.

Under the White Rose.

BRADFORD City Show on Saturday last was the greatest success ever achieved in the district—671 entries in 33 classes, an average of over 20 per class. On the top of this came a splendid gate, the show-room being packed to its utmost during the better part of the time it was open. The Yorkshires came up well throughout the show, and the Norwich, with the exception of two classes, were also fairly strong in numbers. Last week I mentioned that the Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C. novice members had not upheld the classes made for them; but this week I really must apologise. The two classes at the City Show contained 53 entries, 22 in the cock class and 31 in the hen class, and of these no less than 36 were staged by members of the C.M. Club.

NOVICE classes were grand; some real good Yorkshires amongst them, and some very large classes, 35 in the yellows, 30 in the buffs, and 27 in the yellow hens. The winner in the latter class was claimed by two individuals at the catalogue price of £5 5s.

THIS time the wives and daughters of some of the members had a hand in the management, having sole charge of the catering department, an innovation that was warmly appreciated by fanciers and friends from a distance. To be able to get a good tea of beef, ham, and sweets, as much as you like for a "hoh," and in a room next to the birds, is something to be thankful for!

SEVERAL societies were holding members' shows on Saturday evening last, the birds being staged between seven and eight p.m. At Bingley a nice lot were placed before the judge, Mr. S. Dean (Gt. Horton), some very smart birds being on view. Laisterdyke and Tong were also included, the former having Mr. W. Mann to adjudicate, and the latter Mr. J. Wilkinson. The competition at both these societies is usually of a very keen order, some smart birds being put down in the race for the specials.

How to Promote Your Hobby.

"CAGE BIRDS,"

Oct. 30th, 1909.

Three coupons of the same date entitle you to a free advertisement of 12 words in our "Sale and Exchange." All coupons of this date to be sent in by 1st post Friday, Nov. 5th.

"SALE AND EXCHANGE" ADVERTISEMENTS FOR READERS WHO DISTRIBUTE TWO COPIES OF "CAGE BIRDS"

Novel Scheme to Benefit Our Readers and Ourselves.

Everyone at some time or another wants to sell some article for which he has no further use, or to exchange it for something he wants. Amongst the 50,000 other readers of "CAGE BIRDS" there must be some who are ready to buy from, or exchange with you.

To enable our readers to dispose of, purchase, or exchange various articles, we have decided to insert private advertisements free of charge for those who are willing to promote the circulation of "CAGE BIRDS." All you have to do is to get two extra copies of this week's issue, and give them to two friends who you know would be interested, tell them what your opinion of the paper is, and how much they too can benefit by the articles and advice contained in each issue. Send the coupon which appears on this page, from the two extra copies and your own—three coupons in all—together with the advertisement you want inserted. For three coupons sent bearing the same date, we will insert twelve words free of charge. Every additional word will be charged at ½d. per word. Not more than three coupons can be accepted for any single advertisement.

This plan benefits you by finding a market for anything you wish to dispose of, at a cost of only threepence, including postage, and benefits us by bringing "CAGE BIRDS" before new readers. We are helping you in return for your help towards the increase of our circulation.

If you have anything to Sell or Exchange fill in and post this Form, sending three coupons of the same date, for free insertion of twelve words, and stamps to cover additional words (½d. per word).

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

Coupon advertisers must have replies addressed direct to them and not to a box number at this office. Three coupons of the same date pay for twelve words. One halfpenny is charged for each additional word.

Not more than three coupons may be used for any single advertisement. Coupons cannot be accepted for Trade advertisements, the charge for these being 20 words for 1/-. The proprietor reserves the right to decline any advertisement that seems to him undesirable.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

I WANT YOU

to particularly notice the entirely unsolicited letters given below. These testimonials are from professional catchers who depend upon the appliances they use for their living, and consequently will have nothing but the very best obtainable. You will see what they say, so if I can please them so well, surely I can give you the same satisfaction. A glance at my prices will show that they are far lower than others, and to prove that goods are better, I invite you to have anything you like on approval and test it side by side with a similar article from elsewhere, and if mine is not by far the best, return it and I will refund every penny of your money. Could I afford to say this unless I knew what I was talking about? Clap nets, made from ½in. mesh, genuine thread netting, 3 yards long, 4/- pair, 4 yards long 5/-, 5 yards 6/-, 6 yards 7/-, 7 yards 8/-, 8 yards 9/-, 9 yards 10/- 10 yards 11/- per pair; all guaranteed 5½ft. deep and 4ft. dy; price includes two nets to the pair, pegs, poles, lines, etc., a l complete ready for immediate use. Sparrow nets, fitted on 15ft. bamboo poles, 5/6 pair, ditto 17ft. 6/-, ditto 19ft. 6/6 pair. Loose thread netting, same as used in all my clap nets, ½in. mesh, 7ft. deep, 3d. yard; ditto 9ft. deep, 4d. yard; ditto 12ft. deep, 5d. yard, post free. Lark netting, 1½in. mesh, 10ft. deep, 4d. yard, post free. This netting is specially made for bird netting, and must not be confused with the cheap American cotton fishing netting often sold as bird netting for sake of extra profit. Self-acting spring net traps, 18in. long, 9d. each; ditto, 24in. long, 18in. wide, 1/- each. These net traps are by far largest and best traps on the market, and will catch and hold any bird from Wren to Rook without injury. They can be baited for Hard or Softbills at same time, and call bird can be used inside them if required. The only trap of its kind on the market. (Imitators please copy as usual.) Single trap cages, 6d. each, double ditto 1/- each, treble ditto 1/3 each, all with separate compartment for call bird, in addition to the one, two, or three traps as stated. Round-topped call cages, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen; square-topped ditto, 4d. each, 3/- dozen. All with all-wire tops and wood bottoms. The real Japanese birdlime, guaranteed absolutely strongest made, ½lb. 6d., ¼lb. 10d.; 1lb. 1/6; sample 3d., all post free. Kindly note, mine is the genuine Japanese lime, not merely a copied name. I guarantee it to hold in all weathers, even in rain or frost, and will leave birds' feathers as clean as a whistle; will hold any Hawk or Rook that flies. Bird brace swivels, three 3d., twelve 6d., post free. Pull lines, specially spun from soft Italian hemp, without snarl or back twist, strong enough to pull a boat along. 68 yards long, 1/4 each, post free. Cheaper Russian hemp lines, 80 yards long, 1/- each post free. (These are not recommended for hard wear.) Hundreds upon hundreds of clap nets, Lark nets, Sparrow nets, Side nets, and everything else required by catchers kept in stock. Send stamp for full printed list, which also gives hints on net-making. "Gedney, Holbeach, Lincs. Oct. 4th. Sir,—20 yard pair clap nets to hand. They are exactly right. I tried them to-day and they worked lovely, even although there was a big wind blowing. Please send a 12 yard pair same width.—Yours, C. Cubley." On Oct. 11th Mr. Cubley again writes: "Sir,—I received 12 yard clap nets safely and am highly pleased with them. Many thanks for sending so promptly. They are made of very fine thread, almost invisible when set, and just what are required for catching.—Yours, C. Cubley." "72, Denmark-rd., Beccles. Oct. 15th. Sir,—Nets, etc., to hand. I am exceedingly pleased with them, as they are excellent quality for price paid. I received them in perfect condition.—Yours, H. Barber." "Garrion Gill, Pit Cottage, Overtown. Oct. 16th. Sir,—Please send 2lbs. birdlime. I got 1lb. from you last year and found it best in frosty weather.—Yours, R. Wyper." "Church-st., Garmouth. Oct. 12th. Sir,—Please send ½lb. lime. I had some last season, and it was splendid stuff.—Yours, A. Clarke." "Waulkmills-by-Arbroath. Oct. 12th. Sir,—Please send ½lb. lime. I got some last year from —, and it was just like syrup, it ran off the sticks. —Yours, J. Smart." "Redding, Polmont Station. Oct. 11th. Sir,—Please send following. I had a pair clap nets from you 2½ years ago, and they are as good as ever, and have been out in all kinds of weather, so I know who I am dealing with.—Yours, Alex Rennie." "15, Bourne-rd., Bromley Common. Oct. 9th. Sir,—Please send following. The 20 yards netting pleased me very well.—Yours, A. Knott." "Holbrook-rd., Belper. Oct. 10th. Sir,—Please send ½lb. lime. I had some last year and found it best I ever had.—Yours, T. Alton." "3, Hydney-st., Eastbourne. Oct. 8th. Sir,—Lime to hand; it is best I ever had. Please send pair 12 yards clap nets.—Yours, G. Hunt." "Byards Leap, Sleaford. Oct. 5th. Sir,—Received trap cage, net trap, and birdlime all safe, and am very pleased with them all. Thanks for quick dispatch.—Yours, G. Christian." "35, Higher Belleyue, Redruth. Oct. 4th. Sir,—Trap cages are giving me every satisfaction.—Yours, F. Faulkner." "Brinsley Moor, nr. Eastwood. Oct. 1st. Sir,—Received clap nets quite safe and am very well pleased with them. Please send following. —Yours, C. Hewes." "20, Vernon-st., Shirebrook. Oct. 1st. Sir,—Please send following. I received netting all right and am quite satisfied.—Yours, G. Goodwin." Please note that I have sent to Editor of CAGE BIRDS sixty unsolicited testimonials received by me during past few days for his inspection to prove their genuineness. These letters prove without shadow of doubt who is the best man to supply anything in fanciers or catchers' line. All nets sent out are properly "armed" or "geared," not merely line run through the netting, and I have a staff of fully competent workmen making up nets. These are men who thoroughly understand exactly what is required for successful catching, and nothing is spared in order to make my appliances most useful and durable on the market. I send all on approval, and cordially invite customers to put them to any test within reason, and if not in every way satisfactory, return them to me. Terms: Cash or CAGE BIRDS deposit system. Send stamp for full list. See British Bird and Roller Canary columns for further advts.

MEDICINES.

SPRAYING liquid used daily, week previous to shows, saves chills and soft moult, grand result, 8d. bottle, postage free. Tonic and condition medicine, 8d.—J. Beed, 24, Jockey-st., Swansea.

BRONCHORINE.

prevents, cures colds and wheezing in all cage birds, relieves asthma, ideal lung tonic, in moulting and breeding season, 7d. and 1/1; reg. 1506.—Dr. Rodgers, 123, Radford Boulevard, Nottingham. Read "Bronchorine is a splendid tonic and finest put on the market.—A. G. Hunt, 115t High-st., Blackwood, Mon., July 5th, 1909."

KELSO'S BRONCHOLIA.

Absolutely the safest, purest and most effective pulmonary remedy on the market. An infallible cure for asthma, bronchitis, coughs, colds, wheezing, hoarseness, loss of voice, and all bronchial and lung affections, in cage birds. The remarkable curative properties of this celebrated medicine have placed it in the highest esteem, amongst bird lovers. Used by leading fanciers all over the world, bottles, 7d. and 1/-, post free, with complete directions and special dietary.—Kelso and Co., 62, Western Hill, Durham.

is not a cure-all, neither is anything else, but it is what is claimed for it, namely, the most marvellous remedy for wheezing, and all lung affections ever known, and without any exaggeration whatever, thousands of testimonials have been received for this one remedy only. "Asthmarine" is 9d. (ninepence) per bottle; large bottles, 2/6 post free.

Rudd's Norwich Tonic Drops are the best pick-me-up and "Finisher" to plumage that has yet been discovered, prices same as Asthmarine. Inflammation remedy also same prices.

MANY WILL TAKE COLD!

Now the cold snap of weather has started, many birds will take cold. Is the following not sufficient to demonstrate beyond all doubt that Asthmarine will cure colds and asthma?—E. A. Langridge, Esq., Coal Merchant, of Badshot, Lea, writes on October 26th, 1909: "Please send large bottle of your celebrated Asthmarine, as I fine it the best I can get for Canaries with bad colds. Another—W. Woodhouse, Esq., writes on same date, October 26th, 1909: "Will you send me another bottle of your Asthmarine? The last one I had done my birds the world of good. Now for the Tonic Drops, still another writes on October 17th, 1909, from 12, Thirapia Road, Honor Oak:—Will you send me the 2/6 size bottle of Tonic Drops. As I had run out of this, I tried two or three other remedies that are in the market. But, absolutely, in my opinion, there is none like yours. It is simply marvellous! After two or three doses the birds are really better—not seemingly so.

BIRD WASH & BRUSHES.

The best and most effective wash in existence, post free, 1/6 per bottle. Brushes, 2d., 4d., 6d., postage 1d. extra. Every brush guaranteed genuine, and worth treble.

Hopkins, Bird Specialist, 11, Flyde-st., Preston, Lancashire.

Perhaps You Wonder

why I am at all times willing to send birds on approval at my own risk. The reason is this. My birds are correctly described in advt., and are well on seed and in perfect health and condition; therefore customers not only expect what they get, but get exactly what they expect. My system of trading is this: I send everything on approval at my own risk, either on receipt of cash or deposit system of CAGE BIRDS, and unless perfect satisfaction is given, birds have only to be returned and back comes the whole of your money. Could you imagine more straightforward terms than these? I have grand lot cock Goldfinches, in perfect health and condition, at 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 7/-, twelve 12/-; specially selected larger cocks to moult for show or Muling, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-; few extra special clean moulted cocks, in full colour and superb condition, fit for keen competition, 3/- each, three 7/6; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-, twelve 7/-. Grand lot cock Siskins, in perfect health and feather, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-; few selected yellow exhibition specimens, with full bibs, 3/- each; hen Siskins, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-. Splendid lot cock Bullfinches, in perfect health, 1/6 and 2/- each; exhibition specimens 2/6 each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- each; few extra large steady rich coloured hens, 1/6 each. Grand lot cock brown Linnets, everyone guaranteed to have nut brown backs and rose-red breasts, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially selected larger cocks for show, Muling, or contest, singing, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 3/6, twelve 6/-; scores of dozens of these Linnets sent every week to contest singers of Yorkshire, Lancashire, Durham, Northumberland, London, etc. Remember, I hold record for cheap contest winners, having supplied one for 4d. that won the cup in Yorkshire, beating, among others, a Leeds bird that cost nearly as many pounds as mine cost pence. Cock Chaffinches 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; exhibition specimens 1/- each; cock Greenfinches 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6, twelve 2/-; exhibition specimens, 1/- each. Redpolls, 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6, twelve 2/6; exhibition specimens, 1/- each. Splendid lot cock Skylarks, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 3/6; few specially selected birds, very steady and in song, 1/6, 2/-, and 2/6 each. Hand-reared cock Song Thrush, 2/6. Two-year-old cock Blackbird, splendid songster, 2/-. Goldfinch, Linnet, or Bullfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen. Lark runner cages, 6d., 8d., and 10d. each, 3/6, 4/6, and 7/- dozen. Dealers send stamp for wholesale cage list; price will astonish you. The following letters prove quality of birds sent out: "Water Works, Balfron Station. Sir,—Goldfinch arrived in pink of condition. Many thanks for despatching bird so quickly and such a good bird for money.—Yours, W. McAdam." "14, Temple-ter., Morriston. Sir,—Goldfinches arrived in pink or condition. They are a fine lot, and I am perfectly satisfied with my purchase.—Yours, T. Evans." "22, Union-ter., Clarence-st., York. Sir,—Goldfinches arrived safe, and am very much pleased with them. I am surprised at your turning out such nice birds so cheap as compared with other dealers.—Yours, H. Brough." "82, George-st., Whiteinch, Glasgow. Sir, —Linnets arrived in lovely condition and are the best Linnets I ever had sent. I have told all my friends to send to Gore for their birds. Please send me another dozen.—Yours, R. Rough." "12, Exeter-st., West Hartlepool. Oct. 15th. Sir,—Received Bullfinch and Goldfinch, and am very pleased with them. I have tried other dealers, but find yours are the best.—Yours, G. Robson." "5, Bellefield-ter., Ford Croft, St. Mary Cray, Oct. 16th. Sir,—Please send four Goldfinches as follows. I have spent 25/- on Goldfinches from other dealers this season, and only have one left, and that not worth 1/-. My cousin recommended me to you. He still has four left out of six he had from you three years ago, and two of those are prize winners.—Yours, F. Smith." "124, Southwoodside-rd., Glasgow. Oct. 13th. Sir,—Received birds in good order and am very pleased with them; they are good value. Our first deal being satisfactory, will lead to future business. For prompt attention and value for money you cannot be beaten, and deserve the confidence of all intending purchasers of birds.—Yours, R. J. Jago." "71, Amity Grove, Raynes Park. Oct. 13th. Sir,—Bullfinch arrived safe and am very pleased with it. Thanks for honest dealing; you set an example for others.—Yours, R. Chastney." "40, Brunel-st., Ferryhill, Co. Durham, October 9th. Sir,—Received Linnets all right. I never had better for the money in my life. I was told you was an honest and upright man, and I am thankful to say you are. Please send another dozen cocks.—Yours, Frederick Curry." "48, Church-st., Seaham Harbour. Oct. 7th. Sir,—Linnets arrived in first-class health and condition. Many thanks for promptitude.—Yours, G. Craggs." "Broughton, Stokesley, Oct. 5th. Sir,—Received birds quite safe and am well pleased with both. The Linnet is a good call bird and knows his work. I am pleased to get hold of a straightforward man at last, having been taken down so much.—Yours, A. Jackson." "29, Handel-st., Halifax. Oct. 9th. Sir, —Received Lark safe and he is a grand bird. I am very proud of my two birds. No one need be afraid to send to you for birds; they will get what they pay for—good value for money. If all were like you we should want no approval with our birds.—Yours, B. Holmes." As some people may be doubtful of the genuineness of these letters, I have sent 60 unsolicited testimonials, including the above, all bearing Government postmarks, to Editor of CAGE BIRDS for his inspection, and will give £10 to anyone that can prove that any letter I publish is not genuine and entirely unsolicited. See Appliance column and also Roller Canary column for further statements of facts.

MATTHEWS SAYS, "STOP HERE!"
The Working Man's Friend.

Gentlemen, why I keep sending prize winners out every day is because I have the largest stock in the world to select from; this is well known by all the leading exhibitors, contest singers, and Mule breeders, also the finest aviaries. Mine are not old hencotes, same as most backyard dealers when you come to inspect them. Over 2,000 birds to select from. Not picked out of a dozen; also refreshments and teas provided at any hour for all clients; so don't be gulled by so-called specialists; send to the largest bird dealer in the world; all at working men's prices; Linnets, Linnets, Linnets, ready for show bench; real giants, well pencilled, good ground colour, Norwich type; real gems, same sort of Linnets that won 1st prizes all over England, which I have sent out, only 2/-; few extra specials 2/6; Linnets for contest singing in full song, taught under my well known Cheshire champions, 1/6 each, a few extra specials ready to win contest, 2/6 each, with book of instruction and new polished singing cage; packet of extra special seed 3/6. I can dispose of a few catching Linnets, all well worked, used to nets, in full song, real stoppers, 2/- and 2/6 each; Goldfinches, Goldfinches, real English Peartree Goldfinches, over 500 in stock, all netted from the Cheshire fruit gardens, not foreign rubbish; few large giants, with good broad square blazes, well tanned on breast, extra well buttoned, long Yorkshire type, ready to win in keen competition, 2/6; a few large giants extra special, 3/-; a few Goldfinches, in full song, used to the nets, suit catchers, 2/6 each, real bargains. Yellow Giant Greenfinches, like Canaries, 1/- each; large Yellowhammers, 1/-; massive large Redpolls, sure winners, 1/-; over 500 splendid nestling Larks, all in full song, finger tame, 1/6 each, also 200 house-moulted Larks in full song, 2/- each; over 80 hand-reared young ones, will peck from hand, finger-tame, and in full song, ready to win any singing contest, taught under the champion Larks of Cheshire, 3/-; or any other kind of British birds you require. Please write for Softbills or Hardbills; singing contest clubs and aviaries supplied by return of post. Ladies and gentlemen, all I send out are on 7 days' approval, cash, or deposit with "Cage Birds." Read what others say. From Mr. Smallwood, Newcastle-rd., Staffs.—Sir,—I got the Linnets safe; thanks for sending me such grand birds. From Mr. Moscrop, 23, Walton-st., Gateshead. Sir,—Got your special Goldfinches safe; they are real gems, splendid blazes, and also large giants, as steady as rocks; thanks for the way you have treated me. From Mr. Hoare, Gilfordgoch, Bridgend. Sir,—I got Goldfinch and Linnets safe; am highly pleased with them; I don't think any approval is required with your special bird; you will have all my orders for future. From Mr. Bergeman, Abbotswood, Buxted, Sussex. Sir,—Here I am again. Send me 3 special Goldfinches at once, the Linnets and Goldfinches I got from you are champions; I never had a better lot in my life; we shall send for all we want to you; wishing you every success which you honestly deserve. From Mr. Jeffrey, 17, Norfolk-st., Swansea. Sir,—The 6 birds arrived safe; you are a champion; all extra value for my money; send me on the following at once; perfectly satisfied. So, gentlemen, send at once to Matthews, Bird Specialist, and Judge, 24, Avenue-st., Aviaries, Portwood Stockport, Cheshire.

PARKER & WILDEN, BIRD MERCHANTS, SPRING HILL, BIRMINGHAM.

THE ORIGINAL BRITISH KING.

For nearly 16 months not a single bird has been returned to me; for proof, the Editor of this paper. Am I a judge, or not? I will leave it to yourselves. If you want ten, twenty or thirty pounds' worth of British, send to me. Goldfinches, Goldfinches. Real English Peartree cock Goldfinches, the largest in England, with grand broad heads and beautiful square cut scarlet blaze, with splendid wing bars and richly tanned on breasts, and beautifully buttoned, a credit to send out, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6; a few that can win in keen competition, 5/-; Goldfinches, used to catching, both for netting and liming, 3/- each; Goldfinches, singing very hard and showing splendid colour, 2/- and 2/6; exhibition British show cage, with one of my best Goldfinches, 6/6. My cages are a treat, with my A1 special Linnets, 4/6; ready for the show bench at once. Linuets, Linnets; my A1 specials can beat the world for steadiness, size, colour, and markings, for three years this class of bird have won all before them, price 2/6; Linnets, singing grand, with a beautiful polished cage, and my book of secrets, and a packet of my special mixture, 3/6; worth double. Look; fierce singing cock Linnets, with blood-red breasts and extra loud voices, with cage and my book of secrets, right for catching or contest singing, only 2/6; Linnets, taught by the champion Linnet of the world, will sing anywhere, only 1/6; a few specials, 2/-; Linnets, from the same place as the world's champion, only 1/-; the same as I have supplied most of the leading Linnet clubs of England. I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. Deposit your money with the Editor of this paper for honest stuff; all on seven days approval. House-moulted Linnets, singing with their wings down, 10/6 to 15/6. Look; the finest cock Larks in England, singing day and gaslight, and as straight as arrows, and as steady as rocks, 1/- and 1/6; a few singing extra loud, 2/6; exhibition British show cages, 2/- each; polished singing contest cages, 1/6 each. The best Linnet whistlers in England, 6d. each. My book of secrets, 9d., which is the original. For proof of the above read what others say:—"Westgate, Cleckheaton, Yorks.—Dear Sir,—Bird arrived safe, and am highly satisfied. I have not written sooner, as I have had so many from other dealers that have looked alright the first day and then died; but I have given this a fair trial, and I can safely say that this is the finest bird I have had for the money. You can rest assured that all further orders will be placed with you with confidence.—L. Whitely to H. Allen." "50, Ashville-terrace, Morton, Manchester.—Dear Sir,—I received the Linnet and Goldfinch quite safe, and am very pleased with them.—Yours, A. Coupe to H. Allen." So those who want real honest value for their money send to me. All my birds are on seven days approval; cash or deposit. So write with confidence to the largest British bird dealer in the world.—Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

No other comment needed, this is proof of the quality of stock I keep. Grand value in single birds, 7/6 to 20/-; pairs, 15/- to 40/-. Prices of show birds on application; approval.—6, Banner Street, St. Luke's, London (near Old Street Electric Station).

S. FOSTER,

Winner of Dulwich £15 15s. Challenge Cup, 1909; won nine 1sts and six specials at recent Dulwich Show (see report). Owing to business wanting my personal attention, am removing to Hampstead, and shall have to clear immediately all my winning Norwich. I recently bought all Mr. Woolbouse's birds. All the birds I've got are for sale now, from 15/- to 30/- each, together with show and breeding cages, etc., in splendid condition; approval, deposit, or seen by appointment. No dealers. A fine chance for novice wanting winning birds.—"Thelma," Howberry Road, Thornton Heath.

J. C. BARNES,

NORWICH AND YORKSHIRE SPECIALIST,

149, Dunscombe-st., Walkley, Sheffield, winner of numerous cups, medals, etc., including Sheffield challenge cup outright (three years in succession). Having had most successful breeding season, have some grand specimens of both varieties to spare. Show or stock. Every bird guaranteed my own breeding. Price reasonable. State requirements, and I will ensure entire satisfaction. Inspection cordially invited. One of the finest private collections in England; over 300 birds to select from. True to type; full of quality and colour. Three days approval with every pleasure.

Winning Norwich.

I have some grand specimens ready for immediate exhibition, direct from our noted Crystal Palace King and Queen strain, finest blood in the world, winner of 5,000 prizes. Grand yellow cocks and hens from 10/-, 12/-, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/- each; buff cocks and hens, 8/-, 10/-, 12/-, 15/-, 20/-, 30/- each; any on approval with pleasure; send for catalogue of winning testimonials from birds I have supplied. Breeder 30 years.

SANDIFORD, Canary Breeder and Judge, Preston, Lancs.

Let me send on approval! I pay carriage back.

Why Pay Pounds

For so-called strains, when I sell you birds for what they are worth on the perch. If you want a show bird at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, or 40/-, send to me for one on approval, and send elsewhere; then make a comparison. That is the test I solicit.

A REALLY GRAND COLLECTION NOW READY TO SEND OUT.

A few prices are given as follows, and you are respectfully invited to select from the Canary Market of the World, and save all intermediate profits, by purchasing direct, and from a person using his proper name, and not posing as a female. Cocks at 4/6, 5/6, 6/6, 7/0 and 10/- upwards; hens, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6 each; pairs, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6.

NOTE.—All amateurs should try my Special Matched Pairs of Prize-bred Norwich Plainheads at 10/6, 12/6, 15/- and 20/-; Crested ditto, 15/-, 20/-, 25/- and 30/-; Yorkshires, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-; Border Fancies, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-. These are the best value ever offered.

Travelling Cages in all cases, 3d. extra.

are this season better than ever, which is saying a great deal, seeing the large number of prizes these Rollers have won of late years, and the hundreds of testimonials we have received for their excellence of song. Many and varied changes with their long runs, and real musical notes. The price is still the same to all, 15/- each, and they cannot be beat at double the money.

We send them on 14 day's trial at Our Risk.

DEPOSIT YOUR MONEY WITH EDITOR, and don't buy Rollers on any other terms from anyone, then you can't be imposed on. Real St. Andresberg Schoolmasters are only 10/6 and 12/6 each; Hartz Mountain cock Canaries, in full song, 4/6 and 5/6 each, all on approval. Send for catalogue, post free. We have been patronised by Royalty.

Northern Aviaries, Ormskirk Road, Preston.

when reading my advertisement last week, in which I said I frequently received letters from customers saying that my Leipzig Rollers were better birds than those that cost twice and even three times more money from elsewhere, would probably think I was drawing the long-bow, but among the testimonials given below is one that almost repeats my words. For years past I have said that nowhere else can be had the same value at the price I offer, and to prove this I ask all intending purchasers of a Roller to have one from me on a week's trial, and one from elsewhere at any higher price on same terms. Test them side by side for a week and keep the one that suits best. I shall be quite satisfied with result. I have a grand stock of the genuine Leipzig Rollers, all in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, water bubble runs, soft roulades, bollow bell rolls, piccolo trils, jug-jug of Nightingale, harp gong and flute notes, etc., etc., guaranteed quite free from any harsh or chopping notes whatever. Price 6/- and 7/- each. I also have a splendid lot of loud-singing Hartz cocks in full, free, vigorous song, all real ceiling lifters, at 4/6 each, seven 28/-. All birds properly packed free of extra charge and sent on full week's trial at my risk on receipt of casb or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, and if fullest satisfaction not given, money is promptly and cheerfully refunded in full. Now, please notice dates of following: "51, York-st., London. October 24th. Sir,—Many tbanks for Canaries safely received and am very pleased with them.—Yours, T. Hollins." "Milber House, Highwcek, Newton Abbot, October 23rd. Sir,—Many thanks for Leipzig Roller received on Thursday. It is a beauty. I have had many at higher prices from other dealers, and can say yours beats them all for purity of song. The Linnet I had from you is singing splendidly. I bope to get you many more orders.—Yours, W. Harris." "64, Hafod-y-coed, Llanbilleth. October 23rd. Sir,—Received Leipzig Roller in pink of condition, and a gem he is. Thanks for your promptness. As soon as he was on table and unpacked he started his music.—Yours, A. Morgan." "Inveresk, Bournemouth. Oct. 22nd. Sir,—Birds arrived quite safe and I am very pleased with them. —Yours, F. Bartlett." "11, Wade-avenue, Larklands, Ilkestone. Oct. 22nd. Sir,—Roller to hand; tbanks for your selection he gives very satisfaction. I shall send for another shortly.—Yours, E. Aldred." "13, Brandwood-street, Daubhill. Oct. 25th. Sir,—Received Roller on Friday, and is giving every satisfaction. Thanking you for selecting me so good a bird. I shall most certainly deal with you again.—Yours, Tom Speakman." "140, High-st., Newry, Ireland. Oct. 23rd. Sir,—Received Canaries on 22nd, and must say that such value for money I never saw. They were in pink of condition, so please keep two more like them for next week. I must congratulate you on your splendid way of packing birds.—Yours, P. O'Reilly." "London-road, Alderley Edge. Oct. 23rd. Sir,—Roller arrived safe on Thursday and sang before it was unpacked. It is a good bird, and I am most satisfied with same. I have had several Rollers from you before and always found them good ones, and can recommend anyone wanting a good Roller to send to you. Thanking you for sending such a good bird.—Yours, G. Birkin." The above testimonials, with hundreds of others, open to inspection at any time. Don't forget, full week's trial allowed and all your money back if not fully satisfied. See British Bird and also Appliance column for further adverts.

and the value cannot be equalled elsewhere either in Show or Stock Birds.

And, knowing what I have, and my great desire to give such value as is next to impossible to be obtained elsewhere, is the reason of the unbounded satisfaction given year after year; and the fact that I have received more testimonials than any man living. I have also published more than any person or firm in existence. I know also that price is a great object to many; but a high quality and a low price is still a greater consideration to the purchasing public. Note the following prices and make a comparison of these prices; but, above all I want a comparison of birds, to test the full value. Some good show birds at specially low prices; also in the stock are cinnamons, cinnamon marked, and greens.

YORKSHIRES.—Cocks, 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 7s. 6d. 8s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 15s., 20s. Pairs matched for Breeding, 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 9s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 12s. 6d., 15s., 20s., 30s. Hens, 2s. 3d., 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d. Travelling Cages, 3d. extra.

1st & Special 2nd & V.H.C.

Read the following testimonial, which is only one out of many recently received and filed:—"Lesbury, October 18th, 1909. I won 1st and special with the yellow Yorkshire cock in the open class at Alnwick, and v.h.c. for the hen I got from you to breed off. I went to Morpeth and got 2nd with the cock in the open class. He beat some very good birds at Alnwick, as you will see from report in CAGE BIRDS. I shall recommend you down this way for the way you have dealt with me. J. T. Moffitt to Joe Thomas."

The above needs no comment. If you want good birds, the right man to send to is Thomas, who makes a point of personally selecting each bird, and of sending the highest possible quality at very reasonable rates. (See winnings week by week). Grand exhibition specimens, ready for the bench, now in stock. Write, stating wants. Grand birds, that can win at members' shows, both Yorkshires and Norwich, at 10/-, 12/-, 15/-, 17/6, and 20/-. SAMUEL DEAN.

A FOUR DAYS' OUTING.

At 4 shows in 4 days, October 21 and 23, with 20 entries, have won the following prizes in keenest competition in Yorkshire classes:—Hanley, 6 entries, 4 seconds, two hc; Shipley, 4 entries, three specials, three firsts, one second; Burton-on-Trent, 4 entries, two seconds, two thirds; Middlesboro', 6 entries, one first, one second, two vhc, one c, one nothing. Totals three specials, four firsts, eight seconds, two thirds, two vhc, two hc, one c, one nothing. Every bird but one has been bred in our up-to-date rooms. We can thus offer you some of the very best quality which is possible for any fanciers to offer. Our reputation is not of mushroom growth, as we have jointly 50 years' experience in the Fancy, with a good name for fair treatment to all our clients. No matter whether your order is a singing bird, show, or stock bird, or a 100 pair order, you can rely on having every consideration and honest treatment. Our stock comprises clears, green and cinnamon-marked birds; in fact all varieties of Yorkshires. Our show record extends over a period of 20 years, and we have won specials and first prizes at all the leading shows, including highest honours at Crystal Palace. We are in a unique position for supplying show specimens, either for open competitions, novice or members' shows, at reasonable prices. Our birds are now in the pink of condition, feathered like pot or wax, long, stylish, and upstanding. If you find prices under ours elsewhere, you will find the quality is below ours also. Yellow or buff cocks at 6/-, 7/-, 8/-, 9/-, 10/6, 12/-, 15/-, 20/-, and upwards. Yellow or buff hens at 5/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, and upwards, all of good length and in romping condition. All birds sent on 3 clear days' approval at our sole risk. Deposit with Editor, or P.O.O. Remember we cannot afford to lose so long a reputation for the sake of a sale or two. We have been here a long time, and are hoping to be here longer still. So place your orders with us, or pay us a visit. Our aviaries are at 108 and 148, Bolton Hall-rd., Bolton Woods, Bradford, and 22, Clare-st., Shipley.—Send stamp and your requirements to

HALLIDAY & CHITTENDEN.

DYKES' Yorkshires.

Nine 1sts, Seven 2nds, Four 3rds, Four 4ths, etc.

It is needless for me to give you any better proof of the quality of my Yorkshires, which have won, in addition to the above, during the last two weeks, at Burton, Hanley, Coventry, Longton and Peterborough, three specials for best Yorkshire, and four other specials, etc., and is without doubt second to none. If you want to win, or stock birds with plenty of length, and right type, etc., to breed own winners, send your orders to the old reliable breeder, exhibitor and judge, who breeds his own winners, and can therefore give you the best satisfaction.

Long, slim, yellow cocks, at 6/-, 7/-, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-; buff cocks, at 5/-, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/- each; specially selected, unrelated pairs at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- per pair; long, slim, racy hens, all colours, at 3/6, 4/6, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; travelling cages 3d. extra.

Few that have won in keen competition at reasonable prices, or others that can win at members' shows, all guaranteed cold-room bred and kept, and trained ready for immediate exhibition, and all cocks on full song, and 7 inches long, and remember I send all on seven days' approval, at my risk, either for cash or deposit with Editor. State wants, or come and judge for yourself, as I shall be only too pleased to show you my stock at any time. Illustrated price list, containing scores of winning testimonials, post free; and remember, more winners bred and sold by me during the few years than any other advertiser. Only address—is exceptionally good, my stock is large, varied and choice. I have no room for mongrel specimens, neither do I keep a team of birds for exhibition to enable me to advertise recent winnings. I prefer to let my clients do the winning, and for this reason I would emphasise the fact that every bird in my stock is for sale. I keep none in the background. I would remind clients that my aviaries are the most modern in the country, and contain no artificial heat, and are lighted throughout by electricity. Customers, therefore, can rest assured that only healthy, hardy, and robust specimens are sent out. Inspection invited. Splendid value.

The Value I Offer You

Typical Yorkshires.

All of correct type and quality, including grand young cocks that can win at local or members' shows, at 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, and 25/-; buff and yellow Yorkshire cocks, for breeding or song, at 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, and 15/-; hens, 2/-, 3/-, 4/-, 6/- and 7/6 each; matched pairs, to breed winners, at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/- and 21/-. Splendid value in Plainhead Norwich, at same prices as Yorkshires; also Crests, and Crest-Bred, Cinnamons, Lancashires, and Lizards.

Constant arrivals direct from the breeders of the genuine Seifert Rollers: cocks, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-. Remember, full week's approval, and satisfaction guaranteed. Travelling boxes, 3d. extra.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.
